At End of Chinese Wall.

From the Inn of Increasing Righteousness we sent out three men to copy inscriptions at the Western Gate of the city and in the tube of the fortifications to the west, while Mr. Clark and I took mules and rode toward the real end of the Great Wall, which is not at Kiayukwan itself, but at a point fifteen li southwest of it. During the journey thither no human being crossed our path, and there was not a house in sight the whole way. Five antelopes were the principal sign of life as they hurried out of sight, and lizards, magpies and crows—of which there was some to be seen at the start—soon disappeared. There was nothing to attract the eye beyond whirling spirals of sand and tufts of brown sage brush, while the whole landscape was earth color, save that on the lofty southern mountains there lay as ever, the snow. The monotony would have been without relief but for the presence on the scene of the ruin whose end we were seeking—the ruin of the most stupendous achievement in Asia.

When at last we reached the actual termination of the wall a surprise was in store for us. The construction does not abut the southern mountains but stops short on a precipice sheer down 200 feet, as perpendicular as if cut by engineers to a plumb line. Below flows the Big White North River. My companion dropped a stone and counted eight pulse beats before he heard the splash in the water below.

As we stood alone here and mused, the light fell upon a brick-encased stone tablet, to see which we had traveled so far—a tablet erected long, long ago to mark the western end of that great wall the stupendous achievement of the mighty Emperor Chin. It bears a simple message in large ideographs, the purport of which is this: "The Martial Barrier of All Under Heaven."—Harper's Weekly.

THE FOOD FOR POULTRY IN WINTER.

Much time and money have been spent in what seems the almost vain endeavor to make hens produce eggs in cold weather. It requires but little experience with poultry to learn the fact that, under ordinary circumstances, hens cannot produce as many eggs in winter as in summer. Summer is the natural time for the laying of eggs, and in order to increase winter production there must be reproduced for the fowls as nearly as possible the conditions that exist in summer. Mrs. John J. Layzell of Brandon, Vt., has evidently succeeded in doing this with her flock. She says: "I have been using Page's Perfected Poultry Food for the last three winters, and I find it the best poultry food on the market. I have tried several different kinds, but I got no eggs until I began to use this food."

If you want to know more about this food and the best ways of using it, write to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., for his booklet, "Profitable Poultry." It will be sent free, postpaid, to anyone mentioning this paper.

ABOUT THE STATE

Bellows Falls lodge of Odd Fellows has 255 members and $3,400 in the treasury.

Dr. E. M. Pond of Rutland has received a patent on a surgical dressing and plaster. He has also applied for foreign patents.

St. Johnsbury is to have a taxicab service soon. Many of the larger cities of the state have had them in operation this summer.

The fall and winter time table of the Mount Mansfield Electric railroad goes into effect next Sunday. The Sunday cars will be discontinued.

Blackberries are reported to be very plenty in the vicinity of Bolton. Over 1,000 bushels have been picked this season in the fields near that town.

The town of Wallingford is now afflicted with typhoid fever and seven cases have been reported so far. It is believed that none of the cases is traceable to Rutland.

The liquor seized Tuesday in a raid at Burlington was ordered to be destroyed by Judge Deberville Wednesday. There were 54 bottles of beer and a gallon jug of whiskey.

Recent patents have been granted in Vermont as follows: A. G. Girard of Woodstock, ironing board; W. J. Trempe of East Ryegate, automatic felt tightener for paper making machines.

A horse owned by Martin Perry of Townshend, while in pasture, became frightened at an automobile recently and jumped over a stone wall in such a manner as to break a leg. The horse had to be shot. The animal could be driven only winters because of its fear of automobiles.

A house owned by Dennis Pratt in Woodford Hollow was destroyed by fire Tuesday evening. The house was unoccupied and the fire was of incendiary origin. There was a small insurance carried on the property. The back door was found smashed open where the firebug made his entrance.

E. L. Smith of St. Albans Bay may probably safely claim the championship when it comes to raising large tomatoes. From his garden he recently picked two of the Mammoth Tree variety, one weighing two and three-quarters pounds and the other two and one-half pounds. The larger one was the tenth picked from the same stalk.

The saloon of P. F. O'Neil of Rutland was entered Monday evening and about 35 quarts of the best liquor in the shop was taken off. The thieves made their entrance by cutting out a piece of the door and turning the key. The cash register was rifled of about $10 in addition to the carrying off of the liquor.

Mrs. Bert Cole of Morrisville sustained a painful accident last week when her left arm was caught in a cream separator wheel. She was reaching past the machine when the cogs caught her dress and drew her arm into the machinery. Two long gashes were torn in the arm one eight and the other six inches in length.

Charles Phelps of St. Johnsbury had a narrow escape from death Wednesday evening as he was riding a bicycle handcar, loaded with ties. A special train from Crawford Notch overtook him suddenly near St. Johnsbury and he had time to jump before the train caught the truck. The hand car was demolished while the train was uninjured.

Walter Underhill, who works on the Miles farm in Randolph, while drawing a load of bark Saturday, met with a painful accident. As he was going down a steep hill he felt the bark slipping and before he could save himself he was under the heels of the horses. He received a kick in the face and the wagon passed over his chest. He will be unable to work for some time.

Two Greeks which were brought to Woodford from New York by D. A. Gleason to work at fern picking wandered away from their companions Saturday afternoon and became lost in the wilds of the Taconic mountain. The two men wandered about until they reached a road to Wilmington Sunday afternoon. They took the train from there to North Adams and from there to Bennington reaching home just as a search party was being organized.

KENT GOES TO WATERBURY.

Brother of Elroy Kent to Be Sent to State Hospital for Observation.

Brattleboro, Oct. 1.—After a consultation in the Windham county court at Newfane yesterday afternoon, between Attorney General J. G. Sargent, Judge Alfred Ball, State's Attorney Charles H. Williams and R. C. Bacon, attorney for Fred Kent of Rutland, who was indicted a short time ago by the grand jury, charged with the murder of his father, George Kent of Townshend, it was decided with much deliberation to send Kent to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Waterbury. Kent was once an inmate of this institution but escaped, as did his brother, Elroy Kent. The sentence was made without trial and the indictment was continued.

A MEMORABLE YEAR.

For Forest Fire Destruction in The United States.

Forest fires are causing considerable damage in many parts of the country at present. It will be several months before the total destruction is known, for the fire season has considerable time to run. In figuring out this year's losses it will be natural to make comparison with losses for last year which, according to Treadwell Cleveland, jr., in the Year Book of the Department of Agriculture, will cause 1903 to long be remembered.

"A dry season, combined with what seemed to be even more than the usual indifference toward small fires which might easily have been extinguished at the start," says Mr. Cleveland, "caused destructive conflagrations in practically every state, with losses aggregating $100,000,000. In comparison with the havoc wrought elsewhere, the damage done to the National Forests was exceedingly slight. Had fires raged within the forests as they did outside, they would have destroyed timber worth $30,000,000—enough to run the Forest Service for six years. Moreover, it is practically certain that most if not all of the damage which was done might have been prevented had the forests been fully manned."

"Finally, the estimates of loss made by the service on National Forests are particularly searching, and take full account of the injury done to young growth. Commonly, estimates of loss from forest fires are based upon the damage done to standing timber and to property; they do not reckon the usually far greater loss in injury or destruction of young growing stock."

The methods by which the government keeps down the fire losses on the National Forests include:

1. Constant and systematic patrol by picked forces or rangers and guards;
2. The construction of roads, trails, and telephone lines, which facilitate the massing of large fire-fighting forces;
3. The construction of fire lines which, in some instances, check the spread of fire without human help;
4. The equipment of the forests with fire-fighting tools and other supplies necessary in fighting fires. The supplies of tools are kept at convenient points at all times, in order to have them easily accessible to forest officers, in case fires break out;
5. Co-operation with railroads, timberland owners, and settlers in fire protection, in this way making it possible to protect both the lands of the companies and the Forest Service at a much smaller cost to the government than would be the case were the National forest lands alone protected by the local officers.

Just as the practice of forestry is important in the movement for the conservation of all natural resources, so is the protection of forests from fires important in the furtherance of rational forest work. In fact, forestry in many instances means nothing more than conservative lumbering and the prevention of forest fires. Uncle Sam realizes that only through the wise use and care of the forests will it be possible to make natural timberland permanently productive. The practice of forestry does not mean abbreviating the use of the land. Instead, conservative lumbering and protection of the young growth from fire will bring about a steadily increasing use, for with cultivation and care the yield of the forest increases and the product improves in the same way that the value of the farm increases under a proper system of management.

50 Per Cent. of the Population of the United States live in rural districts remote from physicians or drug stores, and they are obliged to depend upon proprietary medicines to a very great extent.

To the women in these homes such standard remedies as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound come as a boon and a blessing. Records show that it has cured more women of those dread feminine ills than any other remedy.

IS LEPROSY CONTAGIOUS?

Specialists Still Doubtful Whether One Person Can Give It to Another.

There is possibly no disease the presence of which inspires greater fear in the public mind than does leprosy. This is perhaps in a measure due to the loathsomeness of the disease in its later stages, but it is in most cases simply fear of a name.

The disease of diseases spoken of as leprosy in the Bible is popularly supposed to be the same as the leprosy of to-day, and the evident fear the leper inspired in the people of old is held to justify the dread with which he is still regarded. The Biblical descriptions do not, however, fit modern leprosy, so that whether the fear of the "leper" of olden times was or was not justified, it should not be allowed to color the view with which the leper of to-day is regarded.

Leprosy is indeed an infectious disease; that is to say, it is due to the presence in the tissues of a bacillus, known generally as Hansen's bacillus, after the Norwegian physician who discovered it; but whether it is contagious under the ordinary conditions of modern life in temperate climates, at least, is held by specialists in diseases of the skin to be very doubtful.

Of the few lepers known to the physicians in all the larger cities, some are cared for in hospitals, others live at home and visit the clinics or the doctor's office from time to time; yet an instance in which another person has acquired the disease from any of these lepers is unknown.

There are many diseases more to be dreaded than leprosy because more rapidly fatal, more painful or more contagious, yet none of them except perhaps smallpox is more feared.

The illogical terror of leprosy may be the cause of great cruelty to those afflicted. There are thousands of people who show culpable indifference to the enforcement of the laws against spitting in public places, although they know full well that the success of the crusade against tuberculosis hinges largely upon care in this regard. Yet these same persons would fly in horror from any place that had harbored a leper.—Youth's Companion.
