ABOUT THE STATE

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST FROM DIFFERENT SECTIONS

Andrew Thornton of West Rutland has two kittens on exhibition that have only three legs each. One leg on each kitten extends for a short distance from the body. They appear to be in perfect health.

William Frizzell of St. Johnsbury has filed a petition in bankruptcy with Clerk F. S. Platt of the United States court. He has liabilities of $356.88 and assets of $110.

Vergennes has received word from headquarters that the United States government has no money at present to put into the widening and deepening of the channel of the Otter creek at that place, and that the restoration of the channel is dependent entirely on congressional action.

"Cyclone" Taylor, the self-termed evangelist whose actions so wrought up the people of Forestdale that they refused to let him speak there again, left the place Friday night. In the meantime, prominent Brandon men had appealed to Governor Gates to prevent his speaking, fearing there might be a real riot. Taylor left of his own accord.

The pipe organ industry is beginning to take on a brighter outlook than at any time since the war began, and the Estey Organ Co. at Brattleboro has gone back to full time, a number of men being taken back who were dropped at the outbreak of the war. The only serious drawback is the excessively high price of zinc.

The Wardsboro catamount, the last cougar killed in Vermont, in November, 1875, is to become a part of the collection of the Boston Society of Natural History, having been purchased from its owner, Chelsea Harrington, a Bennington taxidermist. The catamount, many years ago, was taken to Paris to be used as a model by Bartlette, the sculptor, in the creation of the life-sized bronze that marks the site of the Catamount tavern at Old Bennington.

FEEDING THE BABY.

Some Hints Prepared By U. S. Children's Bureau.

Nothing is so dangerous to a baby's health as wrong feeding; nothing so important to his healthy development as proper feeding.

For the first nine months, breast milk is the only food a baby should have, except a little pure drinking water. If the breast milk is not sufficient, it may need to be supplemented, as directed in a previous article of this series, with properly prepared cows' milk given in a bottle.

For the baby between nine and 12 months of age, certain foods may be carefully added to this diet, a list of which was given in the preceding article.

For a healthy baby at the beginning of its second year, the same diet may be used and as the child grows, various foods may be added. He may now take undiluted cows' milk, and well-cooked cereals twice a day, in addition to fruit juice, broth and dried bread.

At 15 months he may have a little rare beef, or well-cooked chicken or mutton. Meat for a baby should be broiled, roasted or boiled, never fried, and should be given to the baby scraped or finely minced.

The following are sample meals for a healthy child from 18 months to two years old: (An ounce is two tablespoonfuls.)

7 a. m.—Milk, eight to 10 ounces; piece of zwiebach, toast or dried bread.

9 a. m.—Orange juice, two ounces.

10 a. m.—Cereal, two tablespoonfuls; cup milk.

2 p. m.—Broth, six ounces; meat, one tablespoonful; vegetable (spinach), one tablespoonful; stale bread, one piece; baked apple, one to two tablespoonfuls.

6 p. m.—Cereal, one and a half tablespoonfuls; milk, six to eight ounces; toast or bread.

10 p. m.—Milk, eight ounces in cup (may be omitted).

The following rules for cooking and preparing certain of these articles may be helpful to mothers:

Toast—Bread one day old cut in very thin slices; slices placed on edge in a toast rack in an oven to dry. Leave oven door partly open.

Broth—Of round steak, one pound; of water, one pint. Put the meat on in cold water and allow it to come to a boil, then lower the flame so that it barely simmers for three or four hours. Remove the meat and add enough water to make up the original amount of liquid; strain through a wire sieve and set aside to cool. When cold the fat is removed in a solid piece, leaving a clear liquid or jelly. Heat a small portion when it is time to feed the baby. Keep the jelly covered and on ice.

Meat—One tablespoonful. Take meat, round or sirloin steak, scraped with a silver spoon. When you have the desired amount, shape into a pat and broil on a hot, dry spider. When done, add a little salt. Or, a piece of rare round or sirloin steak, the outer part having been cut away, is scraped or shredded with a knife.

Spinach—Cook spinach in salted water until tender. Pour cold water over it and drain. Rub through a fine sieve.

Baked apple—Apple baked three-quarters of an hour. Skin and core removed; two tablespoonfuls of pulp strained through a fine sieve.

Cereal: Flour preparations—Cereal preparation, three-fourths of a cup, cooked with one quart of water for three-fourths of an hour in a double boiler. Add enough water to keep moist.

Oatmeal—Have a pint of water boiling in the top of the double boiler; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and drop in gradually one-half cup of oatmeal flakes, stirring all the while. Cook for three hours and strain through a wire sieve. Pour on one to two ounces of milk.

Never give a baby cakes, candy, doughnuts, pastry, fresh bread, griddle cakes, syrup, molasses, pork, or tough meat of any kind, bananas, over-ripe fruits, pickles, tea, coffee, soda water, beer, or tastes of foods from the family table, especially during hot weather.

Additional directions for feeding older babies and rules for cooking meat and vegetables for their use are given in a bulletin published by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, Washington, D. C. This publication, "Infant Care," is sent free to all who apply for it.
