BIG MEN IN CONSPIRACY TO SINK SHIPS ARE TRACED

across the river. The neutrality squad of cautious detectives held them up occasionally but never found anything suspicious in their possession.

Fay bought large quantities of chlorate of potash. There was difficulty in getting this. Sulphuric acid can be had anywhere. The fire bombs which failed to work and were found on ships carrying war supplies to the allies were made of chlorate of potash and sulphuric acid. The acid was in a bottle stopped with a rubber cork. When the acid ate through the cork and leaked into the potash a furious fire was started.

VESSELS ON WHICH BOMBS WERE PLACED WHILE HERE.

Among the ships set on fire by the organization working in Hoboken and along the Hudson River piers in New York was the Minnehaha of the Atlantic Transport line, which developed a big blaze off Halifax on July 7, last. It spread through Hold No. 3 and Hold No. 4 before it was extinguished with steam. No trace of the bomb could be found. It is characteristic of the bomb made with chlorate of potash and sulphuric acid that the flames always consume the contents in the last splinter.

The Fabre liner Rhein Anne, bound from New York for Marseilles with 1,700 passengers, caught fire on Sept. 18 when 1,000 miles off Halifax. By wireless orders from her owners she put in at the Azores, where the fire was put out. There was no track of the bomb.

The Greek steamer Athinai, from New York for the Piraeus, caught fire at sea on Sept. 8, and was abandoned by her crew. The captain was certain the flames were of incendiary origin.

The British ship Craigside was loading with sugar at the foot of West Twenty-third Street, New York, when an explosion was heard in her hold, followed by a gush of fierce flames. It did $125,000 damage before it was extinguished. No trace of a bomb could be found.

Other ships on which bombs were found were the Devon City, the Lord Ern, April 29; the Cressington Court, April 29; the Lord Downshire, May 1; the Kirkoswald, May 2; the Strathtay, May 8, and the Bankdale, May 8.

Seven men, five of them Germans, were arrested on Aug. 28 charged with being concerned with these fires and attempts to fire ships. They are still in the Tombs awaiting trial.

Louis Jersawitz, counsel for Fay, [illegible]

[illegible] the detectives worked in the rendezvous districts of Hoboken, Weehawken, Newark and Jersey City. The water fronts of several Jersey towns were thoroughly searched. Whatever the intention of the sleuths it seemed to have been definitely mapped out in advance.

Several made a Hoboken hotel their headquarters and received reports from others who were using a touring car. Two men were captured last night in the hotel and questioned for a long time, but finally were permitted to go.

It is rumored that four or five arrests are to be made which may provide the corroborative links sought by the Government in preparing its case.

Max Breitung, under $25,000 bail as one of the bomb conspirators, and nephew and close associate of Edward N. Breitung, banker, miner and shipowner, called to-day on his counsel, John E. Stanchfield. They were in conference for an hour, and then Mr. Stanchfield declared that he had nothing to say.

Miners Keep Mitchell Day.

HAZLETON, Pa., Oct. 29.—This was Mitchell Day throughout the anthracite field of Pennsylvania in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of the termination of the big strike of 1900, the first conducted in the hard coal belt by John Mitchell, then National President of the United Mine Workers of America. In accordance with proclamations issued by their district officials, all men, with the exception of engineers, pump runners and firemen, remained idle.
