The Fall of the Empire

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Asso-

The young soldier-king's ambition was towering. At thirty he found him self the first general of his age. Not content with being master of libs own kingdom, he sought to make himself master of all kingdoms within blo

While the king's traits were Nonleonic, there was one trall that was against women. The mildler hing, the contrary, feared their active; He was aware that they governed t world and considered that it would be impossible for him to build up the con pire he intended if he were hime! governed by a woman. A backelor, roposed to remain a bachelor. for fear that he would be enprured permitted only the homelicat we men come near him. On one occasion when he was told that a young girl had comto his tent to beg for protection from his soldiers he asked, "Is the comel-?" When answered in the affirmative he replied, "Then let her be velled."

There was one petty ducby. Historia. still anconquered which was important to the soldier-king. From its geograph ical position it was the main link in the states from which the empire was to be formed. Though small, its conquest would be difficult, for its territory constituted an elevated plateau whose only approaches were through mountain defiles. The king sent a demand for its submission. A reply was returned that the duke would yield to the inevitable if the king would grant certain conditions. If not he would defend his dukedom till every man in it

The king then sent a messenger to ask the conditions. A reply came that they would only be presented at a meeting to take place between the two sovereigns. Midway up a defile leading to the duchy was a pocket well adapted for a place of conference. The duke proposed that he and the king meet there and discuss the terms by which his domain should pass under the king's rule. The king might bring all the guard he wished. The duke pledged himself to go alone.

The king, unwilling to be outdone in an exhibition of confidence, declared that he, too, would go alone and unarmed. All these matters having been adjusted, the king rode, with a small guard, to the mouth of the defile, the rendezvous. The duke was seen coming down the mountain, an old man with a flowing white beard and

The sovereigns met at the door of a pavillon that had been erected for the conference. The duke produced a golden key, unlocked the door and motion ed the king to enter. When inside the dake relocked the door. This startled the king, but he said nothing. Surely if trenchery were intended he was a match for this feeble old man. Then the duke led the way into a handsome ly furnished room, in the center of which were a table and writing matsrials. At one end of the apartment blazed an open fire. The duke threw the golden key in among the burning logs. It immediately ignited. For a moment the king stood in wonder at seeing gold burn, then rushed forward to rescue the key. He was too late.

"It was of wood, your me esty," said the duke, "and gilded. We are shut up here together for this conference. Nelther can depart, for there is no opening except the door which is locked and no key with which to unlock it. Let us proceed to business."

As the duke spoke the last words he threw his hat on the floor, pulled off a white wig and false beard, divested himself of his ducal robes and stood before the king in superb dress, a wo man of transcendant beauty. "I-I was to meet the duke," stammered the king, drawing back. "I am the sovereign of Historia. My father has abdicated in my favor." The king put his hand before his face to shut out the vision of level "These are my terms," continued the duchess, "the only terms on which i shall surrender. I will pay your analesty 500 pieces of gold annually as tribute for ten years." The king made no reply, arm, drop plog bis bands, stared at the symmetrical creature. Her features were those of a cameo, her complexion that of white and red roses, and her eyes were a marvel of leveliness.

"Your grace," he said, dropping of his knee, "I am at your mercy," The duchess pointed to the writing materials. The king wrote:

The independence of the duchy of Historia is acknowledged and guaranteed.

The duchess read and turned her great eyes, lit by a heavenly smile, on the monarch. Then, touching a spring in the table, a drawer flew open. She selzed a key and started for the door. The king followed and caught ber in his arms. She looked back, and her lips were pressed by his.

When the king rejoined his attendants he was a changed man. He knew that the lands he had conquered would always be liable to be wreated from him without the duchy of Historia One by one they received back their savereignty, and when the last was made independent it was apnounced that the king was about to be married. EDsteria his queen, and he did not get Had been made free.

Suits All Classes.

The cigars we make and sell suits all classes of men. We have several brands of nickel cigars which are pronounced a superior article by smokers of good judgment. For the man who wants a finer cigar, we have the ten centers, which are as good a cigar as you can buy anywhere. There are men in North Platte who have smoked our cigars for over twenty-five years and are satisfied. That tells the story of the quality.
