The above list of premiums will be paid by the treasurer, Hon. Calvin Hill, at his residence, Addison House, Middlebury.

The thanks of the society are tendered to the proprietor of the Cream Hill stock farm for his show of the large and very fine herd of thoroughbred Holsteins, which were not entered for premiums.

A feature of the cattle show, which attracted considerable attention, was two quite small boys, sons of H. C. Sessions, each exercising a pair of steer calves broken by himself. The boys have started to be farmers evidently.

The judges on brood mares and colts make special mention of brood mare and colt shown by O. H. Smith of Shoreham, which was overlooked in the examination. Dam by Jubilee Lambert 2.25, best record of any entire son of Daniel Lambert. Filly by Ben Franklin, 2.29

The committee on artistic work also make favorable mention of the large and scientific display of art novelties, exhibited by W. B. Coe of Madison, Conn.

CARE FOR TOOLS.

An Illinois correspondent of the Rural New Yorker tells how he keeps his tools clean and bright, as follows:

"It is good advice to tell us to keep the tools sharp, but we must keep them clean as well. I am a great hand for keeping tools bright. I hate the sight of rust, and as a consequence my workmen say that work at my place is very easy. I keep an iron kettle within a few feet of my tool house, and every workman is expected to wash his tools after using them. They are then dipped into a box of powdered slacked lime, and then hung up. Large tools, like plows, are washed and then have lime dusted over them. They keep bright and clean till wanted. I have had a shovel in use since 1831. It is now as bright as when it came from the maker. Farmers might save hundreds of dollars by taking care of their tools properly. One spring I saw two strong men, with pick and crowbar, digging a plow out of ground where it had been frozen in during the winter. In this township there are thousands of dollars' worth of machinery just eaten worthless by rust. It all might have been saved by proper care. There should be a good tool house on every farm."

STICK TO ONE TEXT.

The Farm, Field and Stockman advises farmers to stick to some plan through thick and thin. Too often, it says, if something has done particularly well this year, next year every one of these fellows who can have any of it in the market will get there, breaking prices to the discomfiture both of themselves and of those who are regular producers of the same article. At the same time they have abandoned something which was at the bottom the last time they had any to sell, and which is on the top now.

BEST SIDE OF FARMING.

The business of farming has two sides: one lies full in the glow of the warm, bright sunlight; the other is on the shady side, buried in gloom and darkness. Every man can choose which side he will live upon. The path to each diverges from a plain road plainly, so that it cannot be mistaken. The business of farming is one in which no man can fail who uses common prudence, who is industrious, persevering, careful, foresighted, economical. It has the world's wants to supply. The farmer feeds and clothes the world, and every product of the soil has its waiting customers.—[Correspondent Rural New Yorker.

EXTRA FEED FOR COWS.

There are but few pastures that will carry a herd of cows through the summer and keep up the flow of milk without feeding them at the barn. There are portions of the season in New England when the sun is so hot and the winds are so dry that a large portion of the pastures become parched and fail to produce sufficient young grass to supply the wants of as many cows as are usually assigned to a pasture; on this account, unless the farmer makes some provision to feed his cows at the barn night and morning, the flow of milk will be very much reduced, and the cows will lose in flesh; thus they come to the barn in autumn light in weight, with the flow of milk reduced at least one-third below what it should be. To avoid this the farmers who are abreast of the times will be prepared to feed their cows as soon as the feed in the pastures begins to fall off.

The Household.

CLOSETS IN THE HOUSE.

Having suffered some for closet room at one time and another, or for places to stow away things, I have had considerable sympathy with that man who said that when he built a house he should begin with a big closet and make additions to that. When I speak of closets my husband understands me, but immediately begins to talk about modes of ventilating closets, and I have only gradually grown to understand his strong sense of the necessity for closet ventilation. Having for several years hung the clothing of the family in rooms where there was a free circulation of air, I am surprised when I go into the well-finished clothes-rooms (let us call them close rooms) in some fine houses to find how dead and unwholesome—not to say foul—the air is. The soiled garments, hung in a tight and dark room, contaminate the whole apartment, and such contamination is very perceptible to a well-trained nose or to olfactories accustomed to the refinement of habitual pure air. Old boots and shoes cause a bad smell in a close room.

To pursue an unpleasant subject a little further—why will people keep the dirty clothes designed for the weekly wash in a close closet? That which has come from the skin of unclean or unhealthy persons (the latter adjective describes nine-tenths of the human family) grows constantly more impure shut away from light and air, and everything kept in the same room is contaminated by the effluvia. Cannot soiled garments be kept, while waiting for the wash, in some bag or covered basket in the wood-shed or some such place? There are baskets on purpose for soiled clothing, open enough for ventilation but too fine to admit mice.

Unless a closet is ventilated so that there is some circulation of air through it, it is no place to hang away nightgowns, unless they have previously been aired, so that the perspiration accumulated in the previous night—only insensible perspiration, perhaps—has been dried and sunned away.

I have no means of ascertaining this morning how far science has attended to this subject of closet ventilation, but I am very sure that it is an important matter, and should be well looked into. Of course there can be closets with windows in them, and this should generally be the case. They can be kept dark, as a general rule, if desired, but it ought to be possible to admit a flood of light.

Closets built under stairways might be ventilated by a grate closed by a sliding shutter under one of the stairs. It would be well to have the grate capable of being shut to keep out the dust when the stairs are swept. I do not know whether this has been tried, but the the idea has occurred to me as practicable. A sliding window in the closet door is also possible. The small sliding window in the door and the grate in the elevation of one of the stairs ought to give a sufficient circulation of air to a small stairway closet.

It is idle to suppose that a closet (or any other room) is provided with ventilation because it is built large and high. There must be some circulation of air or the atmosphere becomes dead.—[Am. Agriculturist.

THE LATEST NEWS.

Is that all who have tried Law's Bluing find it far superior to indigo at less expense. It is used for blueing clothes and for bleaching new or old goods to a snowy white. Also, for coloring rag carpets it is unequalled, and as an ink it makes one quart, which flows equal to the best writing fluid.

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe, even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

S.S.S.

Tried in the Crucible.

About twenty years ago I discovered a little sore on my cheek, and the doctors pronounced it cancer. I have tried a number of physicians, but without receiving any permanent benefit. Among the number were one or two specialists. The medicine they applied was like fire to the sore, causing intense pain. I saw a statement in the papers telling what S. S. S. had done for others similarly afflicted. I procured some at once. Before I had used the second bottle the neighbors could notice that my cancer was healing up. My general health had been bad for two or three years—I had a hacking cough and spit blood continually. I had a severe pain in my breast. After taking six bottles of S. S. S. my cough left me and I grew stouter than I had been for several years. My cancer has healed over all but a little spot about the size of a half dime, and it is rapidly disappearing. I would advise every one with cancer to give S. S. S. a fair trial.
