ITALY AND THE ITALIAN ISLANDS: from the Earliest Ages to the Present Time. With Engravings, and Illustrative Maps and Plans. By WILLIAM SPALDING, Esq. Professor of Rhetoric in the University of Edinburgh. Vols. 151—153, Harpers' Family Library.

These volumes are republished from the Edinburgh Cabinet Library—a series of popular works remarkable for the ability with which they are written; and most of which have appeared, we believe, in the Messrs. Harpers' Family Library. The plan of the work is similar to that of other historical works in the same collection—embracing, in connection with the historical details, a separate view of the social, intellectual and political condition of the country at different periods, and an account of its antiquities, scenery and most striking physical peculiarities. All this has been done in a masterly manner—the author, in addition to a profound study of his subject, having familiarized himself with the present state of Italy, by a residence in the country. The work is divided into three parts devoted respectively to the three great stages in the past fortunes of mankind—the Classical times—the Dark Ages, and the succeeding centuries assigned to modern history. The first volume treats successively the history of the Roman Republic and Empire, the literature, art and topography of those times, and the character and habits of the heathen nation. The second traces the Christian Antiquities of Italy till the fall of the Western Empire, and comprehends the thousand years between the usurpation of Odoacer and the consolidation of modern polity at the close of the fifteenth century. The third gives a history of the events that have occurred since the French Revolution, and contains a full account of Italian Art and Literature in the nineteenth century. It is an exceedingly valuable and interesting work.

THE AMERICAN ECLECTIC. Vol. III., No. 9. May, 1842. Platt & Peters, 56 Park Row.

The admirers of MACAULAY will be gratified to see his masterly review of the Life and Character of Warren Hastings reprinted in this number of the Eclectic from a late Edinburgh Review. It is in every respect one of the most powerful papers of the day, and is well worthy the eighty pages it occupies. 'The Steppes of Southern Asia,' from the Asiatic Journal; 'Notes on Russia,' from the Polytechnic Journal;' 'Polish Literature,' and an article from the Archæologist entitled 'Persecutions of Witches in Germany in the Sixteenth Century,' are among the remaining contents. One of the most valuable papers is that on the 'Ice Period,'—translated from a German Review by Prof. AGNEW—of which the first part was given in a previous number. A variety of valuable literary articles conclude the number.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO ACADEMIC LITERATURE: By CHARLES H. LYON. H. & S. Raynor, 76 Bowery.

The author has in this little volume undertaken to furnish a collection of passages, of his own composition, for declamation in schools, as a substitute for the hackneyed extracts from Cicero, Burke, Sheridan, Chatham, Everett, Webster, and other great orators, with which our School Books are now filled. How far such a work was needed, teachers are the best qualified judges; how well Mr. Lyon has supplied it—supposing it to exist—we have not read his book with attention enough to say. The passages seem to be well written, and embrace valuable though not very original opinions and sentiments.

ORATION BEFORE THE HIBERNIAN PROVIDENT SOCIETY of New-Haven: By W. E. ROBINSON.

This is the title of a pamphlet of sixty-four pages, containing an account of a public celebration of this Society, held on the last St. Patrick's Day, with Songs furnished for the occasion by J. G. PERCIVAL, JOHN PIERPONT and others, and the Oration delivered by Mr. Robinson. The Oration gives a sketch of Irish History, with full notices of their traditions, and an exposition of the unfavorable circumstances under which, as a nation, she has always lived. Interesting personal sketches are embraced. It is a valuable address, and contains many facts not generally known concerning Irish History. From a note at the conclusion, for instance, upon the claims to great antiquity that Ireland has preferred, we learn that 'Seth, the son of Adam, visited Ireland with the fair daughter of the cursed Cain,' and that 'Noah's niece Cassera arrived in Ireland the Wednesday morning before the flood!' Some Irishmen also claim that Homer stole his heroes from Irish History, and say that Diomede is only the modern name for Dermod McTeddy, and that Achilles is only another way to spell Ashill Mac Phaill.

☞ ISRAEL POST, 38 Bowery, has just published No. 25 of that most valuable publication of the season—the complete works of Lord BACON. This number finishes the second volume and commences the third and last. The works of Sir WALTER SCOTT have reached their seventeenth number, which continues his Life of Napoleon. THIERS's History of the French Revolution, Nos. 49 and 50, have also just been issued.

☞ THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA AMERICANA,—DICKENS's complete works and COOPER's Sea Tales No. XVI have just been published by George S. Curry & Co. 155 Broadway. These publications have rarely been published in a neater, cheaper or more convenient form than in this edition.

☞ THE METROPOLITAN for April has just been published by Mrs. Mason. It contains a variety of valuable and interesting matter.

CANADA TRADE—IMPORTANT FACTS.—The Montreal Courier has a letter showing that the rate of toll by the Rideau Canal are this year raised from about one cent to more than 4 cents a mile, on the average! The trade between Montreal and the Upper Lakes will be greatly injured by this heavy addition to the expense of transit.

Last year, Port Stanley, on Lake Erie, and two other shipping places a few miles from it, exported 46,000 bushels of wheat, 2000 barrels flour, and 1400 of Pork, and imported 5400 barrels of salt, and 3000 tons merchandize. Twenty years ago, there were scarcely 500 bushels exported at these places.

Last year there were transported through the Welland Canal, from the U. S. to U. S. ports, 946,142 bushels of wheat and 11,258 barrels of flour, and from United States to Canadian ports 40,964 barrels flour, 22,307 of pork, and 367,261 bushels of wheat—also from Canadian ports on Lake Ontario, 120,893 barrels of flour, 514 barrels of pork, and 266,934 bushels of wheat. These facts respecting the Welland Canal, are new to most people, and they will be interesting to most readers. [Roch. Eve. Post.

To the Laboring Classes.

You form in all Countries, as we said in a previous article, the great bulk of the Population. It is you who cultivate and fertilize the Earth,—who build the Cities and Fleets of the World,—who construct its Roads, Canals, Railways and other Internal Improvements, and who create by your Industry the means of the physical Happiness and Greatness of Man.

You perform a mighty work on the Earth, and it would seem, if justice were done, that you should stand high in Society. Your Labor, combined with the fertility of the Soil, is the source of all Wealth, and it would seem also that you should participate largely in the enjoyment of the Riches of the World. Is this so? do you stand high, and are you wealthy? No, far from it: in every age and in every country, with one or two exceptions, you have been or are still, poor, oppressed, despised and degraded,—and by those even who live upon and are great by your Labor. In some countries you are taxed to starvation to support in luxurious affluence a titled Aristocracy; in others you wear out your souls and bodies in repugnant Toil to create Products for Commerce to speculate upon, and to support in affluence an Aristocracy more rapacious still,—that of the Purse.

In order to show you how oppressed, despised and down-trodden you have always been, we will glance at your condition in different ages and countries. Your condition has varied somewhat at different epochs, and you have also in different ages borne different names. In our present Societies you are called the LABORING, or WORKING CLASSES, and sometimes OPERATIVES.

In the Middle Ages you were SERFS,—attached to the Soil, and sold with it like mere fixtures. This is still your condition in Russia, Poland, Hungary and a small portion of Germany.

In Antiquity you were SLAVES,—the property of a minority of your fellow men, and sunk to a level with beasts of burthen; you could be scourged and your lives taken from you if the caprice of the Master willed it.

In India you are PARIAHS and other degraded castes.

Thus, in looking over the history of the World, we find that the great majority of the Human Race,—they who are engaged in producing, and who do the labor of the World, have been at one time Slaves, at another Serfs, at another Pariahs, and that now they are the Laboring Classes

Let us examine briefly the condition of these different Classes,—commencing with the Pariahs, the lowest of them all. "This numerous Tribe," says the Rev. H. Caunter, "are in a condition of the most abject degradation; the worst state of bondage would be comparative klessedness. They are considered by the higher order of Hindoos not only utterly despicable in this World, but aliens from the beatitudes of another. The indignities heaped upon them in consequence are repugnant to Humanity; nothing can exceed the heartless scorn with which they are every where met. The laws award no punishment for the murder of a Pariah, save that of a small fine, which is seldom enforced, except in very aggravated cases.—Should a person of any other caste condescend to speak to one of them, he is obliged to put his hand before his mouth, lest the breath of a being so depraved should taint the atmosphere which the former breathes, and thus render him impure. These miserable outcasts are neither allowed to enter a temple nor admitted to the privileges of any Religious communion.

"Abandoned, and smarting under the stigma of unmerited degradation, they frequently repair to the jungles, where they conceal themselves from the sight of those who behold them with such indignity, and live in a state of moral desuetude, prowling savagely for human prey, like the beasts of the forests. Although they occasionally commit acts of great predal enormity, they nevertheless more commonly submit to dreadful privations with the greatest fortitude, frequently skulking from the jungles, where they have lived upon the fruits of the forest until these have ceased to supply the cravings of Nature, and seeking the banks of the Ganges, where, under the cover of night, and with no eye but that of the casual passenger to behold them, they have been known to drag on shore human carcases that were floating down the stream, and, like the hungry vulture, satisfy the longings of a morbid appetite upon this unnatural provision, while in a state of the most disgusting decomposition."

How awful to reduce any of the members of the great Family of Man to such a condition! How false and accursed must be the Social Institutions which produce such horrible results! Still they are not denounced or condemned. Our false Societies have so deadened the Sentiments and stultified the Intelligence of Man, that his heart can no longer feel for the Elevation, Happiness and Dignity of his Race, or his mind conceive the possibility of attaining those results.

Let us now glance at the condition of the Slaves in Antiquity, who were the Laboring Classes of those times. In modern civilized countries, Slavery, with a few exceptions, has been abolished; but in Antiquity, it was universal. The Slaves were of the same color as the Freemen, and were mostly prisoners and their descendants taken in War. We will examine their condition in the Republic of Athens, which was so celebrated for its Statesmen, Orators and Philosophers.

The majority of the Population was Slaves, while only a small minority was Freemen. At one time there were Four Hundred Thousand Slaves to Twenty Thousand Free Citizens. The Slave was the personal Property of the Master, and completely at his disposal; the latter could kill the former by paying a small fine. The Philosophers of Antiquity believed that Slavery could not be done away with, but would exist eternally.—Aristotle thought that no virtue was suited to a Slave, and in his work on Politics he says:—"The science of the Master consists in knowing how to make use of his Slave. He is the Master, not because he is the owner of the Man, but inasmuch only as he makes use of his property. The Slave is a part of the Wealth of the family."

Xenophon suggested the propriety of selling all Slaves as public property and letting them out on daily hire to those who offered the highest salaries. "This measure," says he "would augment the public revenue, and in order to prevent the slaves from escaping with impunity, they might be seared on the forehead with the stamp of Athens!" The most humble citizen had at least one slave as a domestic drudge; and such horrible atrocities were known to be perpetrated as to pluck out the eyes of Slaves that they might turn a hand-mill without having their attention taken off. To judge how near their condition, as a general thing, was reduced to that of animals, we have only to know that they were regularly sent to the river to drink with the horses!

Such, Laboring Classes, was your condition in Antiquity. To-morrow we will examine your condition in our civilized Societies.
