Life Seen as a Dream.

"And surely it is not a melancholy conceot to think we are all asleep in this world, and that the conceits of this life are as mere dreams to those of the next, as the phantasms of the night to the conceit of the day. There is an equal delusion in both, and the one doth but seem to be the emblem or picture of the other. We are somewhat more than ourselves in our sleeps, and the slumber of the body seems to be but the waking of the soul. It is the ligation of sense, but the liberty of reason; and our waking conceptions do not match the fancies of our sleeps."—Sir Thomas Browne.

Father of "Mother Goose."

Elizabeth Vergoose, the Massachusetts widow credited by many with the nursery rhymes and stories known as the "Mother Goose" stories, was not the first to publish some of the best-known ones, says the Mentor Magazine. Charles Perrault, a French author who lived from 1628 to 1708, published "The Tales of My Mother the Goose," in which Puss-in-Boots and other characters known to every child appear.

Human Mechanism.

Where can we find a pump as perfect as the human heart? If the boss treats it right, it stays on the job for more than 600,000 hours, making 4,320 strokes and pumping 15 gallons an hour. In the course of an average lifetime the heart pumps 9,000,000 gallons and makes 2,500,000,000 strokes, Floyd W. Parsons in the World's Work says. We have no telegraphic mechanism, equal to that comprised in our nervous system; no wireless apparatus, so efficient as the voice and the ear; no moving-picture machine or other type of camera so perfect as the human eye; no ventilating plant so wonderful as the nose, lungs, and skin, and no electrical switchboard can compare with the spinal cord.
