FARMERS AS POLITICIANS.

How Non-Partisan League Tested at Primary in North Dakota.

FARGO, N. Dak., June 28.—The attempt of the newly organized Farmers' Non-Partisan Political League, in North Dakota, to elect a Governor appears to-day. The League has a complete ticket in the field headed by Frank Fraser, candidate for Governor, and national observers among the organization will have a decisive effect on the size of both the Republican and Democratic vote.

T. R. WILL BE GUEST OF HUGHES TO-NIGHT AT DINNER FOR TWO

There's a Hint of Reconciliation of Colonel and Taft With Candidate as Peacemaker.

Col. Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to dine with Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, at the Hotel Astor this evening, and Republican leaders to-day stated at a reconciliation between the Colonel and ex-President Taft, with Hughes as peacemaker.

Some of the Hughes enthusiasts even pictured three Republican campaign trains during about the country this fall, Col. Roosevelt speaking from the rear platform of one, Mr. Taft from another, and Mr. Hughes being the chief attraction on the third.

The dinner is to be served in suite No. 892, that occupied by Mr. Hughes since he came to the city following his acceptance of the Presidential nomination. Only the Colonel and Mr. Hughes are to be present.

Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Hughes have not met or even to exchange greetings since July 12, 1910.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A conference report on the Rural Credits or Land Bank Bill was adopted by the House yesterday, 213 to 18. The report now awaits action in the Senate.

Home the Best School for the Child, The Kitchen the Best Kindergarten, Says "Back to the Home" Advocate

Mother Is Best Teacher Up to Child's Tenth Year, Declares Miss Lynch, Twenty Years a School Teacher—Three Rs and Spelling May Be Learned Before a School Is Entered.

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

"The best teacher for a child is his mother. The best kindergarten is his mother's kitchen. The best time for him to go to school is when he is ten years old. Until that age every mother who can read and write and who is not compelled to earn her children's living can teach them better than any one else what they ought to know."

That is the firm conviction of Miss Ella Frances Lynch, for twenty years a school teacher and the author of that exceedingly practical and suggestive little book, "Educating the Child at Home." Miss Lynch founded a few months ago the National League of Teacher-Mothers. The league has nothing to do with the New York schoolma'ams whom Commissioner Finley finally permitted to be, at one and the same time, parents and pedagogues. Miss Lynch's organization is simply a group of mothers' clubs, hailing from every State in the Union and even from Alaska, and pledged, every last member of them, to give individual teaching to their small children for at least five minutes daily. Yesterday, at the rooms of the Grolier Society, No. 2 West Forty-fifth Street, Miss Lynch told me all about her new "back to the home" movement.

GOD MADE HOMES FOR THE CHILDREN.

"You know," I reminded her, "that the moderniste argue that trained experts can give better care and training to children than mothers can."

"Don't you suppose God knew what he was doing when he put little children into homes instead of into schools and institutions?" Miss Lynch inquired calmly.

It always seems to me rather unsportsmanlike to use the name of the Deity to bolster up arguments. The person to whom you're talking must either say something very shocking or remain silent. I remained silent, and Miss Lynch went on:

"I am sorry for the little child whose mother feels that she must send it to a kindergarten. This is simply an admission that the mother is unwilling or unable to train her own child, or else that she lacks the self-confidence of a motherly old hen. How we distort the teachings of the great Froebel in urging the general use of kindergartens, ignoring the fact that he developed 'child-gardens' for the poor children denied real home life. In his own words, 'the kindergarten is the most beautiful substitute for genuine home life.'

"I believe that the mother who is not compelled to support her children should begin giving them lessons from the age of three. At that time five minutes a day is enough, but even then the lesson should be regular and punctual. The time should gradually increase until, when the child is seven or eight, the mother is teaching him for an hour daily. Especially if he lives in the country he is better off out of school until he is at least ten years old.

COLLEGE MOTHER NOT ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY.

"The mother need not be highly educated in order to give her child suitable instruction. If a college education were the one thing needful in order to be a good mother, we should never have heard from Lincoln, Greeley and many other venerated men, nor, on the other hand, should we have occasion to deplore the meagre results of modern schooling.

"The home should be the most wonderful educational institution in the world. The mother should be the best judge of what is best for the child."

"What do you think the mother should teach her little ones?" I asked.

"Four things," Miss Lynch replied promptly. "Until a child is ten years old it is enough for him to learn reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic. He would be better off if many of the subjects he studies in modern schools were lopped from the curriculum. He might then, when he graduated, be able to compose and spell a simple letter.

"I advise a mother to teach her child his letters from blocks, and then to teach him one new word every day by the use of anagrams. If she begins at the proper time, he will have learned to spell a thousand words by the time he is seven. As for his reader, if only one book can be afforded, I recommend Longfellow's poems. Every child should be familiar with our great national child epic, 'Hiawatha.'

"That is the book learning which the mother should teach. But there is so much she, and no one else, can give her little one. Let her turn her kitchen into a kindergarten. What is the use of setting a child to play with 'symbols,' strips of colored paper and balls, when he can learn how to wipe the dishes, how to dust the furniture, how to run errands for his mother? There is a great deal that is interesting about even a common household task like dish-washing. The youngster may learn why hot water breaks the glasses, what soap is and how it cleanses, how china is made. And besides the general knowledge that he is acquiring, he is getting accustomed to the most important thing in the world—work.

"This is a working world, and I don't believe in the modern tendency to make a child's lessons too easy. We hear a great deal of the evils of child-labor, but all too little attention is paid to the destruction of mental, moral and physical power through the evils of child-idleness.

"There is no reason why the mother should throw on the State all the burden of educating her children. I used to criticize the schools severely, but I have come to the conclusion that it is unfair to expect of them what should be given at home. They are a huge mechanism, and the part that comes closest to the children—the teachers—is nearly helpless. Round down by curriculum and principal, her room overcrowded, what can the average teacher give in the way of individual attention? The mother who teaches her child for half an hour every day gives that child more individual training than he would receive in a week in the school room.

"Children taught the fundamentals of English education at home, taught how to study, how to work, progress rapidly when they finally enter the school system. They have been thoroughly grounded at the beginning, and yet they are still receptive, still eager to learn. Moreover, the mother holds with them a position of dignity and authority such as she can never win who leaves all the training of her little ones to the teacher and contents herself with feeding and clothing them.

"Until fifty years ago the school was accepted simply as an auxiliary, an assistant to the home," concluded Miss Lynch. "Now, it seems as if the home were only a patch on the school."

HUGHES BREAKS INTO FILMS.

National Committee Hires Movie Men to Picture Candidate.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Republican National Campaign Committee has engaged Charles Compton, motion picture director, and Morton Stern, a camera man, to put Charles E. Hughes into the movies. The Hughes films will be shown all over the country during the Presidential campaign.

The men already are busy at Tenafly putting the candidate's home life into pictures. They will stay there making "family scenes" all week, then go to Washington, where Mr. Hughes will be posed as signing his resignation as Justice of the Supreme Court.

STANDARD OIL BUYS ON BAY.

Purchases 143 Acres of Bayonne Water Front.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey purchased yesterday from the R. G. Packard Dredging Company 143 acres of land on New York Bay, extending from Twenty-seventh Street, Bayonne, to the oil company's plant at Constable Hook, for approximately $650,000. The property extends along 1,000 feet of water front.

George B. Gifford, general manager of the oil company in New Jersey, said he did not know just for what the land would be used. It is believed new docks will be built.

Precaution.

(From the Washington Star.)

"Lady," said Meandering Mike, "have you any objection to my choppin' a few armfuls of wood an' bringin' 'em in an' stackin' 'em in a neat pile behind the kitchen stove?"

"None whatever."

"Thank ye, lady. I jes' wanted to know how you'd take the suggestion. If you won't get more wood chopped than you already need I'll move on to some house where the folks is more forehanded."

SISTERS, AGED 9 AND 13, KILL SELVES WITH GUN

Note Found Beside Bodies Says They Feared Orphans' Home—Father Is Arrested.

PENSACOLA, Fla., June 28.—Ethel and Tenny Fudge, aged thirteen and nine, respectively, were found dead in a house on the outskirts of Pensacola last night. Both had been shot through the heart.

According to the police, a note found near the bodies said the girls had decided to kill themselves rather than go to an orphans' home. Another note said their father, R. J. Fudge, was not to blame.

After an investigation, however, the Coroner had the father arrested and held pending developments.

Fudge asserted he was in town seeking work when the children met death.

3 KIDDIES HIT, 1 KILLED, BY BOY SHARPSHOOTERS

Wave of Militarism Causes Lads to Use Guns and Bullets Wound Bronx Children.

Militarism has stirred up small boys in the Bronx to such reckless target practice that a little girl has been killed and two other children shot.

Gussie Ludwig, ten years old, was on the roof of her home, No. 1938 Lowell Street, the Bronx, last evening holding a target for her brother Louis, fifteen. A rifle bullet struck Gussie in the head. When the child was taken to Lincoln Hospital, her parents said she had fallen from a chair, but the doctors found the bullet wound, and when Gussie died without regaining consciousness Louis was arrested and paraded in the custody of his father for a hearing next week.

Lucile Riley, fourteen years old, was shot in the back while standing in a room on the second floor of her home, No. 1914 Hoe Avenue, the Bronx.

Alvin A. Knackman, sixteen years old, sat looking out of a window of his home when he was hit in the leg by a bullet. Both children were treated at Lincoln Hospital and sent home.

THREE MILLION BOXES SOLD EVERY YEAR IN FRANCE

The May Manton Fashions

No. 9121 (With basting line and added seam allowance) BLOUSE WITH DEEP COLLAR, 34 to 44 bust.
No. 9122 (With basting line and added seam allowance) FOUR OR FIVE PIECE SKIRT, 24 to 34 waist.

THERE is always demand for a costume of this sort. It is excellent for general morning wear and it serves a practical convenience that nothing else quite supplies. The models that are shown here are among the newest and the best. The skirt is made with the gathered back that makes a feature of the latest styles and with a wide box plait or panel at the front and circular sides. The big patch pockets that are arranged over the side portions are oddly shaped and exceedingly smart and attractive, also the tabs that finish the belt are new and interesting. Altogether, the skirt is an excellent one for any material that can be made in tailored style, for the coat suit, for wear with odd waists and for the country or sports costume that takes such a conspicuous place in the summer fashions. The blouse is very dainty and charming. The frills make a new feature. They are very generally becoming and they are exceedingly well liked, but they are not obligatory, for the collar and cuffs can be finished without them if preferred, or the sleeves can be finished with the frills turned down over the hands without the upper frills if that treatment is liked. There is a tendency this season toward one color effects, even when the blouse and skirt are different, therefore, this blouse is made of cotton voile in a champagne shade while the skirt is made of cheviot that shades from champagne color to brown. The blouse can be made from handkerchief lawn and from the tub silks with equal success, however, and for some materials it will be pretty to make the frills of lace. The skirt is an excellent one for linen, for cotton gabardine and for the various washable skirting materials as well as for the wool.

For the medium size the blouse will require 3¾ yards of material 27 inches wide, 2½ yards 36, or 2⅜ yards 44, and for the skirt 6¾ yards 27, 5⅝ yards 36, or 5¼ yards 44; it is 3½ yards in width at the lower edge.

The blouse pattern No. 9121 is cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure, and the skirt, No. 9122, in sizes from 24 to 34 inches waist measure.

How to Obtain These Patterns. Call at THE EVENING WORLD MAY MANTON FASHION BUREAU, Donald Building, 100 West Thirty-second Street (opposite Gimbel Bros.), corner Sixth Avenue and Thirty-second Street, New York, or sent by mail on receipt of twelve cents in coin or stamps for each pattern ordered.
