Mr. Marshall's Last Speech.

[Concluded.

It is strange, gentlemen, that all men do not join us—it is passing strange that man should set on fire his soul and shame thus the glory of his nature. No other animal does it. God never made a drunkard, and we do not find one among another class of beings on the Earth than among the human species, and even there they are unknown until man has made a drunkard of himself; he is not made so by the Creator. No animal on the earth will drink alcohol but man—man who is imbued not only with the principle of life but with another and a higher life—breathed from the very nostrils of his Creator—by which he became not only a living animal but a living soul; man destined to immortality; man made a little lower than the angels—man, the lord of all other creatures—to whom is given the dominion over every beast of the earth and over every fowl of the air—man to whom is imparted the principle of reason which gives him the control of all the earth and of all that occupies it; man, by the use of this alcohol, consents to destroy all his powers and to his own utter and eternal ruin. Let no man be offended at what I say in describing the drunkard—and indeed I am never afraid of any man's regarding what I say about the drunkard as personal to himself—for I never saw one yet who regarded it as directed against himself. I have been classed among them—but I never would acknowledge it, nor am I able to acknowledge it yet. And this is another effect of drinking—it makes the man a strong advocate against himself—forcing him to shut his eyes to the truth and never allowing him to convince himself a drunkard until he is past all hope of return.

But to Temperate drinkers let me make a last appeal.—There never was an intemperate drunkard who was not a temperate drinker first—there never was a man who commenced the first glass of alcohol that did not demand a second—and there never was a man led to ruin and to death by this vice who would not confess that he was led into it by this same habit of temperate drinking. I heard a man tell his own history the other evening in his own strong thrilling language—a man who now sits within the hearing of my voice, and he stated a fact which quite astonished me—and which, in fact, rather upsets my theory on the subject. He said that the first time he tasted rum he taste it—he was a sort of natural—a born drunkard—and for his whole life from childhood till twelve months ago he has been a drunkard. But he took the pledge and has never drank since—He told of the terrible agonies he endured for a few days after he gave it up—for, remarkable as it may appear, a three fold man had that most terrible disease, delirium tremens—and he described the horrors of that most horrible of all diseases, and even the fiends which clung around him—and—chattering and whispering all manner of things in his ear, could not induce him to touch a drop of alcohol—and he is safe—I tell every man who has imbibed an appetite for alcohol to listen to me. Take the pledge and you are safe. I look it—and when I took it—O what horrors did I experience—not of the delirium—for thank God I never experienced that;—but I felt that if I yielded to this accursed appetite that once I was lost for ever. I found that I—a Temperate drinker, or a Reformer as I called myself—I found that I was approaching that line which if I passed I should become that loathsome thing—a drunkard—and I never felt it lives so strong, so terrible a desire to be free from the thraldom in which I found myself involved; never did I shrink from any thing with such horror. I would have grasped—so help me God!—an iron bar heated to a white heat and held it till it had burned to the bone if I could have thrown away that appetite that was destroying my peace and making me a thing for which there is no place in the whole boundless universe of God. (Cheers.) I sought relief—I took the pledge, and have never wanted to drink since; and I would not drink again—I would not have that appetite return—not if this earth were one perfect mass of the chrysolite—set all over with the richest gems of Golconda—not if the greatness of New-York had reached the high point of glory and of wealth which twenty-five or fifty years must give it—when it shall be the emporium of the riches of the whole world—when all the earth shall pour into its broad lap all the wealth and products of all lands—for circulation and distribution—when this shall be the mercury heart of all the world whose every pulsation shall send comfort and plenty to every part of the earth—no! not if all this wealth, when this great city shall have reached that highest point of opulence—were placed at my feet—by my honor and by my soul I would not have that appetite return,—I would spurn the bribe and cling to my pledge in life and in death. [Cheers.]

And why should I not? Why should I give my soul in exchange for the whole world? Why should I sell my manhood and become a brute? O, no! Make me what slave you please; make me a criminal—steep me in poverty to the very lips—make me a fixed object for scorn to point to—show, unmoving finger at;—steep me in every hellish crime—lead me to prison, and from prison to a felon's death—but let me die a man—O God! do n't let me die a drunkard! [Cheers.]

I am right—I assure you I am right—and let the young, the gay, the gallant, take this pledge and cling to it as the anchor of their hope. There is no gloom, there is no fanaticism in all this. If ever I was a gentleman, I am as much one now as ever in the whole course of my life. If I ever was fond of society—of refined, intelligent society—I am just as fond of it now as ever in my life. If ever the smiles of beauty—perhaps I am getting a little too old for that now—but if ever they had a charm for me—if they ever appeared in my eyes bright and glorious before—I am sure that they were never more joyous and grateful to my heart than they are this very evening. [Cheers.] If ever I had an armed a will to draw the sword in defence of the honor of my country, or mine own personal honor—that sword would leap from its scabbard as soon now as it ever would. If ever I was a professor of honor and chivalry—if I ever enrolled myself among that class who feel an imputation on their honor as a deadly insult, for which they would shed their blood and lay down their lives—make out a fair case and I am just as ready now as ever in my life. A gentleman does not cease to be a gentleman because he is a Washingtonian. Why, from whom do we take our name? and what a glorious idea was that! Washingtonians—are we? and from one GEORGE WASHINGTON I believe we take our title; and if he were alive now—and would the Lord his life might have been spared for ever—he would have been at our head. [Cheers.] My word for it, gentlemen and ladies, no man is less a gentleman for being a Washingtonian—not a whit less. The only difference is—this now he is a gentleman all the time, and before only sometimes when you could have caught him sober. That's just the odds; and if he was not a gentleman before, let him come among us and we'll make a gentleman of him. We are not fair subjects, then, for them—for a charge of fanaticism. Really, now, a cold water fanatic—curious idea, isn't it? I'd like to see a man become a fanatic on cold water.

But I have spoken in a more desultory fashion than I usually do in my addresses on this subject. But having expounded all my argument before upon this topic, I shall, I trust be excused from wandering a little to-night. But I have seen enough to convince myself that the influence of this great city—this emporium of wealth and commerce, which may be powerful either for good or evil—is henceforth to be thrown into the scale of sobriety and temperance.

I would, before I close, say a word or two in relation to myself.—Gentlemen and Ladies. It must be long ere I shall forget the reception I have met with here. It is the first and perhaps it will be the last time I shall ever be in New-York. I did not join the Temperance Society early enough; I waited so long that I must now quit public affairs and attend to the affairs of private life, and endeavor to repair my private matters from the injury they have sustained. It is most probable, therefore, that I shall never again be in the city of New-York; and yet I feel most deeply alive to you for the attention you have paid me. I came some ten days since, I may say, an utter stranger among you. You had heard of me, I believe, but you had heard nothing but evil; and since I have been in your city I have been made the object of renewed attack, and have been described in language well calculated to make me odious in such a polished and refined society as this. I was not surprised at the attention I received at first, for I expected that curiosity to see such a thing would draw a large crowd to this place. But now for a second and third time you have shown me the same generous kindness, will you pardon me if say that I do not feel it necessary for me to stir one step to make one effort to sponge from my escutcheon the stains attempted to have been cast upon it? You! You have done that for me, (others.) It is a sufficient reply to say that has been or that may be said against me; it is a sufficient reply, I say, that three times five three thousand ladies and gentlemen assembled to hear the truth from such lips as mine. That's honor enough and reply enough to any thing that may be said against me. I will make no further reference to these attacks. They are unworthy of the occasion—they are unworthy of you, and they are entirely unworthy of myself. Permit me, then, at the close, to thank you for the kindness which you have evinced to me, and the strong interest you have felt in my behalf in this great cause of truth. Never shall I forget the gratitude which I owe you. Never, gentlemen of City Hose No. 35, shall I forget the kind compliment you paid me upon my first arrival among you; never shall I forget the gratitude which I owe you, which will hold along as veins fill its thousand arteries stir in eternal red.

The following letter is from an intelligent sea-captain, just returned from the Pacific ocean. It gives information of the progress of the British appropriation of the trade, and all the accessible regions of the Northern Pacific, which should be impressed upon the American public. [Globe.

BOSTON, May 1, 1842.

SIR: Thinking it may be interesting or important to you to know of some of the late operations and present plans of the British Hudson's Bay Company in the North Pacific ocean, I beg leave to present to your notice some facts in relation to the same, and which have come to my knowledge from personal observation, or from sources entitled to the fullest credit.

All that extensive line of coast comprehending the Russian possessions on the northwest coast of America, from Mount St. Elias south to the latitude of 54° 40' north, (the last being the boundary-line between the Russian and American territories,) together with the sole and exclusive right or privilege of frequenting all ports, bays, sounds, rivers, &c., within said territory, and establishing forts and trading with the Indians, has been leased or granted by the Russian-American Fur Company to the British Hudson's Bay Company, for the term of ten years from January, 1842; and for which the latter are to pay, annually, four thousand fur seal skins, or the value thereof in money, at the rate of thirty-two shillings each—say £6,400 sterling, or $30,720.

In the above-named lease the Russians have, however, reserved to themselves the island of Sitka, or New Archangel; in which place, you probably are aware, the Russians have a large settlement—the depot and headquarters of the fur trade with the Fox Islands, Aleutian Islands, and the continental shore westward of Mount St. Elias. All the trading establishments of the Russians lately existing at Tumgass—Stickene, and other places within said territory, leased to the Hudson's Bay Company, have of consequence been broken up. Thus the Hudson's Bay Company, not content with monopolizing the heretofore profitable trade of the Americans, of supplying the Russian settlements on the northwest coast, have now completely cut them off also from all trade with the most valuable fur regions in the world.

Whether the arrangements made between the Russians and English, above alluded to, are conformable to the treaties existing between the United States on the one part, and those nations respectively on the other, I leave to your better knowledge to determine.

With the doings of the Hudson's Bay Company at Puget's Sound and the Columbia river, you are doubtless fully informed; those, however, lately commenced by them in California will admit of my saying a few words.

At San Francisco they purchased a large house, and a trading establishment and depot for merchandise; and they intend this year to have a place of the same kind at each of the principal ports in Upper California. Two vessels are building in London, intended for the same trade—that is, for the coasting trade; and after completing their cargoes, to carry them to England. These things, with others, give every indication that it is the purpose of the Hudson's Bay Company to monopolize the whole hide and tallow trade of the coast of California—a trade which now employs more than half a million of American capital.

At the Sandwich Islands the company have a large trading establishment, and have commenced engaging the commerce of the country, with evident designs to monopolize it, if possible, and to drive off the Americans, who have heretofore been its chief creators and conductors.

I have been informed by one of the agents of the Hudson's Bay Company, that the agricultural and commercial operations of the English at Puget's sound, Columbia river, California, and Sandwich Islands, are carried on, not actually by the Hudson's Bay Company, but by what may be termed a branch of it—by gentlemen who are the chief members and stockholders of said company, and who have associated themselves under the firm of Pelly, Simpson, & Co., in London, and with a capital of more than $15,000,000!

Seeing these companies, then, marching with iron footsteps to the possession of the most valuable portion of country in the Northern Pacific; and considering, too, the immense amount of their capital, the number, enterprise, and energy of their agents, and the policy pursued by them, great reason is there to fear that American commerce in that part of the world must soon lower its flag. But, sir, it is to be hoped that our Government will soon do something to break up the British settlements in the Oregon Territory, and thereby destroy the source from which now emanate the most dire evils to American interests in the Western World. In the endeavor to bring about this desirable object, you have done much; and every friend to his country, every person interested in the commerce of the Pacific, must feel grateful for the valuable services rendered them by you.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

HENRY A. PRICE.

MEDICATED CANDIES.—Dr. Fleming's WORM CANDY is undeniably the most perfectly adapted to the total extermination of Worms in children or adults, of any thing of the kind ever prepared. Children like it, and it is warranted vegetable and perfectly safe in its effects.

His DIARRHŒA CANDY, prepared from his celebrated Quaker Balm, is a sure remedy in all bowel complaints. In diarrhœa, attendant on the last stage of consumption, it is most soothing and salutary. It is pleasant, safe and certain.

His CATHARTIC CANDY certainly opens a new era in medical compounds. For cleansing and invigorating the stomach and bowels, removing obstructed humors, for costiveness, sallow habits, colds, fever, jaundice, headaches, and indeed in all cases where physic is required, this candy is one surpassed—beside, it is so pleasant to take as peppermint candy.

His DINNER CANDY, for costiveness, indigestion, distress after eating, heartburn, &c. &c., is recommended as one of the best stomachics and tonics now in use. And then it is so handy and safe.

The rapidly increasing sale and popularity of these pleasant preparations prove their utility.

COVERT'S BALM OF LIFE, for all affections of the lungs and windpipe, dyspepsia, &c. &c. is an unequalled remedy, read the following:

NOTICE to RUPTURED PERSONS.—Dr. A. G. HULL, No. 4 Vesey street, Astor House, New-York.—Persons afflicted with Ruptures may rely upon the best instruments and the world affords, on application at his office, 4 Vesey street, New-York, or at the office of his numerous agents in the chief towns of the United States. Parents must be careful to examine the back part of Dr. Hull's Trusses, to see if they are endorsed by Dr. Hull in writing. None other are genuine or to be relied on as good. Dr. Hull guarantees cures to all otherwise incurable patients who call at his office for treatment. If the cure be not radical and permanent, so as to preclude the necessity of wearing any truss whatever, the money advanced is to be returned on the expiration of the term specified for the cure, whatever progress the rupture may have made toward consolidation.

Children under twelve years universally cured, without further expense than the cost of the Truss. The medical cure has been under progressive practical improvement for more than twenty years past, at Dr. Hull's Truss Office, and is now brought to a state of unrivaled perfection.

Many treacherous agents have undertaken to vend imitations of Dr. Hull's celebrated Hinge and Pivot Truss for the easy and safe retention of Ruptures. These imitations cannot be relied on—they are made by unskillful surgeons and mechanics, and are no better than the ordinary Trusses of the market. The genuine have no full name in writing.

AMOS G. HULL & CO.

Dr. Hull has at the request of several respectable physicians, fitted up a room exclusively for Ladies, having separate entrance from the business department, where a lady is in constant attendance, to apply Trusses and Supporters to female patients.

THE TRUSSES AND SUPPORTERS of Dr. Hull's invention continue to receive my decided preference. For twenty years past I have employed the Trusses of Dr. Hull with success. The Supporter was invented in 1831 by the Dr., with my advice and approbation, and I am happy to say that it is exclusively adopted in Europe as well as in this country.

SANDS'S Concentrated Sarsaparilla.—Sarsaparilla is known to be one of the most active purifiers of the blood of any article in the Materia Medica, and with this we compound a number of other medicines selected from the vegetable kingdom, the whole strength of which has been concentrated into a fluid extract of great power. From this extract the Syrup is prepared, one bottle of which is warranted to contain more than three times the strength and medicinal virtue than that of any other kind. For purifying the blood, and removing all humorous humors from the system, such as Scrofula or Kings Evil, Inveterate Cancers, Ulcers, Mercurial Diseases, Fever Sores, Rheumatism, Diseases of the Skin, &c. this Syrup is peculiarly useful. Being a mild yet efficient alterative, it operates gradually but permanently on the constitution. It is an excellent spring and summer purifier, and as proper doses operates as a diaphoretic and laxative, it exerts a peculiar influence over the glandular system, increasing all the secretions and excretions, thereby overthrowing the fixed states of disease, and restoring the patient to a perfectly sound and healthy state. This medicine is highly beneficial in many doubtful cases, and in various complaints in which the constitution is enfeebled and requires to be invigorated. Pains in the bones and legs, and all diseases arising from the improper use of mercury, are effectually cured by its use. Persons making sea voyages will find it a most valuable article to use, as it cleanses the blood and system generally, and prevents every injurious disease.

Testimonials of its value and superior efficiency are daily received. The affected have only to try it, and be convinced.

HAVING presented to the Public the claims of my first premium Cologne for so long, I now take the liberty of laying before them another article of equal worth, viz: "The Virginia Shaving Cream." This vegetable composition I can safely say is unequalled by any now offered to the American public for the pleasure it affords in shaving. It is not only fragrant, producing a rich and lasting lather, but possesses qualities of so highly soothing and healing a nature, as to raise it far above any rivalship. FACTS ARE STUBBORN THINGS. It is a fact that Gourand's Powder Subtile will permanently eradicate all hair from the part where it is applied without the slightest injury to the skin. To be had at the old establishment 67 Walker-street one door from Broadway, and at 347 Broadway, $1 per bottle. Another fact is that Gourand's True Water or Beauty will thoroughly exterminate tan, pimples and all other impurities, and a juvenile healthy appearance and array the hands, neck and arms in radiant whiteness.—Beware of spurious imitations of this celebrated cosmetic, containing mineral astringents utterly ruinous to the skin and complexion and by its repellant action injurious to health. To be had as above—$1 per bottle.

GOURAUD'S VEGETABLE ROUGE
Imparts a delicate roseate tinge, imperceptible by perspiration, or rubbing with a linen cloth. 50 cents per bottle.

GOURAUD'S BLANC D'ESPAGNE,
Or Spanish Lily White, imparts a bright, pure lifelike, alabaster whiteness to the skin, free from the injurious properties generally combined with preparations for this purpose. Put on in elegant boxes at 25 cents each. a21 1w

DR. BARRY and RUFUS LOCKWOOD'S COLLEGIATE and MERCANTILE ACADEMY is now open at 611 Broadway, under auspices favorable to themselves and profitable to such pupils as may be placed under their care. Their well known experience and success in their several departments of Collegiate and Mercantile Instruction warrants them in saying that their establishment presents advantages equal to that of any other in the city. Cards containing terms, &c., may be obtained at the rooms, or at the bookstore of Mr. Roe Lockwood, undersheriff.—April, 1842. a19 1m

RED or GRAY HAIR may be changed to a beautiful auburn or jet black in two or three hours, by using a bottle of the celebrated Italian Dye. It has justly obtained a reputation for surpassing all others now in use, and may be used without the least injury either to the hair or skin. Heretofore the difficulty of procuring a reliable article for coloring the hair has deterred many from attempting it. But now this difficulty is removed, as all who have used the Italian Dye have borne willing testimony of its efficacy. For sale by A B Sands & Co. 273 Broadway, corner of Chambers-st; A B & D Sands, 79 Fulton, corner of Gold-st and 100 Fulton, corner of William-st; and Sands & Co. 77 East Broadway. a19 1m
