Rheumatism

Much painful and wearing almost beyond endurance, is not an incurable disease if treated in time. Perhaps no other disease has so baffled the efforts of science and medicine as this, but at last a remedy has been discovered in Tongaline which CURES RHEUMATISM, and is heartily endorsed by many of the Leading Physicians.

WHAT THEY SAY:

"TONGALINE is doing all that is claimed it will do." G. C. SHIPPEY, M. D., Gentryville, Ill.

"Had a case of Inflammatory Rheumatism of nearly all the large joints. Gave TONGALINE, and to-day my patient is out and doing well." W. W. BAXTER, M. D., Horsman, Ill.

"In my opinion TONGALINE supersedes all other so-called rheumatic remedies." S. C. WORSHAM, M. D., Marengo, Ill.

"Have given TONGALINE a fair trial, and think it the best remedy I have ever found for Rheumatism." B. F. DAVIS, Sturgeon, Mo.

Grant's Defeat of Johnson's Plot.

The December number of the North American Review contains a paper by Ex-Secretary Boutwell, on "Johnson's Plot and Motives." This interesting article makes Johnson's general position very clear, and probably establishes it about as it will go into history. Mr. Boutwell gives, also, a vivid account of General Grant's relation to the matter, and of his firm conduct, which had so much to do with defeating the Johnson policy and plot. Mr. Boutwell says:

Upon my arrival in Washington to attend the session of Congress which began December 3, 1866, I received a letter from Mr. Stanton; asking me to call at the War Department at the earliest moment possible. I called without delay. He directed me to his private room, where he soon joined me.

Without perface he said: "I am more concerned for the fate of the country than I was at any time during the war." His exact words further I cannot recall, but he gave me to understand that the President had issued orders to officers of the army, of which neither he nor General Grant had knowledge, and that there was danger that General Grant would be sent away from Washington.

* * *

At the request of Mr. Stanton, I wrote at his dictation the substance of what afterward became the second section of the Army Appropriation Act, approved March 2, 1867.

In that section it was provided that the headquarters of the General of the Army should be at the City of Washington, and that he should not be detailed for service elsewhere except at his own request or by the previous approval of the Senate; that all orders and instructions relating to military operations issued by the President or Secretary of War should be issued through the General of the Army, or in case of his disability, through the officer next in command; and finally, that all orders issued in any other manner should be null and void, and that the officer issuing such orders, and all officers who might obey them, knowing that they had been issued in any other manner, should be alike guilty of a misdemeanor.

* * *

After the election of General Grant to the Presidency, he gave me an account of his interviews with President Johnson, in reference to the project of sending the general to Mexico in the autum of 1866. It was, in substance, this: "At a casual meeting the President said. 'I may have occasion to ask you to go to Mexico.' I said, in reply, 'I am so situated that it will not be convenient for me to leave.' Not many days after this conversation the President sent for me to come to his office. Upon my arrival I found Mr. Seward and the President. Mr. Seward opened his portfolio, and read a long paper addressed to me, and containing instructions for my guidance in Mexico. When Mr. Seward had concluded, I said to the President, 'You know I told you that it would not be convenient for me to go to Mexico.' The President then began to argue with me, and to urge. I as steadily resisted his arguments. The President grew warm; and finally, rising from his chair and striking his table violently with his fist, he said, 'I would like to know if there is an officer of the army who will not obey my orders!' I rose, took my hat in my hand, and said, 'I am an officer of the army, but I am a citizen also. The service you ask me to perform is a civil service, and, as a citizen, I may accept it or decline it, and I decline it.' I then left the room."

The distinction thus made by General Grant left to the President authority to assign him to duty as a soldier in any point within the United States that the President might select, and hence the solicitude of Mr. Stanton for the passage of the section in the Army Bill of the 2d of March, 1867.

Gleanings.

A plentiful supply of pure water for stock, both in summer and winter, is one of the very essential necessities of the farm. A few dollars expended for the purpose of procuring a full supply at all times and in convenient places for stock to get it, is one of the best investments that can be made on the farm. A quite small spring, if it be a constant one, will supply a large amount of stock if it be rightly managed. Often a spring so small that it will not overflow its water sufficient to run a dozen rods away in summer, by boxing and laying pipes to save nearly all the water, may be found amply sufficient to supply the barns in winter and a pasture in summer.

A stable ought to be warm enough in winter so that a horse will keep comfortable without a blanket; if not, and a blanket is used, he will be all the more sensitive to cold when it is removed, and he is taken out. Horses that are required to stand much in harness, should never be blanketed when in the stable, except, perhaps, when they come in wet. At such times a dry blanket will keep them from getting chilled while drying off, but it should be removed as soon as the hair becomes dry.

Poultry breeders should keep their stock supplied with fresh water, that is warm in winter and cool in summer. The poultry fancier, when he leaves home for business, ought to feel secure, especially in cold weather, that he has not left his fowls in peril of thirst, and this security he can obtain by using a well-made drop faucet. For the cold weather it is a good plan to put the water in the reservoir (any tub, old keg or firkin will answer for this) every morning hot, and keep old carpets or cloths wrapped about the cask.

Apples for Stock.

There is a great diversity of opinion among farmers as to the value of apples for stock, many advising against their use. So good an authority, however, as the Massachusetts Ploughman says the objection to apples as fodder arises in most cases from a foolish prejudice. Almost all farm animals are very fond of apples. They like good ripe ones best, but they will take such as they can get and be thankful for them. Farm stock, particularly the cattle and swine, may consume as many of the windfall apples as they like without harm. Green apples could not show by analysis a very high feeding value. Neither do turnips show a high value by analysis, but both are liked by stock, and animals do better fed upon them moderately than if the apples or roots are withheld.

In feeding apples to cows not accustomed to eating them, it is well to feed them in the stall, if convenient, and to give only a few quarts at once, increasing the quantity as judgement may dictate. A cow that is accustomed to them may safely consume a half bushel of mellow apples per day if she will take so many. Very hard or unripe ones should be given in smaller quantities. A growing hog will eat from three to six quarts per day, and will be benefitted by them. If a half bushel of sour apples is thrown to a hog at once he may get sick of them, or get his teeth sore so he will want no more, just as children sometimes get sick from eating fruit or other good things in excess, but a few given three times a day tends to keep the appetite good. Work horses may also have a handful of good apples given them occasionally with thier evening meal. Sheep are excellent stock to run in orchards to clean up the wormy fruit as it falls, only the flock should be large enough so they will not get surfeited by eating too many.

To remove the unpleasant taste which is frequently observable from new wooden vessels is a thing difficult of accomplishment. The Brewing World says that the simplest plan, and one that will succeed in most cases, is to scald them thoroughly several times in boiling water, then dissolve some pearl ash or soda in lukewarm water, adding a little lime to it, and wash the inside of the vessels well in the solution. Afterward scald them several times thoroughly as before. This method may be applied to the cleansing of new butter packages.

A correspondent of the Rural World says that when rust gets into a plantation the only remedy is to dig up and burn the plants as soon as the disease shows itself, and if the patch is badly affected the best thing is to mow off and plough up, and plant with other crops for two or three years, planting the new patch in an entirely new place. The spores of this minute fungus are blown by the winds and spread, and neither road dust, lime, salt nor sulphur has the least effect.

---

Of a noted battle field, the Atlanta Constitution remarks: "The battle ground of Missionary Ridge has been converted into a strawberry patch. Yankee colonists have climbed with hoes where Yankee soldiers rushed with bayonets, and the earth has reddened after each invasion. On these sunny slopes the gardener finds his ideal home, and the berry lazily perfects itself. Land that went begging a few years ago at $2 an acre now commands $250 an acre, and where natives starved on 500 acres now are New Englanders growing rich on ten acres."

---

It is announced that Mr. Randall is preparing a tariff bill which will reduce the revenue $30,000,000, and that he will introduce it at the earliest moment. Such a measure would be pretty likely to pass unless stabbed to death by the anti-Randall people through their personal hatred of him.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. George V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich. writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Hinde & Philbrick. 2

The fattening of swine should be pushed now, before the weather gets much colder. Hogs rarely pay their keeping in cold weather, unless they have dry, warm pens, under cover. It requires too much food to maintain the animal heat, so there is little left to add to the weight of carcass.

Consumption Cured.

An old Physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands, by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.
