Western Colleges and Seminaries.

The Society for Promoting Collegiate and Theological Education at the West, held its very interesting anniversary at Newark, N. J. on Thursday evening.

Rev. Dr. Goodrich of Yale College, introduced the exercises of the evening with a short account of the origin and progress of the Society. "Ten or fifteen years ago" said he "there were among the institutions of the West five colleges in the hands of men who had gone from stations of honor and emoluments in the East, to take charge of the rising institutions of the West. To these colleges large grants of land had been made, and they entered upon their work with high hopes and bright prospects of success. But in the providence of God, these high hopes as well as the business and commercial prospects of this whole land were first to rise and then sink, the hopes of their found ers were crushed, and they returned disheartened and disgusted to the sympathy of their friends at the East.

The formation of this Society was to them like from the dead. Never, said he, has a young Nation been able to sustain its own institutions. Whence came the support for Harvard and Yale and Dartmouth? From England. And the very idea of founding the literary institutions of a great Nation is worth more to Governor Yale and to the Directors of the East India Company, and more honorable to Lord Dartmouth than the dignity of princes of the realm. We would repay the boundless debt of gratitude we owe to them by giving the same institutions to the West which they gave to us. We would, if it be not already too late form the mind of that great West which is now to bear so important a part in the concerns of this land and this planet.

We would we hope that knowledge, and taste, and learning, dignified and noble as they are, are of their highest value, only in connection with "that wisdom which cometh from above." Our ancestors placed before themselves the glorious idea of a Nation cut off from the old stock, planted away from the corrupt influences of the world, and reared as the Missionary Nation of the earth. It shall be ours to realize this idea, for this society may aid in making the West and this whole land a light to the world, thus it shall be said of it, "many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."

From the annual report, which was then read by Rev. Theron Baldwin, it appears that $11,000 have been collected in the East, and that the people of the West have themselves subscribed $21,000, making in all $32,000 contributed during the past year.

Rev. Dr. SEMAN moved the adoption of the report—They were assembled to promote a glorious object. The immediate field which they had chosen between the Lakes, the Ohio and the Mississippi, was the richest in the world. As it comes from the hand of Nature, it had on its parallel in ancient times only the Garden of Eden. The population of this country is far from being homogeneous, in its character. The Americans are of two classes, those from the East and those from the South. Of the natives of the old world should there. I do not slander this people, from whom I have received hospitalities beyond the power of acknowledgment, when I say that they are comparatively ignorant. They are unable to devote the labor, or the money necessary to build and sustain the institutions of learning.

The future population of that region must be immense. The portion of the West which is the field of this society, can sustain fifty or one hundred million inhabitants; and when the balance of power is transferred there, we may well tremble if the great giant of the West comes out in manhood.

Now can the religious character of that country be formed without aid? It is impossible for the institutions of the East to keep pace with the tide of emigration from the Eastern States.

In conclusion then, what do we propose to do? We are attacking aid to our Colleges and two Theological Seminaries, under the care of an able and laborious body of professors; but this is not all. We shall probably enlarge our field and operations; we must reach the sanctuaries of the land, and having been over the field, I declare, in the presence of high Heaven, that, if it were necessary, we had better give up any of our charities rather than this; if it were necessary, it would be wise to neglect the great work of evangelizing the heathen, for the sake of saving our own land, and we shall expect men of undoubted talent to follow us in our work.

John H. Bacon, of New-Haven remarked, that the exceedingly interesting train of thought just presented, had diverted his own mind from the subject on which he had designed to address the meeting, to this idea, that ever since its discovery, the history of America had turned upon the conflict for the possession of that boundless domain.

Spain made the first lodgment upon the soil of these States. Then France effected a settlement in this country, and she had a scheme of empire that was worthy the mind of Napoleon. The remains of that line of forts which they established, yet lie along our border like the bones of some antediluvian monster. Quebec and Montreal were settled before the "Mayflower" moored in the bay of Plymouth and the great conflict that followed, and which cost more blood and suffering than even the Revolution itself was a conflict for the possession of this land.

And now the question is before us. Our fathers carried it to the bloody field. We have done with that, "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual."

In this conflict, which is to involve the destinies of the world, no one thing is so important as the institutions of learning, and they who who shall get that influence over the West which will be wielded by its teachers, will give direction to the history of the world.

Colleges and Theological Seminaries are the offspring of Christianity; wherever it is planted you see them springing up. The gospel is designed to be self-perpetuating, and this is the true "apostolic succession," defined by Paul to Timothy. "The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." It is also the peculiar feature of Protestant institutions, that the ministry is educated in connexion with the other professions. This is what gives power to the colleges of our country.

Such institutions we would give to the West, and without them the West is lost; for it is impossible to send them a Christian ministry from the East.

The concluding address was made by Dr. Cox of Brooklyn. He remarked that many theories had been broached on the connection of learning and religion; that they were often dissonent, but that, on the whole, they were improving. It had been found that ignorance was no great security to orthodoxy, and that the pride of learning did not arise from learning, but from the fool who pretends to have it.

But theories apart, he continued, there is one thing that, to my mind, illustrates the connection—the existence of this Society. Look at its officers—are they not literary men? Among them are the officers of our Colleges, and men who are known every where as men of talent and learning—yet are they merely literary? How you would slander and degrade them if you thought they were learned merely for the sake of being so, and held not their knowledge in subserviency to higher purposes—for learning without the gospel is a functionless angel, that has lost its way, and is wandering, blind and confused, amid the darkness of this world.

There was a venerable man, whom America adopted as her son, and might have adopted as her father; the name of Witherspoon should be dear to Americans, and especially to you as Jerseymen. Witherspoon said—"Cursed be all that learning that is contrary to the cross of Christ; cursed be all that learning that is not coincident with the cross of Christ; cursed be all that learning that is not subservient to the cross of Christ."

Fools desire liberty for its own sake, that they may do what they list; but wise men want it as a means to a higher end; and our fathers knew that it is that, that it leaves men free, is because they must be free to feel their accountability. I do not indeed believe that we would be more free from persecution than other sinners, only that our faith demands perfect liberty of conscience for all forms of Christianity, yea, all forms of religion.—We have had our birth time, and conflict and glory; if these fail, and wealth, and luxury, and sin follow, then perhaps we may expect no Gothic hordes upon our borders from some unknown realm; but, if such a catastrophe ever comes on our children, it will come from a semi civilized people full of military ardor, that can see all things but their own grave; it is as Christians and scholars that we know the worth of learning in connection with religion, that we ask you to join us in our efforts to educate and bless the West.

From the assurances of parents who have sons at this School, and of others, it is believed that it commends itself in an eminent degree to all acquainted with its details. The limited number of its pupils—the exclusion of all day scholars—the thorough preparation for College or business, which its pupils receive—the healthfulness and pleasantness of its location—the ample private play-grounds which surround and embellish it—the salutary moral influences which pervade and control it—the home-like comforts and attentions of the family circle, and the freedom from all vitiating and corrupting neighborhood influences—all combine to throw around this School special attractions for that class of parents, who care much for the solid intellectual improvement of their children, more still for their health and comfort, and most of all for their right moral training.

ATLANTIC WHITE LEAD.

NEW-YORK, October 25th, 1845.

THE Atlantic White Lead Company have now completed their Works, and are ready to execute orders for pure White Lead, both dry and ground in oil, to almost any extent that may be wanted. The Company have spared no expense in the erection of the Works which would tend, in the least degree, to the improvement of the Lead, having availed themselves of every modern improvement for that purpose.

Being well aware, from our long familiarity with the different Leads sold in our market, that by far the greater portion sold as such has been, and still is, greatly adulterated with barytes, an article of mineral production much heavier than white lead, and in itself possessing no virtue of any pigment whatever, it being, when mixed with oil, almost transparent, and in fact having nothing but its specific weight, recommended it, the Trustees of the Atlantic White Lead Company have passed, unanimously, the following resolution, viz:

"Resolved, That in view of manufacturing only a prime "article, the Atlantic White Lead Company will make but "one quality of White Lead, both dry and ground in oil; "that to be a strictly PURE, genuine article, and perfectly "free from any adulteration whatever, which the Company "will warrant as such to all who may purchase their Lead."

Purchasers, therefore, may be well assured that every dependence may be placed in the PURITY of every pound of White Lead manufactured and sold by the Company, which pureness will not only tend to the greater durability of the Paint, but will be found much more economical in its use, even in the most common description of painting, owing to the body or covering quality it possesses, thereby giving a far better finish with only two coats, than the adulterated white paint would with three, of which every painter will bear witness.

Having been appointed general Agents for the Company, orders should be directed to us, at 287 Pearl-st. corner of Beekman. o23 1aw1w POLLEN & COLGATE.

HILL'S INFALLIBLE ONGUENT

FOR THE HAIR.—Can any thing be more honest? Notice the fact that I never publish any certificate commendatory of the above unless it has the residence of the individual giving it appended, which enables you to satisfy yourselves (by inquiry) that the Onguent is really what it purports to be; and understand ye also that it is warranted in all cases, either young or old, if properly applied, to effectually stay alopecy or falling off of the hair, restore it to bald parts, eradicate pityrasis, dandruff, scurf, and all exfoliations of the cuticle; change red or grey hairs to a beautiful dark color; make the hair moist, soft, curly, &c.

I do hereby certify that I have been seriously afflicted with dandruff and falling off of the hair, and made use of several articles for the same without the least benefit: indeed, I was fearful of becoming bald; finally, being induced to use Hill's Infallible Onguent, I am happy to say the result was most satisfactory, for in a short time the dandruff entirely disappeared, my hair soon commenced growing, and now thicker than it ever was, being also soft, moist and glossy.—I can strongly recommend it for the above. Yours, &c.

JAMES BLANCARD, No. 43 Avenue D.

MR. WILLIAM HILL:—Dear Sir:—It is with pleasure I pen these few lines to inform you that the box of Onguent purchased of you has entirely eradicated the dandruff from my head, which had been a great trouble to me for several years. I also have found it to be a pleasant toilet pomade, giving the hair a soft and glossy appearance; so entirely different is it from ordinary preparations for the hair, I can with confidence recommend it to the public. Respectfully,

WILLIAM SEWELL, Jr.
Chief Engineer of U. S. Steamer Mississippi.
