Bull Upset Justice.

An enraged bull attacked a justice of the peace of Larganreagh, County Donegal, Ireland. The man was sitting on a bridge when the bull came at him and tumbled him into the water. It went in after him, seriously wounding him about the head and body. Some farm hands managed to drive the bull off and rescue the justice.

New Use for Electricity.

A theory has been advanced by a French scientist that electric currents can be made to take the place of food in sustaining life to a considerable degree.

UNITING NORTH AND SOUTH

Railroad From Nome to Cape Horn May Be Considered a Certainty of the Future.

Stimulation of commerce between North and South America, due to the European war, has revived interest in the project of an all-rail route connecting the United States with the countries of the southern hemisphere.

When this is carried out, as it is almost certain to be some day for strategic as well as commercial reasons, it must be extended to include a railway connection with Alaska, where the United States government now has surveying parties in the field selecting routes for a railway system to develop the resources of that country.

Such a railway, reaching continuously from the great plateau of central Alaska to the pampas of South America and beyond, would constitute the biggest enterprise of its kind ever undertaken, if it were not that more than half of the line has already been built and is in operation.

Since the surveys for the Pan-American railway were made there has been a steady development in railway building in South America, particularly in Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina, so that much of the work planned at that time has already been done.

That portion of western Canada lying east of the coast range, formerly considered a forbidding country with an arctic climate, has been invaded by two trunk line railways, and its resources are being rapidly developed.

Senses of Plants.

James Rodway, who is the curator of the British Guiana museum, and is an eminent botanist, declares that plants have at least three of our five senses—feeling, taste and smell—and that certain tropical trees smell water from a distance and will move straight toward it. But trees not in the tropics can do as well. A resident of an old Scotch mansion, says a writer in the Scotsman, found the waste pipe from the house repeatedly choked. Lifting the slabs in the basement paving, he discovered that the pipe was completely encircled by poplar roots. They belonged to a tree that grew 30 yards away on the opposite side of the house. Thus the roots had moved steadily toward the house, and had penetrated below the foundation and across the basement until they reached their goal, the waste pipe, 150 feet away. Then they had pierced a cement joining and had worked their way in long, tapering lengths inside the pipe for a considerable distance beyond the house.

Liniment Cures Clock.

In the absence of his wife, F. C. Perry decided to start, if possible, the household clock, which had not run for a long time. He found a bottle, the contents of which looked like oil, and after liberally greasing the clock works, he put them together. When Mrs. Perry returned home and heard the long-silent clock ticking, she asked her husband how he did it, pointing to the clock on the shelf.

"A little Yankee genius, and oil," replied Perry, as he escorted his wife to a closet and showed a bottle on the shelf.

"Why," exclaimed Mrs. Perry, "that medicine is for rheumatism."—Winsted (Conn.) Dispatch Philadelphia Record.

War Bills for 1915.

The French finance minister estimates that country's military expenditure for 1915 at $3,001,000,000, its expenditure on the public debt at $265,500,000, and the total public expenditure for the year at $4,381,000,000. The British exchequer's estimate on England's total expenditure for the pending fiscal year is $7,950,000,000.—New York Post.

Favors Expenditures.

With an expenditure of $410,000,000 a year for the army and navy, the United States as a peaceable nation will be paying a fair rate of insurance against war and devastation on its wealth of $150,000,000,000 or thereabouts.—New York Herald.

Had to Cater to All.

"I don't like the way this hotel is run!" carped a peevish young traveling salesman. "Neither do I," replied the landlord of Pruntytown tavern, "but I've got to entertain all the fools that come along as well as the sensible people."—Judge.

ADDING TO INCOME

Wife Can Do It by Capitalizing Her Time.

Not by Any Means Necessary That She Should Go Out to Work in Order to Save Money for Her Husband.

Here is a contributor's idea of one of the many ways in which a wife can help increase the family's budget:

"She was an old lady and she was piecing a quilt. Came a pretty, frivolous young married woman.

"'The idea,' commented the frivolous one, 'of anyone's having time to sew her life up in a thing like that.'

"'In my time all women did it,' commented the older woman.

"The pretty one flushed.

"'But nowadays time is so much more valuable,' she defended.

"'Is it? I wonder,' mused the wise one. 'Does your time bring you in any money?' The pretty one shook her head. 'Then why not make it save the money your husband's time brings in, as we did in our day?

"'The dress you wear cost—$6.98? And cheap at that, no doubt, you think. Yet you could have bought better material for $2. In two days' time you could have made it better and more daintily than it is. At that rate your time would have yielded you $2.49 a day. Would you be glad of that much for a day's work if you were being paid for it directly?'

"'Indeed I would!' responded the girl fervently. 'I wish I could make some money to help my husband!'

"'A penny saved is a penny earned, my dear! If you have contracted the habit of sitting on the veranda and thinking of the things you would buy if you had the money it may be a little hard to devote yourself to a sewing machine and working out a paper pattern. But in return you'll have your $2.50 a day, the pleasure of wearing a dress you have made yourself, and the admiration of your husband.'

"The frivolous one became all attention. 'I just thought I could buy the dress for less than I could buy the material and have it made,' she explained.

"'A specious argument, my dear. Of course you could. But you could not buy it for what you could make it yourself. You are young. Help your husband to make and save his money now. Do some real work and credit yourself with it and see how the family budget is helped.'"—American Magazine.

FORMED FROM SINGLE LOG

Remarkable Cabin That Is on Exhibition in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco.

There is a cabin in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, which is constructed of a single log of redwood. It is about twelve feet long and rests upon a heavy platform of timbers, which support the weight of the hollow log. A doorway about five feet high and eighteen inches wide admits visitors to the interior, which forms a fair-sized room. The appearance of the cabin is striking because the front presents a cross section of a large red wood tree with the bark intact.—Popular Science and World's Advance.

Cabin Made Out of a Single Log.

For a Damp Room.

When papering a damp room the following hint will be useful: Take half a pint of alum and half a pint of glue-size. Dissolve each together in a pail of boiling water; take off the old paper and wash the wall once or twice with the solution, when dry it can be papered. No damp will ever show through the solution.

MOSS OF VALUE IN SURGERY

Has Long Been Recognized as a Wonderful Healer of All Wounds Received in Warfare.

The warriors who came from the North to assist Brian Boru at the battle of Clontarf and routed the Danes, used a native gray moss to plug and heal their wounds, and the old legends of Ireland and Western Scotland give many amazing instances of its success.

For instance, there is the tale of the ancient hero who fought without ceasing for several weeks against scores of enemies—one down, t other come on. He was only vanquished by the cruel expedient of keeping him so closely employed in battle that he could not gether moss to plug his wounds. Nor would his enemies allow him even one handful of fresh sphagnum.

Right through the history of the clans there are continual references to the magic moss, a supply of which every hero seems to have carried. Indeed, to within the last two hundred years a handful of sphagnum was part of the scanty war kit of the Highland freebooter. In the less-frequented dales the use of the remedy has never been discontinued, and it was fortunate indeed that some medical authority remembered this when a shortage of cotton wool for hospital use was threatened in the early months of the war.

Thousands and tens of thousands of sphagnum pads are in use in British casualty hospitals now—a picturesque link connecting the wars of Brian Boru with the greatest campaign in the history of the world.—Montreal Herald.

Romance and War.

A pardonable habit of inclosing their names and addresses when sending parcels to soldiers at the front is prevalent among British ladies. It has also been frequently noticed that many happy friendships have been established by the correspondence which followed. It is something unique, however, to put on record the fact that a marriage has resulted from this form of introduction, the lady in the case being a lassie from the far north of Scotland. In sending a parcel of cigarettes to the front, a lady of Wick inclosed her name and address. Some time later she received a request to the sender to write again. An interesting correspondence ensued, and formal letters gradually developed into affectionate "billetdoux." Photographs were exchanged, and ultimately the gallant soldier popped the question. The lady, like Barkis, being "willin'," the soldier secured a short furlough, and straightway made for bonnie Scotland.

Bright Prospect.

"I suppose you have hopes that your little son will be president of the United States some day?"

"No.

"Come, come, Fatherly pride is all right. I wouldn't think any the less of you if you had such hopes.'

"'Fatherly pride, eh? Well, I have plenty of that. In fact, something tells me that this boy of mine is going to grow up and pitch a world series some day.'

Country's Business in Good Shape.

Agricultural interests, manufacturing interests, mining interests, commercial interests are in far better condition, one and all, than at any previous period of our national history and the financial interests of the country were never before in position to do their part so fully, so widely, so efficiently, so safely and so reasonably, so far as rates of interest are concerned, as at this very time.

Borah's Fears Well Grounded.

On the one hand, remarks Senator Borah, we have President Wilson with a solid Democracy and a growing general popularity; on the other, we have the Republicans getting ready for an internal shindy. He did not openly predict a quarrelsome division; but the prediction was implicit in his fear that the Republican party would not "do the wise thing" and adopt a liberal platform.

Her Story.

The average man knows three old stories, which he frequently repeats. The average woman knows but one old story, and it is about a man who begged her to marry him.—Topeka Capital.
