THE AMERICAN POLITICIAN: By M. SEARS. Fifth Edition. Boston: E. Leland and W. J. Whiting. (1 vol. 12mo. pp. 552.)

This volume is one of a class which of late has won largely upon popular favor, and we trust is destined to attain a still more general circulation. It embraces the most important American State Papers. It commences with the Declaration of Independence and Federal Constitution, gives the Inaugural and First Message of each President, their Farewell Addresses, important Vetoes, &c. Next, we have a large amount of Statistical information with regard to the Union and the several States—the principal Public Works, Salaries, Population, Qualifications of Voters, &c. &c. In conclusion, we have a hundred pages of condensed Biographies of eminent Americans.

The plan of this work is substantially good and the work itself valuable, though we could suggest some changes. A little more care should have been taken to perfect the Statistical Tables. We find A. G. McNutt set down as Governor of Mississippi, though another swindler (T. M. Tucker) was last November elected in his stead, and J. W. Gordon as Acting do. in Michigan, where John S. Barry was elected at the same time. Pennsylvania is set down as not having changed her Constitution since 1790, overlooking the vital amendments of 1836-7. That of North Carolina has also been essentially amended since 1834, contrary to the averment of this volume. It is a valuable compilation, however, after making all needful deductions.

TRANSACTIONS of The New-York State Agricultural Society, for the year 1841. Albany: T. Weed.

We have here a large octavo of 411 pages, embodying in a reliable shape a large amount of valuable information with regard to the Agriculture, Resources, improvements and Prospects of our State. We hope it will be distributed to every Township, and read by our Farmers generally.

TEMPERANCE CELEBRATION IN PORTLAND.—The Anniversary of the Washingtonian Society of Portland was celebrated on Saturday last in a very spirited manner. The Exchange was surmounted with a brilliant display of flags of this and other nations, and among them the one that floated at the mast head of the Enterprise when she captured the Boxer, blackened and rent by the fury of battle, now unfurled in a still nobler cause, destined to a more glorious triumph. The procession, composed of persons of various classes and members of different Societies, with appropriate banners, was one of the largest and most imposing—so says the Temperance Herald—that was ever witnessed in Portland, and as it passed through the streets spoke a language which no power of rhetoric could equal. The retailer of alcohol demolished his bar immediately after it passed his shop. The people assembled in the First Church, where Addresses apposite to the occasion were delivered by several persons.

WASHINGTONIAN HOUSE IN BANGOR.—We learn from the Bangor Whig that a Temperance House was opened in that city on the 11th inst. by J. P. Fowles, Esq., on which occasion the Washingtonian Society proceeded to the House in a Procession, where an ample table was spread with all the luxuries which the market afforded, and eighty persons sat down to the cheerful board. After the cloth was removed, toasts were offered and speeches made by several individuals. Mr. N. M. Stevens of Dover, remarked, says the Whig, that he had been a hard drinker for twelve years until within fifteen months, and that during this last mentioned period he had traveled thirty-six hundred miles, and had lectured in every town in Piscataquis County except two, and in some of them two or three times; that there were twenty-five hundred Washingtonians in that County, thirteen only of whom had fallen, and eleven of them had been reclaimed. The regeneration in that County had become almost entire.

☞ A most horrible outrage on a young woman was perpetrated near the village of Fulton, Oswego Co. on Monday week, by eight or ten young scoundrels, four of whom are now in jail at Oswego.—We hope their trial will take place before a Judge and Jury who do not hold that systematic abominations are a necessary evil.

☞ A new Orthodox Church is about to be formed in Boston, of which Rev. Mr. KIRK will be Pastor. Its edifice will be erected immediately, but Mr. K. is not at liberty from prior engagements till autumn.

Holding Over.

To the Editor of The Tribune

SIR: Having been a constant reader of your valuable paper, and observing your independence, I am induced to make a few observations on the subject of some of the officers of the Sixth Ward insisting on taking their seats, in consequence of having held the office the preceding year. Mr. Charles Del Vecchio made his appearance at the Board of Assessors, and insisted on his right as one of them, stating that no person was legally elected in said Ward. To Mr. Del Vecchio I have not the least objection; but to the precedent I have, as I think it will hereafter lead to trouble, which the best of our citizens will not have it in their power to resist. Should our opponents be enabled to destroy the Election of the Sixth Ward and carry their views into effect on the grounds taken by His Honor the Mayor, and a new Election should be ordered for the Sixth Ward, the consequence will be that we shall never hereafter have another Election for Charter Officers in this City. We are all well aware that there are in both parties numbers who are violent and inconsiderate; and at the Elections hereafter there may be some Whigs who will, without reflection, destroy the ballots in one District in the Eleventh and some other Loco-Foco Wards, and on the other hand, the Locos may destroy the ballots of one District in the First and other Whig Wards, which it will be impossible for the authorities to prevent. I do hope that our friend Del Vecchio will seriously reflect on the consequences, and come forward, as a good citizen, (which I believe he is,) and decline acting or serving in the present situation of our disputes.

☞ To Travelers.—Gentlemen visiting this City are respectfully invited to stop at the GRAHAM HOUSE, 82 Barclay-street, where a quiet home, pleasant rooms, clean beds, wholesome food, and an atmosphere unpoisoned by alcohol or tobacco, await their acceptance. Those who believe it impossible to live on a rigidly temperate and purely Vegetable Diet without severe privation are requested to give it one trial. The house is very convenient to the business part of the City and to all the Steamboat Landings.—Terms moderate. Gentlemen visiting the City with a part of their Families will find such a home vastly more agreeable than a Hotel. Shower-Baths free. m4 tf

Cash Duties vs. Custom-House Bonds.

In 1835, the Custom-House Bonds taken in New-York amounted to..... $9,964,353
The amount of Bonds in Suit the same year..... 7,167
Or about 7 cents on the..... 100
In 1840, the Bonds taken were..... 4,331,251
The amount in suit same year..... 165,113
Or about $3.90 per $100.
Showing an increase of Bonds in Suit in 1840 over 1835 of about 5,500 per cent.

☞ The facts from which the above deductions are made, are taken from an official statement made the 13th inst. by the Collector of this Port, at the request of the Corresponding Secretary of the Home League—showing the enormous increase of Government losses on Custom-House Credits, which our City papers in the importing interest, uniformly represented as trifling. If all the cost which has been expended in these suits is added, it would make for our National Treasury a very pretty little sum, and would satisfy an immense number of individual claims, which now, for want of being paid, carry distress into many an innocent family. Add to this the whole cost attending the bonding system which cash on the nail would prevent, and it would save the necessity of issuing a very handsome batch of Treasury notes.

Members of Congress are requested to look at the above facts, and remember they apply only to one Port, where the losses in proportion to the amounts are probably much less than the average of other ports, and they are also desired to bear in mind that the amount of losses are constantly and rapidly increasing every year, even in those years when the imports are materially diminished.

Organization of Association.

PRACTICAL DETAILS.

We have endeavored to give, in our last three articles, some idea of the Edifice of an Association. We have shown that people can have their private apartments, and live as retiredly and independently in Association as they now can in their separate houses, to which would be added the immense advantages of the former system.

There are very great disadvantages connected with the system of isolated households, or system which renders it necessary for every family to have a separate house. We will enumerate a very few of them.

Separate houses are very expensive, on account of the immense number of useless walls, kitchens, cellars, garrets, chimneys, fire-places, cisterns, pumps, &c., which are required;—there is no economical system for heating and supplying them with water;—there are great cares and vexations attendant upon overseeing and managing them, to which is to be added faithlessness of servants;—there are no proper places and conveniences for the healthy exercise and agreeable occupation of children, and are in every way entirely unsuited to them;—they absorb the time and attention of women in a round of petty household cares, which have to be gone through with daily and separately in every house; the women are by this means almost entirely debarred from devoting themselves to higher and nobler pursuits, and from taking healthy out-door exercise; and the constant confinement to which they are subjected afflicts them with physical debility and various diseases, out of which grow ill-temper, fretfulness, melancholy, listlessness and intellectual prostration.

Our houses are also unhealthy, particularly in cities, because with each there is connected a sink of filth, and because stinking gutters run before them. In the cities, they are without foliage and a free circulation of air, and in the country they are solitary and admit of no extended social relations.

We could increase greatly this list of defects, but the few given are sufficient to show that the system of isolated households is not the hight of perfection, as is generally supposed. People are so blinded by habit and prejudice that they do not see the glaring defects of the present system of separate houses; we must show them these defects, and induce them to examine impartially the combined architecture of Association, which they will not do readily so long as they are prepossessed in favor of the opposite system.

If the Reader wishes to understand fully the superiority of the combined and unitary architecture of Association over the piece-meal and fragmental architecture of our civilized Societies, let him institute a comparison, both as regards convenience and economy, between the Edifice of an Association and a mass of three hundred houses of the present order, inhabited by as many families.

We will point out a few of the economies, which will put the Reader upon the right track. Three hundred houses require, if we take those of persons tolerably well off, three hundred cellars, kitchens and garrets—five or six hundred chimneys—twelve to fifteen hundred fire-places, stoves or grates—a thousand or more stair-cases—three or four thousand little windows, that seem to gasp for air—as many doors, with locks upon them—a thousand pantries—an immense number of useless division walls, coal-vaults, cisterns, &c.—three hundred sinks, and useless constructions and contrivances of every kind.

The Edifice of an Association, on the contrary, would require but six or eight chimneys—very few grates and fire-places, its doors and windows would be large and airy—its stair-cases spacious and convenient, and every thing would be good and beautiful, combined with the greatest economy, which would result naturally from its system of Unity and Combination.

We will close our remarks upon the Edifices of Association with a few observations upon the spirit of the Architecture of our present Societies, and the spirit of that of the new Social Order, which we advocate; we will then proceed to explain the system of Property.

The spirit of a Society is stamped upon its Architecture.

The Architecture of our Societies bears upon it the impress of their Selfishness, Poverty, Vice, Crime and Discord. They have in consequence their little and isolated dwellings, which are the emblem of the solitary, selfish and distrustful spirit which now reigns; they have their Jails and Penitentiaries, which are emblems of the perversion of the human Passions and of the moral Degradation of Man; they have also their Poor-Houses, their Lunatic Asylums, their Fortifications and Navies, their Dungeons, Scaffolds and Guillotines. Could the Social Falseness and Subversion which now reign be reflected more faithfully than it is in present architectural constructions?

Association will have its Architecture,—and it will be an Architecture of Combination, Unity and Harmony. When Men are associated, when Unity of Interests exist, and when Affluence, Education and Urbanity of manners are general,—then will one vast and elegant Edifice replace hundreds of the isolated and miserable constructions of our civilized Societies;—and when the human Passions are rightly directed and developed, and are usefully employed, and the Energy of the World is directed to great and noble undertakings,—then will our Scaffolds, Prisons, Poor-Houses, and Fortifications and Navies, which are now so necessary, be found useless, and done away with.

All the varieties and kinds of buildings necessary to Man,—such as private Residences, Churches, Libraries, Colleges, Lecture-Halls, Galleries of Fine Arts, Exchanges, Halls of Industry or Manufactories,—which are now divided and scattered, would be united and interwoven into one vast and noble Whole, which will form the Edifice of an Association. And as much as it will excel in architectural beauty and grandeur the narrow and contracted dwelling-house of our present Societies, as much will the intelligent beings who inhabit it, excel in Social Harmony, Wisdom and all the nobler Virtues, the selfish—often ignorant and discordant—Family of the present Order.

MUTUAL INSURANCE.—On Dwelling Houses and Furniture only, profits returned to the Assured. THE HOUSEHOLDERS' MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, Office 46 Wall st., for separating the insurance of Dwelling Houses and Furniture from that of Stores and Merchandize.

It is well known that almost all the losses incurred in the business of insurance, are the result of the burning of valuable stores and costly goods. This increases the expense of insurance to the householder, and may possibly deprive him of the very security for which he pays his premium.

The cash payments or premiums form a fund, which, after paying expenses and losses, is represented by scrip, and issued to the assured in proportion to the amount of their insurance.

This Company is prepared to insure against loss or damage by fire, Dwelling Houses, Household Furniture and all Household Property ordinarily kept in dwelling houses. Every person insuring with this Company is entitled to one vote for each hundred dollars insured.

DIRECTORS.
