Extract from the Commercial Advertiser.

"Struck by what seemed us indisputable evidence of the efficiency and superiority of Gayler's patent Double Safes, we obtained permission to see the process of their manufacture, having a notion that a safe which is a safe is a desirable acquisition and worth almost any money. We found at his establishment safes in every stage of manufacture, and came away perfectly satisfied that the material and the workmanship were of the first quality, and that the production of an article not merely to please the eye or indeed the popular ideas of cheapness, but to answer fully and permanently its purpose, was Mr. Gayler's honest aim. And it is under such an impression that we take notice of the matter."
