DR. RICHARDSON'S celebrated Sherry Wine Bitters.

From the Dover (N.H.) Gazette.

Dr. Richardson's Bitters.—In our columns may be found an advertisement of a Vegetable Bitters, prepared by Dr. S. O. Richardson, of South Reading, Mass. They are, as said to be, undoubtedly composed of a variety of valuable and purely vegetable matter; and from our own experience, as well as others, we can speak highly of their renovating and invigorating effects upon the system. We have a good opinion of the Bitters, as they are not a quack nostrum, but discovered, prepared and vended by a regular physician, a graduate of the college of our own State, and who has said but little in the way of puffing them himself, but leaves it to those who try them to judge themselves. For the diseases that many are liable to, in the spring and summer, such as debility, dyspepsia, bilious and nervous complaints, &c., we do not hesitate to say that these bitters will be found a safe, agreeable and effectual restorative. As good health is one of the greatest of earthly blessings, we would early advise those laboring under such diseases to make a trial of Dr. Richardson's Bitters; they can do no harm, and may do much good, as we are confident in many cases they have. Vegetables and vegetable medicines are unquestionably the most congenial to the human system.

MORE NEWS from the South.—The following communication has just been received from the Rev. Wm. Lewis, Ordinary for Sumpter District:

SUMTERVILDE, S. C., 13th Jan., 1842.

Dr. P. M. Cohen & Co.

Gentlemen—I deem it due to you to communicate the benefit that I have derived from the use of Jayne's Hair Tonic. I have used only one bottle of it, and that with so much success that I am well convinced of its virtue and efficacy.

The Hair is now coming out on my head in places which were perfectly bald, and is still growing and thickening.

I have great confidence in the Hair Tonic, and anticipate from a further application of it the complete restoration of my Hair.

Several gentlemen of my acquaintance have used it, and all of them with great success.

Very respectfully yours, W. LEWIS.

NEWS FROM DOWN EAST.—From a respectable Merchant of Eastport, Me., Aug. 18, 1841.

Doctor Jayne: Please to send me a large supply of your valuable medicines, particularly of the Expectorant, as I have a great demand for them in the British Provinces. A gentleman from Windsor, (Province of New Brunswick) was passing through here on his way to Boston, to get cured of Bronchitis, when I recommended to him your Expectorant. It did the needful for him, and he returned home perfectly cured.

The Expectorant has brought one man to life here after his Physician had given him up, and he had taken nothing for three days. His complaint was called Consumption. I happened to call in and saw him in a very distressed situation. I recommended his wife to try the Expectorant, thinking that it might give him some ease and he would expire with less agony, but he recovered right away. The Doctors blew me up. Yours, &c. in haste. J. BECKFORD.

Prepared only by Dr. D. Jane, 20 South Third-st. Philadelphia. Sold by the agents by the quantity or at retail No. 79 Fulton st. corner of Gold-st.; 100 Fulton st.; 273 Broadway; 77 East Broadway. Price $1. my10 1m* A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists.

WEEPING WILLOWS mournfully wave over the graves of thousands who now might animate the social circles and administer joy to the hearts of relatives and friends; whose eyes might now sparkle with pleasure, and cheeks bloom with the roses of health, if Jayne's Expectorant had been timely administered to them. But they neglected the only remedy which could save them from Consumption, Asthma, and other kindred diseases, and they sank down and died under their affliction. Let the living take warning and immediately commence the use of this pleasant and certain remedy for every pulmonary disease. Prepared only by Dr. D. Jayne, 20 South street, Philadelphia.

MILLINERY GOODS.—STEVENS & GRUMAN, 95 Beaver street, two doors from Pearl street, New-York, would respectfully invite merchants and milliners visiting the city, to call and examine their stock of Millinery and Silk Goods. Their stock is entirely NEW, and has been selected with the utmost care. Having entered the market early, they have had the benefit of FIRST SELECTIONS from the importers and auctions, and having bought their goods for cash, they believe they can offer, not only the cheapest but the best selected assortment of goods in their line to be found in the city. It is their intention to keep constantly on hand goods of the most fashionable kinds, and to do business on the CASH SYSTEM, believing they can make it an object to those wanting goods in their line, to patronize them instead of the credit houses. They rely entirely on the cheapness of their goods for patronage. They attend the auction sales regularly and do get some great bargains which they will sell at a trifling advance from cost. Call and see. STEVENS & GRUMAN.

PROTECTION.—The Petersburg, Va. Intelligencer of the 2d inst. contains an appeal to candid men of all parties in behalf of the Cotton Manufactories of that town. The amount invested and the number of persons entirely dependent on them for support demand the protecting and fostering care of all classes of the community. The whole South is rapidly becoming convinced of the high importance of Protective Legislation. "We fear," says the Richmond Whig, "that the time is not far distant when our great staple will require legislative aid, nor should we be surprised to see the same party that has threatened the dissolution of the Union because of Protection to manufactured Cotton, again threaten it because of the want of sufficient Protection to the raw article." Delegates were appointed in Petersburg to attend the Tariff Convention which was to have been held on the 2d inst. at Lexington, N. C.

MORLEY ERNSTEIN: OR THE TENANTS OF THE HEART.

The Harpers have just published, two volumes in one, this last novel of JAMES. Of course we have not had time to read it—but from the high commendations bestowed upon it by those who have we anticipate a rich treat for our first leisure hour. It is issued in the usual neat and convenient style of the well known publishers, and forms a volume of nearly five hundred and fifty pages. It is sold at the exceeding low price of fifty cents.

A DICTIONARY OF SCIENCE, LITERATURE AND ART. Edited by W. T. Brande, F. R. S. &c. New-York: Wiley & Putnam.

No. II. of this great work has just been published. It is one of the most valuable works for the general scholar ever issued from the press, and must find its way into every library.

☞ WILEY & PUTNAM have just published the Literary News Letter for May. It contains a great number of literary announcements for this and other countries.

☞ The Synod of the Lutheran Church embracing Ohio and Pennsylvania, met at Canton, O., on the 23d ult. The same day they adjourned to attend the laying the corner stone of a Male Seminary and a Church for the English Lutheran Society in that town. They also determined to establish a Lutheran Newspaper at Philadelphia, to be edited by Rev. Mr. Greenawald.

PROF. BUSH'S FIRST LECTURE—SECOND NOTICE.—The second part of Professor Bush's Lecture on Sabbath evening, the first part of which we noticed yesterday, was mainly a consideration of the nature and locality of Heaven; and to this subject he thought what he had already said of a progressive knowledge of the Sacred Scriptures peculiarly applicable. The word Heaven is often used to designate a particular state of being, without any particular reference to locality; but it is also frequently employed in the Bible in such connection as to suggest the idea of a place. In this he believed that the Holy Scriptures had accommodated their instructions to the successive periods of intellectual developement. It is undeniable that there belong to the race, as to the individual, childhood, youth and maturity—each successive stage of existence presenting its own phase of intellectual culture and its own receptivity of knowledge. You cannot talk to a child upon any subject as you would to a man; he sees every thing from a different point and with a different horizon. Nor could the same form of instruction be addressed to the childhood of the race which would be suited to ulterior generations.

The advances that have been made in astronomical science make necessary a language for us different from that addressed to the ancient world. They saw the stars just above them—knew not how distant they were, nor suspected that any existed beyond those their eyes could behold. Their Heaven, then, was just above the solid firmament. But the wondrous inventions of science have, as it were, pushed back for us these stars to an almost infinite distance, and shown to our sight myriads beyond them. So far, then, as regards precise locality, it is not possible for us to think of Heaven as just where the ancients placed it. Some change in this respect is made absolutely necessary by the intellectual progress of the race. We cannot, if we would, entertain precisely the same idea of Heaven as did the ancients.

But there is another change made necessary by this same progress. As we advance in knowledge we naturally become less objective—we look less upon outward things as the sober realities, and are led more and more to regard the world within us as the world of, for us, real and permanent being. We see that happiness depends more upon our own hearts and less upon things around than we had supposed: that Heaven must be situated in our own hearts—if we would have it real for us: that if our affections and thoughts are all in harmony with God and in unison with the law of Right and Love—Heaven is within us and the circumstance of place is of little account.

The views already presented of the Resurrection give additional force to these considerations. The spiritual body with which we shall be clothed may not in its nature sustain the same relation to space as the gross forms of matter with which we are now acquainted. From what has already been advanced, however, it may easily be inferred that after death it is possible that we may dwell near the earth, that we may witness its moral changes and the wondrous dramas enacted upon it. This, certainly, is far more congenial to the feelings than the thought that at the instant of death the soul takes its flight to some unknown region beyond the stars, to dwell forever apart from all the good and beautiful it has loved upon the earth. The most earnest longings of the Christian, moreover, are to behold the fulfilment of those wonderful prophecies recorded in Scripture which relate to the future glories of the Church: why may not part of the happiness of Heaven consist in beholding their full accomplishment? Prof. Bush did not wish to be understood as saying that the soul is always thus to be confined to the earth, nor that it is ever indeed forbidden to wander through immensity; but only that it may thus exist in full accordance with our highest hopes—until the purposes of God shall remove it to other parts of his creation.

Upon these points Prof. Bush did not offer demonstration—but mere suggestions: and in continuing them he said he saw no difficulty in believing that, as the vital principle in this world forms for itself a body, in accordance with and in subjection to the laws of physical existence, so may that same living principle, carrying its formative power into the world of spirits, shape itself a body in accordance with the circumstances of its new being. And why may we not suppose that the moral character shall then have power to modify and affect the spiritual body—that the good shall be supremely beautiful and clothed with glorious forms, while the bad shall dwell in deformed and repulsive bodies, full of pain and anguish? Even in the influence of the moral character upon the body in this world—in the sweet expression which goodness lends to the countenance, and in the dark forms which guilt stamps there—may we see some confirmation of this belief. Looking at the matter in this light we shall see that the future destiny of the soul is not the arbitrary assignment of omnipotence—but the natural result of its own character: that misery—spiritual suffering—as naturally follows sin as physical pain the dislocation of a limb—that from the very nature of the soul there can be no exemption from this law except that provided in the gospel. The sanctions of religion will thus be seen to be laid in the very foundations of our moral and intellectual nature.

Prof. Bush concluded his lecture by a powerful personal appeal to his audience with regard to the claims and the truths of Christianity. He said he had thus far spoken of Heaven only in its relation to individuals: some further remarks with regard to the general subject must be postponed to another occasion.

TRIAL OF MONROE EDWARDS.

[Reported for The Tribune.]

Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Befor Judge KENT and Aldermen HALIS and HATFIELD.

TUESDAY, June 7 1842.

The Court-Room was crowded to suffocation at a very early hour this morning, and more excitement was manifest within and around its doors than has attended any trial since that of the murderer, Colt. Considerable confusion prevailed, as so large a crowd had evidently not been expected, and suitable police regulations had not been adopted. The prisoner looked on with a smile of apparent scorn, and appeared quite indifferent to the preparations for his trial. His distinguished counsel came in at about half-past 10, and attracted universal attention. They are the following gentlemen: Hon. THOMAS F. MARSHALL of Kentucky and WILLIAM EVARTS, J. PRESCOTT HALL, W. M. PRICE and ROBERT EMMETT, Esqs. of this City. For the prosecution appeared JAMES R. WHITING, the District Attorney, Hon. OGDEN HOFFMAN, JOS. C. HART, OLIVER M. LOWNDES, and G. F. ALLEN, Esqs. At no previous trial which has taken place in this City for many years has there been an equal array of talent and eloquence. The trial promises to be of unusual interest.

At about 11 o'clock the case was called on, and the panel of Jurors was read. Only 17 answered out of 60 called; the Judge announced a deficiency, and ordered that 25 additional Jurors be summoned forthwith from the County at large; and in order to allow the Sheriff time to do this, the Court took a recess until 1 o'clock, P. M.

ONE O'CLOCK, P. M.

After a delay of half an hour in waiting for the Sheriff to make his returns, the call of the panel was completed. The Jury was then empanelled as follows:

John Simnes, Levi Chapman, Lorraine Freeman, John C. Coachman, Samuel D. Jackson, Samuel Tucker, Benjamin R. Theal, Spencer Stafford, John W. Howe, Richard J. Bradford, Round Tinkham, Anthony Moffatt.

The case was then opened for the prosecution by Joseph H. Allen, Esq. He began by saying that the case now brought to the attention of the jury, was one of the most extraordinary forgeries ever committed in any Country—extraordinary both for the boldness with which it was achieved—the ability with which it was executed—the large amount of money involved and the success with which it was attended. The papers forged were of a character which related to the most intricate branches of Commercial operations, and was prepared with consummate skill and address. The prisoner is indicted for two forgeries, each of $25,000. The full capacities of steam were put in requisition by the forger to change his place from day to day for the purpose of concealing his acts, and he could not be expected to leave very clear traces of his operations; still there was sufficient left to prove upon him the acts alleged. The Jury would probably recollect that about a year ago several forgeries wege committed in various parts of the Country—defrauding persons at this city and in Louisville and in other parts of the Union. Whether this belonged to the grand scheme or not we cannot say; but one thing will be remarked as a singular circumstance, that as soon as Monroe Edwards was arrested, the master spirit seemed to have left the stage, and the public ear was pained with no more announcements of these great forgeries. All that followed were the mere ordinary occurrences of every day.

The first circumstance to which we shall call attention is the following: The firm in New-Orleans of Maunsell, White & Co. in July last received a letter signed Hugh S. Hill, stating that he had just become the owner of extensive plantations in Arkansas, and desiring business connections with them. This letter was answered on the 24th of July, and sundry suggestions made in it were carried out; but no reply was received from Mr. Hill. Here the whole matter, much to their surprise, was dropped. By this means, you will see, that the signature of Maunsell, White & Co. was obtained, as also the kind of paper on which they wrote, and their general style of business correspondence.

Here Mr. Hill leaves the stage and J. P. Caldwell enters and the grand performance begins. You all know the firm of Brown, Brothers & Co., of this city. It is usual for their confidential clerk, Mr. Kiechkoefer, to be at the office before either member of the firm, and to receive the letters from the Post-office clerk. On the 22d of August, 1841, he found in the morning upon his desk a letter post marked New-Orleans, addressed to Brown, Brothers & Co., from Maunsell, White & Co., at New-Orleans. It recommended their friend J. P. Caldwell to their confidence, &c., and seemed to be a regular commercial letter. It authorized Caldwell to draw on them for a sum of money not exceeding $30,000, and on the 27th of August Brown, Brothers & Co. received a letter post marked at Alexandria, written by J. P. Caldwell, dated August 25, 1841, in which he refers to the letter of Maunsell, White & Co., and states that the illness of his brother has prevented him from calling upon them. He wishes to raise 25 or 30 thousand dollars and asks them to advance it on the cotton he has with Maunsell, White & Co., or to negociate two bills of exchange which he encloses for $13,000 each. He also encloses an order signed by himself on Maunsell, White & Co., to hold all his cotton in their hands, subject to the order of Brown, Brothers & Co.

On the 28th of August, Brown, Brothers & Co. wrote to Maunsell, White & Co., stating that they have adopted the arrangements suggested in their letter, and enclosing the bills and order they had received from Caldwell. On the same day they bought Baltimore and Virginia funds, and sent to Caldwell, as he had desired, at Alexandria, D. C. These funds amounted to $24,505 43. The matter seemed thus closed.

On the 4th of September, Mr. Caldwell writes back, acknowledging the receipt of the letter transmitting the funds. On the 8th of September, Brown, Brothers & Co. received a letter from New-Orleans, protesting the bills, stating that they knew no such man as J. P. Caldwell, and that Brown, Brothers & Co. must have been duped.—Measures were immediately taken to stop the payment of the Baltimore and Virginia funds, but it was too late. All the Baltimore drafts were paid on the 31st of August, and the Richmond drafts on the 2d of September. For a long time it seemed impossible to trace the author of these heavy forgeries, and Brown, Brothers & Co. were greatly surprised when, a day or two after, one of their neighbors showed them duplicates of the letters they had received, and told them that he had lost $25,000 in the same way. For a long time it seemed that the forger would escape detection. The whole commercial community was terrified at the boldness and iniquity of this transaction: but it could not long escape detection, and the actor is now about to receive his deserts at your hands.

We shall show from the receipt of these forged letters, that the money was paid, and that the man who received the money was Monroe Edwards. We shall show that when arrested he had in his possession the proceeds of this fraud. Having proved these points, the prosecution will rest.

The boldness of the perpetration of this act will undoubtedly be displayed in his defence. The same spirit of fabrication will be introduced, and much testimony will undoubtedly be offered in his behalf, which will demand your closest scrutiny. He comes with able counsel, who will spare no exertions to secure his acquittal. If the evidence we shall offer be not sufficient to convict, acquit him: we are perfectly willing it should be closely and rigidly examined—but we must ask you to subject his evidence to the same ordeal.

The taking of testimony was then proceeded with.

WITNESSES CALLED.

H. T. Kieckhoefer.—I know the firm of Brown, Brothers & Co. Their business is exchange banking and commission business, principally in advancing upon cotton. I am their confidential and corresponding clerk. They have houses in Liverpool, Philadelphia and New-York. Alex. Brown & Sons is the name of the Baltimore branch which they once had there. I have seen this letter before. We received it on the 23d of August. It purports to be written by Maunsell White & Co. We first saw it on the 23d of August last. I first saw it upon my desk, where it was laid by the Post-Office Clerk, as I suppose. The following is the letter:

NEW-ORLEANS, Aug. 10, 1841.

Messrs. Brown, Brothers & Co.: New-York:

GENTLEMEN—Our friend Mr. John P. Caldwell, now on a visit to Virginia, writes us that he wishes us to command about 25 or 30 thousand dollars; as the best means of meeting our friend's wishes we have taken leave to enclose herein a letter of introduction to you, with a request that you afford him the facilities he requires, provided you find it convenient, safe and profitable to yourselves. Mr. Caldwell has in our hands, subject to no charge, 1,011 bales of Cotton, weighing 465,066 lbs; quality averaging "good fair," and worth in the market, at present prices, at least $90,000. This Cotton arrived late in the city and by our advices has been held to sell with the new crop now just coming in.

Mr. Caldwell and his family are amongst the very few planters of this State who are entirely free from debt, and he is a solvent and very wealthy gentleman. The cotton in our hands constitutes the last year's crop of Mr. C. and his mother, and the whole of it is subject to his orders; therefore any arrangements he may make predicated on the cotton in our hands will be perfectly safe. If Mr. Caldwell can do no better, he is authorized to draw on our house for any sum not exceeding $30,000, at not less than 30 days' sight, and his bills shall be duly honored and protected. Should Mr. Caldwell coincide in this course, we shall feel greatly obliged to you if you will procure the negociation of any bills drawn on our house by him to the above amount.

We shall also be thankful for any attention shown our friend during his stay in your city.

With much respect, we remain your obedient servants,

MAUNCEL, WHITE & CO.

The letter of J. P. Caldwell was offered but objected to, and

Mr. Robert Shaw was called. I reside in New-Orleans; am a partner of the firm of Mansell, White & Co. Their business is receiving cotton and shipping or selling it, according to instructions. I know no person named H. S. Hill. I have seen the letter here offered to me before. It was received by our house July 19, 1841, from the Post Office. It is dated Philadelphia, July 9, 1841, and is signed H. S. Hill; I do not know the handwriting.

Mr. EMMETT here submitted that until the forgery was proved this letter could not be introduced; the other must first be proved to be a forgery.

The District Attorney said the object of this letter was to prove that the other was a forgery. He wished the Jurors to have a right understanding of the matter. He wished to show that this letter was answered, and then he should show by that means that the one received by Brown, Brothers & Co. was a forgery. He proposed to give evidence that this letter signed H. S. Hill was written by the prisoner for the purpose of obtaining the signature of Maunsell, White & Co.

Mr. EMMETT said he should object most strongly to the introduction of this letter at the present stage of the trial.

Mr. PRICE was about to argue the point farther, but the Court refused to hear anything farther, and decided to admit the evidence.

Mr. EMMETT, for the defence, excepted.

The Court took a recess for an hour.

Mr. Shaw's examination resumed—The answer to Mr. Hill's letter was sent to him at Jones's Hotel in Baltimore. The letter signed Manrel, White & Co. is a forgery. No other correspondence that I recollect passed between our house and Hugh S. Hill.

Mr. Emmett objected to this evidence, showing that the paper was forged—as not being the best that the nature of the case admits. If the letter was genuine the firm of which the witness is a partner would be liable for it: he asked indefferent men as witnesses.

The Court overruled the objection.

Examination resumed—I knew no person by the name of J. P. Caldwell. Our house gave no letter, that I know, recommending any such man to Brown, Brothers & Co. No such man ever had in our hands a large amount of cotton; not a single bale. There is no truth at all in this letter (given him to read.)

The District Attorney here proposed to read the letter with the answer.

Mr. Emmett objected. He could not see what possible relation they could have to the case at its present stage. It had not been proved that there was any such person in existence as Hugh S. Hill; still less that he had any connection whatever with J. P. Caldwell; and not the least to show he had any connection whatever with Monroe Edwards.—He thought that as the case now stands these letters ought not to be admitted as an item of evidence.

The Court, with some observations, admitted the evidence as to the letter from H. S. Hill.

Mr. Emmett excepted.

Examination resumed.—The signature to the forged letter resembles my signature. I signed the letter in reply to that of H. S. Hill. We never had any farther correspondence with H. S. Hill. We wrote to Brown, Brothers & Co. inquiring after such a man. We have never found out who Hill was.

Cross-examined by Mr. Evarts—Maunsell White, Cuthbert Bullitt, Robert Shaw, and Theodore Ryan composed the firm of Maunsell White & Co. Maunsell is spelt with an s: I sometimes make it nearly like a c. In the forged letter it is spelled c, and so is it in the indictment.

Mr. Kiechkoefer recalled.—Our Postoffice clerk always brings the letters from the Post-office to our office. I do not know how many letters were received with this; I did not look particularly to the post-mark; I answered the letter, and have a copy of that letter: the answer is dated August
