SAINT IGNATIUS AND HIS FIRST COMPANIONS. By Rev. CHAS. CONSTANTINE PISE, D. D. Author of "History of the Church," "Father Rowland," "Alethem," &c. &c. New-York: E. Dunigan 151 Fulton-st.

Another work from the prolific and able pen of Rev. C. CONSTANTINE PISE, D. D. has been just published with the above title. This volume is of seasonable appearance and possesses claims independent of those conferred by the Holiday-presentation usages of the time, coming before the public, as it does, when the principles of Ignatius Loyola, and the spirit which still animates and governs the influential body of whom he was the founder, are the subject of much and interesting inquiry and debate. It is written with more than Dr. Pise's usual vigor, and evinces in every page that earnestness which is the strongest proof of an author's sympathy and harmony of spirit with his subject. In style it is pure, perspicuous and scholarly; while its narratives of missionary adventure are exceedingly animated and impressive. This work contains also an account of the collaboratе labors of the "First Nine"—the companions of Ignatius; and introduces us with them into distant lands, acquaints us with their motives, objects and policy, and furnishes a view of the establishment, progress and earlier operations of the Order of Jesuits.—The Chapter devoted to St. Francis Xavier (one of "The Nine") his conversion, Apostolic legation to the Indies, his labors at Mozambique, Goa, Cape Commorin, his travels among, and first conversions to Christianity of the Japanese is full of deep interest and instruction: nor is the least important part of the work the body of notes, with which it abounds, from learned and impartial commentators and historians.

Did space (necessarily limited by the demands of the numerous contemporary publications on our desk) permit, we could wish to make some considerable extracts which would convey an idea of the merits of Dr. Pise's work: we can, however, find room but for the following:

ST. IGNATIUS.

Wearied and much agitated from a strange and recent apparition, a noble-looking cavalier, robed in the plain guise of a pilgrim, sat down to repose him on the banks of a gentle stream, not far from the village of Manreza. The deep shadows were now falling from the neighboring hills: over the brow of Mount Serat, the dusk of the evening seemed already wreathing its sombre twilight, and the waters of the lonely river rippled beneath the breath of the solitude's breeze. There, in profound contemplation, with his dark-gray eyes fixed intently on the river, sat that wondrous stranger. His elegant mien, his proud, high forehead, his aquiline nose, his beautiful yet manly features, bespoke the high rank to which he belonged, and the magnanimous character with which he was adorned. He had recently fought, at the head of a chivalrous army, for the liberties of Spain, and had been wounded, in her glorious cause, on the walls of Pampeluna. He had been confined to his bed, suffering intense pain from the extraction of the ball which had entered his leg, and the amputation of a bone which protruded from the wound. During this period of lingering and solitary illness, he had sought to relieve his tedium, and engage his mind with reading. No works of fancy or books of chivalry being within his reach, he had recourse to a volume of the Lives of the Saints, in which he beheld depicted, for the imitation of great souls, their heroic virtues, and sublime sanctity. The transition, in such a mind as his, from one species of chivalry to another, was very easy and natural: he had been trained up to that of arms and martial enthusiasm; he could, without difficulty, appreciate that of peace and religious glory. As he read on, his heart opened, as it were, to the divine influences of Christian heroism: his soul insensibly began to glow with an ardor more ennobling and inspiring than he had before experienced; a desire to emulate the spiritual moral achievements of the example before him, an irresistible admiration of their victories over themselves and their triumphs over the world, urged forward his generous ambition; and the grace of God, co-operating, meanwhile, with his natural dispositions, he determined to change the standard of war for the ensign of the cross. He had laid aside from his towering person the insignia of the knight, and taken upon himself those of an humble penitent, making a pilgrimage from shrine to shrine. Over the altar of the ever-blessed Virgin he had hung the sword which was still gleaming with the lustre of valor—a bright, a splendid trophy of the grace of God. For that brave spirit that knew not how to cower before the terrors of the cannon, was stricken down in profound subjection—not to any human power—and him prostrate, by the violence of the love of God. Sweet violence, indeed, that gives no pain but contrition, and demands no subjection but a calm submission to the will of Heaven. Violence which, it is true, storms the citadel of the heart, but renders it, at the same time, a voluntary captive: which sometimes achieves its object by forcing the deep and silent tear from the fountains of some Magdalen's soul, and, at other times, by casting down headlong—blind and terror-stricken—as the sward, some Saul of Tarsus. That extraordinary personage, meditating, at this twilight hour, on the banks of the Rubricato, is the immortal founder of the Society of Jesus—Ignatius of Loyola.

Between the epoch of the birth of this defender of the ancient faith, and that of Martin Luther, its pest and scourge, a space of nine years occurred: the former having been born in 1491, the latter in 1492. God, whose providence could not but prepare a barrier against the calamities which he foresaw were about to desolate his Church, raised up Ignatius, as a host, in the company which he was destined to establish, for her defence and edification. Guipuzcoa, a province in Cantabria, was the place of his nativity. His family was noble and renowned. His father and mother were both of illustrious origin. His youthful disposition tended to the study and the feats of arms: and, having, at a maturer age, embraced the military profession, he won the approbation of his country and reaped no little glory on the field. This soldier-like character he impressed on the company which he instituted. It appears in the celerity of obedience on the part of its members, in the enduring of labor, and missionary exercises—all modelled on the exemplar of the camp. His soul, from early childhood, burned with inextinguishable ardor for renown, and human praise: which natural impetuosity, changed and chastened under holier influences, he carried with him into the ranks of religion, and infused into the breasts of his disciples. He was distinguished by grace, ease, and majesty of manners, and a singular love of elegance of dress; which qualities he afterwards hallowed, and transferred to sacred things, and made auxiliary to the discipline and spirit of his order. He possessed a sublime magnanimity in pardoning an offence, as well as in conferring a favor; an innate detestation of avarice, and—the germ of all vices—cupidity. He exhibited a lofty daring in dangerous and difficult exertions; a singular prudence in the transaction of business, and an unwearied and patient perseverance and constancy of character. In the flower of youth he displayed the maturity of age; and in the first impulse of his conversation was raised, on a sudden, to the highest grade of perfection.

The work is beautifully got up, on the best paper, richly bound, and contains a finely-executed frontispiece of the likenesses, fancifully grouped, of Saint Ignatius and the "First Nine," taken from undoubted originals.

DESIGN FOR THE WASHINGTON MEMORIAL: New-York. By ROBERT KERR, Architect.

We have received a copy of this Plate from Mr. Kerr. It presents a showy front, and the edifice, if erected, would not only be ornamental but useful.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

BY THE REPORTER OF THE N. Y. TRIBUNE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1844.

IN SENATE, to-day, a number of memorials were presented and referred to the appropriate Committees.

A joint resolution from the House, requiring from the servants of the Government a more accurate account of public property, was read a second time and referred.

Mr. BENTON gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to provide for the establishment of a corps of Sappers and Miners.

Mr. BERRIEN submitted a resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire into the expediency of amending the Habeas Corpus Act of 1789.

MR. CRITTENDEN offered a resolution requiring the Committee on the Library to inquire into the propriety of purchasing the unpublished Manuscripts of the late Alexander Hamilton. The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. TAPPAN, the bill to establish the Smithsonian Institute was taken up, and having undergone several alterations and amendments, its farther consideration was deferred till Tuesday next.

Mr. BENTON offered a resolution calling upon the President for a copy of Mr. Shannon's letter to Mr. Calhoun in relation to the payments of the April and July instalments of the Mex can Indemnity, &c. The resolution lies over.

The bill to grant certain Public Lands to the State of Indiana for the purpose of extending the Wabash and Erie Canal, was taken up, and, after a short discussion between Messrs. Haywood, White and Woodbridge, its farther consideration was postponed.

The Senate then went into Executive Session, and shortly after adjourned till Thursday, 12 o'clock.

IN THE HOUSE, Mr. TIBBATTS gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill authorizing the People of Texas to establish a State Government and to provide for the admission of the State so constituted, into the Union, upon an equality with the other States, and also a Joint Resolution guaranteeing to the People of Texas the protection of the United States until the question of Annexation be decided.

Mr. BELSER gave notice of his intention to introduce a joint resolution for the Annexation of Texas. A bill, introduced by Mr. BOWLIN, to amend the act of 1834 in relation to our intercourse with the Indian tribes, was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HOUSTON submitted a resolution to the effect that, at 3 o'clock to-day, all discussion upon the bill to graduate and reduce the price of public lands should cease, and that the House should proceed to vote on the amendments which have been or may be offered.

Upon this the Yeas and Nays were demanded and refused and tellers being ordered the vote stood, Yeas, 49; Nays, 74. So the resolution was not agreed to.

On motion of Mr. VANCE, reports from the Standing Committees were called up.

Numerous reports were made, of which the following are the most important:

By Mr. DAVIS from the Committee on Public Lands—A bill to grant certain lands to the State of Indiana for the purpose of extending the Wabash and Erie Canal to the Ohio River.

By Mr. FRIEZIN, from the Committee on Commerce, a bill for the improvement of the Hudson River.

By Mr. BARASSON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, a bill to establish a National Foundry.

By Mr. PARMENTER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, a bill to consolidate an act granting pensions to widows of Naval officers, seamen and marines, and a bill to continue certain Navy pensions for five years.

By Mr. C. J. INGERSOLL, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, a bill for the relief of Henry Ledyard, late Charge d'Affaires from the United States to France.

By Mr. J. R. INGERSOLL, from the Committee on Commerce: A bill to alter the present mode of ascertaining the tonnage and admeasurement of vessels of the United States: By Mr. PRATT from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds: A Joint Resolution, providing for the selection of a site for the erection of the proposed Monument to Washington.

By Mr. BLACK of South Carolina, from a Select Committee: A bill for the reduction of pay in the Army and for other purposes.

On motion of Mr. J. R. INGERSOLL, the use of the Hall was granted to the National Institute on Monday evening next, for the purpose of hearing a Lecture delivered by Hon. Levi Woodbury.

A resolution was submitted by Mr. BOWEN, authorizing the giving of fifty cords of wood belonging to the House for the use of the poor.

It was opposed by Mr. JONES of Tenn. on the ground that the House had no authority so to dispose of the people's property; and it was therefore withdrawn.

Mr. DARRAGH submitted a resolution calling on the President for information concerning the claims of citizens of the United States on Mexico; and also as to whom the alleged payments of the April and July instalments of the Mexican Indemnity had been made by the Government on the subject.

Upon this motion the Yeas and Nays were ordered, and being taken, the vote stood—Yeas 80, Nays 85. So the motion was lost.

Mr. INGERSOLL's resolution of yesterday to furnish the members with maps of the United States, was then, on motion, reconsidered, and the question recurring on its passage, a motion was made to lay upon the table, which prevailed.

Mr. McDOWELL gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to annex Texas to the United States.

The House then adjourned till Thursday 12 o'clock.

WISTAR'S
BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

A Compound Balsamic Preparation from Wild Cherry Bark and Tar.

The best remedy known to the world for the cure of coughs, colds, asthma, croup, bleeding of the lungs, whooping cough, bronchitis, influenza, shortness of breath, pain and weakness in the breast or side, liver complaint, and the first stages of CONSUMPTION.

A THOUSAND CURES in cases deemed utterly hopeless have firmly established its vast superiority over every other medical discovery. It has always been styled "Nature's own remedy," the "being formed chiefly from chemical extracts from Wild Cherry Bark and Tar—two trees that are thickly scattered wherever diseases of the lungs prevail. We give a few instances of its extraordinary power, from a catalogue almost without end:

A lady (address will be given at the New-York Agency) who was given up by all of her physicians to die of consumption, had a hard tumor for months on the side—raised among large quantities of matter a sort of bony substance—had taken no medicine for two months, but all hope—entirely cured by a bottle of this Balsam in September and Oct. 1844.

A. Williams, Esq. Attorney, &c. New-York, cured of spasmodic asthma of 25 years' standing, certified to by Recorder Tallmadge and J. Power, D. D.

A. Carman, N. Y. City, who had not slept, lying down, for 7 years, (being obliged to sleep in a sitting posture) so far cured as to attend to his business in the most stormy weather.

Thomas Bradlee, Esq. J. P. Jamaica, L. I. cured of asthma of 40 years' standing.

Thomas Cozens, Haddonfield, N. J. testifies under oath that he had a violent cough and pain in the side—for months raised large quantities of corrupt matter—also much blood—his physicians could do but little for him—gave him pills of mercury, but did no good—his friends all supposed he had a "galloping consumption"—entirely cured by three bottles of Wistar's Balsam.

Mrs. Anna D. Hopkins, of Knowlesville, N. Y. entirely cured of liver complaint and general debility of eighteen months' standing.

Jacob Hoffman, M. D. Huntingdon, cured a child of P. Schroeble of obstinate disease of the lungs after he had tried all the usual remedies in vain.

Cases are daily occurring in every part of the country which prove incontestibly the first superiority of this Balsam in every shade of lung and liver disease over every other preparation hitherto known to the world.

PROSPECTUS.

THE undersigned, proprietor of the "DAILY FORUM," Philadelphia, encouraged by the patronage he has received, proposes, on the 1st of January next, to enlarge its paper, and present it to the public in a new form, and under the name of

THE MORNING POST.

Its terms will be six dollars a year, payable quarterly; or five if paid in advance. For advertising, the terms will be as heretofore.

It is the wish and the intention of the Proprietor to furnish to his patrons a daily newspaper which, while it shall faithfully represent the opinions and interests of the community on all leading topics, shall in a measure, by the independent expression of well-matured judgment, direct and control any casual public sentiment. The function of the conductor of a public press, properly understood, is high and dignified. There is not a day when, in active Community like ours, questions do not arise in relation to which an independent press may exercise great and salutary influence in at least enlightening the public mind by the collation of the varied materials within its reach. It is the wish of the Proprietor of the MORNING POST to make it, in every sense, a manly and independent paper.

In politics will of course be Whig. It will sustain, with a resolute perseverance which defient cannot impair, the principles and policy for which the great conservative party of the Nation has so long contended. That policy and those principles, from time to time put in jeopardy by the traitorous purposes of those who would have Nullification triumph, are still worth contending for. They were those which the first and best administration of the Government asserted, and which the lapse of time has shown to be the most conducive to substantial popular welfare. Whatever WASHINGTON, and the great and good men who were his counsellors, believed to be the powers of the Constitution, thought constitutional, may yet safely be assumed to be so. What they thought expedient in the administration of Government, may with a due allowance for change of circumstances and transition from a state of infancy to petulent immaturity, safely thought expedient. The principles, in a word, to which this paper will endeavor to assert, will be the Republican principles of WASHINGTON. They are, we repeat, the best, the surest, the safest.

To the Administration of the National as well as of the State Government, the proprietor of this new paper will make no factious or unreasonable opposition. The duty of every good citizen is to bow to the supremacy of the popular will, expressed at least according to the forms of law. If frauds on the elective franchise have occurred, let them be fearlessly exposed. If they cannot be proved, let not the private suspicion of an opinion of the correctness of the result rendering to the apparent majority the submission which, under the Constitution, it has a right to claim. Let the coming Administration of the Nation be tried by its measures. Should, as we apprehend will be the case, its policy be adverse to the interests of that portion of the Union represented by the Whig party, let it be destroyed by the effective Whig System, to try new experiments on currency, to instigate foreign conquest, or promote the unscrupulous acquisition of territory at the expense of National honor, it will be the duty of every independent American Press to raise its voice of warning and of condemnation. If, on the other hand, the Administration of Polk shall prove conservative and tend to curtail by patriotic wisdom, and sustain the great interests of the country as it is, then will it be our duty and our pleasure to give it a manly and respectful support.

The same thing applies with additional force to the State Administration. Our local interests are more vital. The question of Public credit, above, surpasses all others. The result of legislation carefully and wisely devised is about to be attained, and nothing remains but an honest execution of existing laws to restore the honor of Pennsylvania, and reestablish our prostrate reputation. To the end of sustaining public agents of whatever party in such a discharge of duty, this paper will zealously labor.

There is reason to hope and believe that the day is not far off when Pennsylvania will no longer have reason to blush before the world, and when a Pennsylvania press may not hesitate to defend the policy of her laws and the honesty of her people. Too long, too long, has that State, in the pursuit of honors and in the career of patriotic emulation, been thrust aside.—Too long has she been faithless to herself. The time has come or is coming when, no just stigma resting on our Commonwealth, its citizens of all parties, its public men, its independent Press can speak out, and, in the exercise of rights and maintaining the claims which, by virtue of the least obtrusive of the family of the States, as that one of the "old Thirteen," which, in the days of trial, did more, shed more blood and supplied more soldiers and treasure than any of her rivals, she has a right to make.—It will be the effort of this Press so soon as "the light of Pennsylvania is redeemed, (for till then we have no right to say a word,) to contribute zealously and earnestly for Pennsylvania measures and for Pennsylvania men.

As a Commercial paper, the proprietor hopes to make the Morning Post especially valuable. He has taken single measures to secure the commercial patronage. Both foreign and domestic commercial intelligence of the most minute and accurate kind will be furnished, and in every way a strenuous effort be made further to deserve that support from the Merchants of Philadelphia which, hitherto, he has so liberally received and for which he is ever grateful.

If the Proprietor succeeds in this new enterprize, he hopes to furnish to his subscribers not only a complete business paper, but a serviceable Family Paper, supplied abundantly with matters of general literary and political intelligence, one which shall be worthy of Philadelphia and its ancient good name; which shall be possible elevate and refine the tastes of its readers, and be the organ of its intelligent and public spirited citizens. It is this hope which stimulates the new effort, and in a spirit of friendly and respectful rivalry with its contemporaries this enterprise is set on foot. He asks for it the countenance and encouragement of his Whig friends.

N. B. A Weekly Paper will also be issued every Saturday. Terms as heretofore, viz: $1 per annum—invariably in advance.
