SEMITIC FEATURES KEPT HIM OUT OF GUARD, KLEIN SAYS

Saw Others Turned Down by Capt. Sullivan for Same Reason.

Investigation into the charges that there is an anti-Jewish feeling in the National Guard of New York State was begun to-day before Adjutant-General Louis W. Stotesbury in the State Arsenal. Max J. Klien of No. 948 Union Avenue, the Bronx, appeared as complainant against Capt. Howard E. Sullivan of Battery D, Second Field Artillery N. G. N. Y., who, he alleges rejected his application to join the Battery because of racial discrimination.

Klein was represented by Maurice Simmons of No. 198 Broadway, who is counsel for the Committee for the Protection of the Good Name of Immigrant Peoples. At the beginning of the hearing Attorney Simmons said it was his intention to present other cases of discrimination against Jews in different regiments of the National Guard. Present at the inquiry were a number of officers of the National Guard, who were subpoenaed, it was said, as the result of other charges.

Klein was the first witness. He is twenty-six years old and is employed by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society. He said he was prompted to join the National Guard as a result of advertising campaigns conducted by it. He went to the unit nearest his home, Battery D, and made application.

He said he was accompanied by his brother, Charles E. Klein, who had obtained an enlistment blank several days before. He entered the quarters of Battery D, he said, where he saw several officers, among them Capt. Sullivan. Twelve applicants were in the room at the time.

"I was given an application blank," Klein testified, "told to read it carefully. That I would be called. After five minutes, a Lieutenant summoned me and asked me questions, which he recorded. Everything went smoothly until he asked the nationality of my father. I said, 'He is an American citizen, although born in Russia.' The officer told me to sign my name, and during the time the blank was being filled out he had a conversation with some other officers and left without signing the blank.

"I was told to wait so that the doctor could examine me. Capt Sulivan entered, dressed in civilian clothes. The application blanks were placed upon his desk by the recruiting sergeant. He went through them very carefully and called applicants over and told them there was no vacancy. One young man said he was a member of the Twelfth Infantry and wanted to be transferred to the artillery.

"The captain said he did not encourage such transfers and refused him.

"Did you observe the facial characteristics of the member of the Twelfth Infantry," asked Attorney Simmons.

"Yes, he had Semitic features," answered Klein.

"Did you observe the features of the men who were told by Capt. Sullivan there were no vacancies?"

"Yes; they also were Jews."

The witness said he was informed by Capt. Sullivan there was no vacancy, but that he could leave his blank with him. He was also recommended by the Captain to apply to Battery F. Both he and his brother were dismissed, he declared, while other applicants who had entered the room while he was there were sent into an adjoining room. These persons, Klein declared, had non-Semitic features.

The witness said he felt so bad that at night he couldn't sleep.

"Tell frankly what circumstances in your experience gave you the impression that you were rejected because you were a Jew," said Gen. Stotesbury.

"The reason was because my brother, who is four years younger, attempted to enlist on May 8 and was told to return for his physical examination. I decided to go with him. As soon as Capt. Sullivan saw both of us he knew we were Jews."

Klein said that being questioned concerning the nationality of his father aroused his suspicions.

"Men are being rejected solely because of their birth," declared Mr. Simmons. "That spirit is alien and the men who do the rejecting are traitors to the government. The term 'American' embraces all and when any other segment is introduced, they become hyphenated-Americans."

Gen. Stotesbury asked the witness if Capt. Sullivan had promised to put his name on a witing list and said that he, Gen. Stotesbury, had been on such a list for one year and four days.

The witness admitted that such a promise had been made.

"Then your particular grievance here is that you were discriminated against because you are a Jew?" Gen. Stotesbury asked.

"Yes," was the reply. "My country—the State of New York—is calling for recruits. They wanted 3,000 men. When I was rejected in one unit of the service, why wasn't I told to go to another?"

"You were told to go to Battery F."

"Yes I only went to the door, though."

"Do you feel you had the right to join and that any others, between eighteen and forty-five, in good moral and physical condition, have the right to join any organization in the National Guard?"

"Yes," the witness replied. "I am an American citizen and have that right."

Charles E. Klein testified substantially to the same facts as had his brother. He had arrived at the opinion that there was a discrimination against Jews when he was asked by a lieutenant, on obtaining an application blank, if he was a Jew.

Lester J. Winkle testified that he endeavored to enlist in Battery F and that Lieut. King took his application and told him he would be notified after the committee had acted. No such notification had reached him up to this time, the witness said, and when he read of the investigation e felt that he was being discriminated against because of his Jewish connection.

Frank J. Conaton, a Roman Catholic, applied for enlistment in Battery D on May 15. He overheard officers say, he testified, that he would have to be placed on a waiting list as the battery had its full quota.

Lawrence Landsman, a Jew, said he applied for enlistment on the same night as the Kleins and was told by Capt. Sullivan there was but one vacancy. He said he was examined by a surgeon but was rejected because of his eyesight. He believed it was a bonafide rejection, although he had been a sergeant in the Seventy-first Regiment for five years.
