THE NEW PLAYS

"The Cinderella Man" Altogether Charming Comedy.

BY CHARLES DARNTON

YOU'RE not the least bit sentimental, are you? No, of course you—are. We all are, especially when we go to theatre. But it is sentiment, rather than sentimentality, that Edward Childs Carpenter has put into "The Cinderella Man," the altogether charming comedy at the Hudson Theatre.

Frankly, I feel like apologizing to the author for "discovering" this delightful play on its third, instead of its first, night in town.

With such cut-and-dried nonsense as "Bunny" out of the way, "The Cinderella Man" should stay at the Hudson until nights are so warm that a gas stove will seem unnecessary, for here is a play of romance and youth that is better than "Daddy Long-Legs." In fact, it is the best romantic play of years. First of all, it is beautifully written. Mr. Carpenter leaves no room for doubt as to his fineness of mind and heart. He has brought to his work a touch of delicacy and tenderness, together with whimsical humor, quite out of the ordinary. Moreover, the acting is as good as the play itself, and Oliver Morosco's production is a decided credit to the American stage. The play has been staged by Robert Milton with the hand of an artist.

There is something familiar, to be sure, about the poet who almost starves in a garret. But Mr. Carpenter has given a new twist to an old figure by making his hero a cheerful human being, intent upon his work of writing an opera libretto for which a $10,000 prize has been offered, yet at the same time never quite giving way to the woes that are supposed to oppress genius. It is in this respect that "The Cinderella Man" differs strikingly from other mawkish plays of the same ilk. It is imaginative without being hopelessly impossible, even though the rich girl who lives next door does come over the roof to the attic of the youth who has been big enough to turn his back upon promising commercial prospects and is more than content to apply himself to the kind of work he feels he can do. The story is as simple as a fairy tale. But you follow it with warm interest as the lonely rich girl makes her way across the snow-covered roof to bring Christmas cheer to the half-starved scribbler. She brings not only food and wreaths, but, if you please, a pink counterpane for the bed of shivering genius. The really nice thing about her is that she places no value on riches. As a matter of fact, she complains that she is "horribly rich" and begs her father to disinherit her so that she may be free to marry the poor writer who is man enough to despise a wealthy alliance. The truth is, she passes herself off as the humble companion of the rich girl who lives in the house next door. Even the grouchy father who makes railroads his hobby develops human traits in the last act, so that everything ends happily, with the writer winning the $10,000 prize and the priceless girl.

Phoebe Foster is so pretty and charming as the fairy god-mother that in her one sees a girl worth winning. With all her plumpness Miss Foster has much the same appeal as little Patricia Collinge. Though a bit self-conscious at first, Shelley Hull manages in the end to be both sincere and engaging as the light-hearted writer. A particularly good bit of acting is done by Frank Bacon as the threadbare old servant who remains loyal to the "young gentleman" in the attic. Then there is Lucille La Verne, a terrifying apparition as the Great She-Bear—in other words, the unsympathetic landlady. Another excellent performance is contributed by Charles Lane, as the middle-aged friend through whose kindly offices youth's romance is made possible. In the role of a composer Hubert Wilke recalls his earlier days in comic opera when he sits at the piano and sings a pretty little song charmingly.

In short, "The Cinderella Man" is a delightful play delightfully acted. If you love youth and romance—and who doesn't?—don't miss it.

JUST A WOMAN

By EUGENE WALTER.

IT HAS THE OLD WALTER PUNCH!

EVENING SUN.

The Author of "Paid in Full" puts over another success. Eugene Walter "came back" as a dramatist last night when "Just a Woman" was presented. This new play has the old Walter "punch" and thrill and cleverness of construction. Let us rejoice that Mr. Walter has once more scored an emphatic success. Of the six court room scenes in new plays we have witnessed this season this is the best. "Just a Woman" ranks high among this season's plays.

CHARLES DARNTON, EVENING WORLD.

We can feel the earnestness, the power and the reality that Eugene Walter can put into a play. Mr. Walter, first of all, is human in everything he writes. A big theme, and Eugene Walter has been big enough to see it. Mr. Walter has done something worth while. "Just a Woman" is just the sort of play that a neglected, self-sacrificing wife may enjoy.

IT THRILLS LIKE A BATTLE SHOUT!
