Scribner's Magazine.

An Exceptional Year.

The Year 1891 has been marked by a greater advance than any similar period since the Magazine was established. Not only has the literary and artistic excellence been maintained and increased, but a corresponding gain has been made in the sale and influence of the Magazine. At the end of 1891 the circulation has risen to more than 140,000. It may justly be promised that the further improvements for the coming year will be proportionate to these largely increased opportunities.

For Next Year.

It is not possible to give in a brief space an account of all the features in preparation, but the material is deficient in neither importance nor range of subject. Among the subjects treated:

The Poor in the World's Great Cities.

It is proposed to publish a series of articles, upon a scale never before attempted, giving the results of special study and work among the poor of the great cities. The plan will include an account of the conditions of life in those cities (in many lands) where the results of research will be helpful for purposes of comparison as well as for their own intrinsic interest. While, from a scientific point of view, the articles will be a contribution of great importance, the treatment will be thoroughly popular, and the elaborate illustrations will serve to make the presentation of the subject vivid as well as picturesque.

Washington Allston.

Unpublished Reminiscences and Letters of this foremost among early American painters. A number of illustrations will lend additional interest to the articles.

Important Moments.

The aim of this series of very short articles is to describe the signal occasions when some decisive event took place, or when some great experiment was first shown to be successful—such moments as that of the first use of the Atlantic cable, the first use of the telegraph and telephone, the first successful experiment with ether, the night of the Chicago fire, the scene at the moment of the vote on the impeachment of of Andrew Johnson, etc., etc.

Out of Door Papers.

In the early spring will be begun a series of seasonable articles, among them being:

Small Country Places, how to lay out and beautify them, by Samuel Parsons, Jr.
Fishing Lore from an Angler's Note-Book, by Dr. Leroy M. Yale.
Mountain Station Life in New Zealand, by Sydney Dickinson.
Racing in Australia, by Sydney Dickinson, with illustrations by Birge Harrison.

The illustrations are made from original material.

A full prospectus appears in the Holiday Number, now ready.

The Columbia Daily Calendar.

An old friend in new dress, and an article that has come to be one of the indispensables of an editor's desk, comes to hand in the Columbia Daily Calendar for 1892. The Calendar is in the form of a pad containing 367 leaves, each 5¼ x 2⅝ inches; one for each day of the year, to be removed daily, and one for the entire year. The day of the week, of the month, and of the year are given, and each slip bears a short paragraph pertaining to cycling or some kindred subject. At the bottom of each leaf is a blank for memoranda, every leaf being accessible at any time. The stand is an entirely new departure, being made of sheet metal finished in ivory black, and is very compact. At the close of the year the stand will be available for another pad. This is the seventh issue of this now well known Calendar, yet all the matter is fresh and new, having been carefully collated from leading publications and prominent writers, most of it being specially written for this purpose. It comprises notable events in cycling, opinions of physicians and clergymen, hints about road making, and numerous other topics.

We are in receipt of a copy of The Exposition Graphic, a new quarterly issued by the Graphic Company of Chicago, devoted to the World's Columbian Exposition. Portraits of the principal officers of the commission and local directory, scenes of the work of construction in progress at Jackson Park, magnificent views of all the great buildings of the Exposition; engravings showing the principal buildings of Chicago and the other leading cities of the Union, fine full page portraits of President Harrison and Secretary Blaine, engraved by Lautenschlager, and an impressive triple-page bird's-eye view of the Exposition grounds and buildings from designs by the Bureau of Construction, are some of the more prominent features of this truly ambitious work. If the succeeding issues shall correspond in excellence with the initial number, The Exposition Graphic will become one of the recognized features of the great international event. It is now on sale at all the principal news stands of the country at 50 cents a copy.

Some persons think that gold has been discovered near Kansas City, and seem to be willing to put up money to investigate the value of their find.

A young bear, the pride and pet of Jefferson City, hung himself to a tree to which he was attached, last Friday. No cause is known for the rash act.—Ex.

A dispatch from Nevada says the Vernon county circuit court opened there last Monday with over 600 cases on the docket and over forty of them divorce cases. Notwithstanding this record we do not believe that marriage is a failure in that county. We will wait for later and more complete returns.

The crop of hickory nuts is unusually large and we must look for a hard winter. The moss is growing high on the north side of the trees and this forebods a hard winter. The corn shuck is quite thick and this is another sign of a hard winter. Our weather predictions are always wrong and that means a warm winter.—Jefferson City Tribune.

A contest between two citizens of Joplin over the ownership of a dog was recently decided in court. The costs, not counting attorney's fees, amounted to $50 and the jury valued the dog at 1 cent. After figuring out the loss they have incurred by not agreeing to sell the dog and divide him the two Joplinites are probably wondering how they managed to escape the foul killer.—Post Dispatch.

MR. GLADSTONE'S WIFE

Is Going to Tell our Mothers How She Trained Her Children.

Mrs. William E. Gladstone has long been known as one of the most motherly women in England. When a young wife years ago, she began to make a careful study of the bringing up of children. No trouble was too great for her to spend upon the children which came to her, and that she succeeded in finding the best methods is attested by the positions which her children occupy in England to-day. What required years of labor for her to learn, Mrs Gladstone has now consented to tell in a series of articles which will be published in The Ladies' Home Journal of Philadelphia, during 1892. Mrs. Gladstone calls her series "Hints from a Mother's Life," and in her articles she will tell what should be a young mother's first step with her baby; a child's best surroundings; how to wash and dress an infant; what an ideal nursery should be; how a child can be kept healthy, and gives, besides, some rules which are destined to become standard. The articles will be like a manual for the nursery, and thousands of American mothers will read Mrs. Gladstone's words. It is seldom that a woman of Mrs. Gladstone's high position writes on such a practical subject, and this fact will lend all the more interest to this series in the Journal. It is said that Mrs. Gladstone was paid an enormous price for the articles, and it is creditable to the enterprising publishers that they had the liberality to secure and place such material before American mothers.
