THE DAILY EMPIRE.

H. H. ROBINSON,
PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.

Dayton, Ohio,

Monday, - - - December 11, 1865.

A FAMILY ADVENTURE.

"I never attended but one temperance lecture," said our friend B——, with a peculiar smile, "and I don't think I shall ever attempt another."

"You probably found it dry?"

"Well, yes, but that isn't it. The lecture was well enough, but I got into such a scrape after it was over, that I never think of temperance without a shudder. I'll tell you all about it.

"It was in N——, where I was somewhat of a stranger, and the night was one of the worst of the season. Boreas! how it blew. It was enough to take one's breath away. Well, the lecture was over, and making my way through the crowd, I lingered in the doorway contemplating the awful scene, when somebody suddenly thrust an arm within my own, and clung to me with a bear-like hug."

"Where have you been," said the sweetest voice in the world; "I have been looking for you everywhere."

Very much to my surprise, I turned and saw—but I can't describe her. It makes me sad to think how prodigiously pretty she was. With her left hand she leaned on my arm, while with her right she was arranging her veil, and did not notice my surprise.

"You have been looking for me?"

"Yes, and now let's be going," was her reply, pressing my arm.

A thrill went to my heart. What to make of my lady's address I did not know—but to accompany her. We started off in the tempest, the noise of which prevented any conversation. At length she said with a scream:

"Put your arm around me, or I shall blow away."

I need not describe to you my sensation as I pressed her to my side and hurried on. It was very dark; nobody saw us; and, allowing her to guide my steps, I followed her motions through two or three short streets, until she stopped before an elegant mansion.

"Have you your key?" she asked.

"My key!" I stammered, "there must be some mistake."

As she opened the door, I stood ready to bid her good night, or to have some explanation, when, turning quickly, she said: "How queer you act to-night—ain't you coming in?"

There was something very tempting in the suggestion. Was I going in? A warm house and a pretty woman were certainly objects of consideration, and it was dreary to think of facing the driving storm, and seeing her no more. It took me three quarters of a second to make up my mind—and in I went.

There was a dim light in the hall, and as my guide ran rapidly up stairs, why I could do no better than run up too. I followed her into a very dark room.

"Lock the door, John, she said.

Now, as if I were the only John in the world, I thought she knew me. I felt for the key; turned it in the lock without hesitation, wondering at the same time what was coming next. Then an awful suspicion of some horrid trick flashed upon my mind; I had often heard of infatuated men being lured to their destruction by pretty women, and I was on the eve of opening the door when my lady struck a light. Then to my dismay, I discovered I was in a bed-room alone with a strange woman. I said something; I don't know what it was; but the lady lighted a lamp, looked, stared at me an instant, turned as white as a pillow-case, and screamed:

"Who are you? How came you here? Go, quickly; leave the room; I thought you were my husband;" and covering her face with her hands she sobbed hysterically.

I was nearly petrified. Of course I was as anxious to leave, as she was to have me; but in my confusion, instead of going out at the door I came in at, I walked into a closet, and before I could rectify my error there came a thundering at the hall door.

The lady's real husband had come, and she flew to let him in. Well aware that it would be of no use to try to get out of the house by another way than that in which I had entered, and convinced of the danger of meeting the man, who might fall into the vulgar wickedness of being jealous, I was trying to collect my scattered senses, in the darkness, when the wrathful husband burst into the room followed by madam. The light was extinguished, and while she was searching for a friction match, the gruff voice raved and stormed, jealous and revengeful.

"I know he is here. I saw him come in the house with you! You locked the door. I'll have his heart out—where is he?"

"Hear me! Hear me! I will explain," said the lady.

I was listening to hear the explanation when the husband walked plump against me, and at the same moment the light appeared. "Well, B——," we cried, deeply interested, for we knew that every word of his wife was true, "how did you get out of the house?"

"I used a violent remedy for so violent a complaint. Driven into the corner—my life in danger—perceiving at a glance that the lady was not so strong as I was, I threw herself upon him, fell with him, and held him there until I had given him a full, explicit view of the error, made him hear me, and tamed him to be gentle as a lamb. When I left, rather unceremoniously, and I have never seen Othello or Desdemona since."

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING IN MOBILE.—A Mobile letter to the Memphis Bulletin says:

"A wedding in high life occurred a few miles from this city yesterday. John S. Triplett, Esq., formerly of St. Louis, but more recently of Memphis, and now of Mobile, was united in wedlock to Miss Bertha Steine, of this city. The bride's father is a very wealthy old gentleman, formerly of Nashville, Tennessee, and among his possessions is the Mobile waterworks, which affords him an income of about $100,000 per annum."

General Washington's Last Vote.

I was present when General Washington gave his last vote. It was in the spring of 1798, in the town of Alexandria. He died the 14th of December following. The court-house of Fairfax county was then over the market-house, and immediately fronting Gadsby's tavern. The entrance into it was by a straight flight of crazy steps on the outside. The election was progressing—several thousand persons in the court-house yard and immediate neighboring streets, and I was standing on Gadsby's steps when the Father of his Country drove up and immediately approached the court-house steps; and when within a yard or two of them, I saw eight or ten goodlooking men from different directions, certainly without the least concert, spring simultaneously, and place themselves in positions to uphold and support the steps should they fall in the General's ascent of them.

I was immediately at his back, and in that position entered the court room following in his wake, through a dense crowd to the polls—heard him vote—returned with him to the outward crowd—heard him cheered by more than two thousand persons as he entered his carriage, and saw his departure. There were five or six candidates on the bench, sitting, and as the General approached them they arose in a body and bowed smiling; and the salutation having been returned gracefully, the General immediately cast his eye toward the registry of the polls, when Colonel Dencale (I think it was said), "Well General, how do you vote?" The General looked at the candidates and said: "Gentlemen, I vote for measures, not for men;"—and turning to the recording table audibly pronounced his vote, saw it entered, made a graceful bow and retired.

A Warning to Young Men.

(From the Jackson (Michigan) Citizen.)

A young man in this city has been in the habit of visiting the residence of a widow lady, who,

"Take Jeptha, Judge in Israel,
Had a daughter, passing fair."

The young man was assiduous in his attentions, and was a constant visitor. This notice awoke in the young lady's heart the tender passions, and in her dreams she imagined she should become the wife of her Adonis. Matters kept on in the same old way. The young man continued his marked attentions, and people began to whisper among themselves; "A match sure!" while knowing ones, with a solemn toss of the head, would remark, "What did I tell you?"

The young man went out to his supposed charmer's house the other evening for the purpose of taking tea. During the meal the mother asked, "When are you and —— to be married?" The young man leaned back in his chair and coolly remarked that he had no idea of marrying anybody, and that he and the daughter were nothing but friends. He said he supposed she understood it so all the time. The young lady said not a word, but rose up, seized the teapot, which was filled with hot tea, took off the lid and threw its boiling contents into his face, scalding him severely and leaving an ugly scar. She then furiously ordered him to quit her sight.

Verdicts Against Negro Suffrage.

The Republicans decline to obey the Scripture injunction: "Cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye;" or that other golden rule, to do to others as we would have them do to us. They refuse to grant the right of suffrage to negroes in their own States, while peremptorily and persistently demanding that the negroes in the Southern States shall be invested with that right. In no case where the question has been submitted to the people of a Northern State, has it been decided in favor of the negro; and yet in every case where it has been tried, the Republicans are in the ascendency. In Connecticut, with a Republican majority of 10,000 or 12,000, negro suffrage was voted down by over 6,000.

In Wisconsin, where the Republican ticket was chosen by 7,000 or 8,000, negro suffrage was rejected by 8,000 or 10,000. In Minnesota, where the Republicans carried everything "with money in it," negro suffrage was overwhelmingly rejected. In Colorado, where they boast of having carried their whole ticket, but one vote in ten was given in favor of "justice to the negro!" These States are all "loyal," and the Republican voters therein clamorously insist upon negro suffrage in the Southern States—that those States shall not be restored to the Union until the right of suffrage has been granted to the ignorant, degraded, depraved negroes there. * * * *

"Loyalty to the negro" down South, not here at home, is the motto, because by such "loyalty" they can accomplish political objects without contaminating themselves by actual association with the negro. But when negro equality, political and social, is brought home to themselves as a practical matter, they spurn the idea of it, and unhesitatingly reject it. They do, just as the Southern people have the right to do—decide the question for themselves; but in rejecting negro suffrage, the Southern people are consistent and honest, while Abolitionists in so doing act dishonestly. That's the difference.—N. H. Patriot.

FIVE DAUGHTERS.—A gentleman had five daughters, all of whom he brought up to some respectable occupation in life. These daughters married, one after another, with the consent of their father. The first married a gentleman by the name of Poor, the second a Mr. Little, the third a Mr. Short, the fourth a Mr. Brown, and the fifth a Mr. Hogg. At the wedding of the latter, her sisters with their husbands were present. After the ceremonies of the wedding were over, the old gentleman said to his guests:

"I have taken great pains to educate my daughters, that they might act well their part in life, and from their advantages and improvements, I fondly hoped that they would do honor to the family; and now I find that all my pains, cares and expectations have turned out to nothing but a poor, little, short, brown, hogg."

Blessed is the man who giveth many and costly presents to young ladies, for great shall be his reward—in a horn.

The men who flatter women do not know them sufficiently, and the men who only abuse them do not know them at all.
