NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

For the New-York Tribune.

AN AUTUMN THOUGHT.

BY J. BAYARD TAYLOR.

HERE arches high the forest's golden ceiling,
And hides the heaven of blue.
Save where a dim and lonely ray is stealing
The twining branches through.

Here, mossed with age, stands many a gray old col-
That props the mighty hall; [umn.
Nought breaks the silence, undisturbed and solemn,
But when the dry leaves fall.

The world's annoyings to the wide air flinging,
Alone I tread its floor;
What joy, to feel a purer thought upspringing
Within the woods once more!

Here, the good angels that my childhood guarded
Come to my side again,
And by their presence is my soul rewarded
For many an hour of pain.

The Summer's glory, by the frosts o'ershaded,
May be with sadness fraught;
But, wandering through her long pavilions faded,
I read a joyous thought.

Hopes, that around us in their beauty hover,
Fall like this forest-rain;
But, the stern Winter of Misfortune over,
They bloom as fresh again.

The Spring-like verdure of the heart may perish
Beneath some frosty care,
But many a bud, which Sorrow learned to cherish,
Will bloom again as fair.

Keep but the happy and confiding spirit
Which looked from Childhood's eye,
And Life's long pathway will for thee inherit
A bliss that will not die!

Robert Owen

On the Necessity, at this period of Civilized Governments, to unite peaceably and cordially to effect gradually an entire change in the Principles and Practices of Governing their respective Populations.

The extraordinary progress made within the last century in the knowledge of physics and of mind, has rendered an entire revolution in human affairs, by peace or war, unavoidable.

As a preparation to have it effected rationally, in peace, the writer presented two memorials to the Congress of Sovereigns held at Aix la Chapelle in the year 1818, with the intention to apprise them, and through them all other Governments, of the progress then made in this new knowledge, of its rapid advance, future certain effects, and the necessity to prepare for the great change which this advance in science and mental knowledge, and especially in the increase of the new productive power derived from mechanism and chemistry would make, and to wisely legislate for the period when these powers could no longer be applied in competition with manual labor, or in other words, in direct opposition to the interest, well-doing and happiness of the masses of the industrious classes in all creation. The progress of scientific productive power and of mental attainments among the many, must inevitably lead to a highly superior state of equality among the human race and destroy for ever those arrangements in society which have arisen from and been dependent upon human slavery and servitude.

The progress of science may be now only made to supply, at all times, an excess of power to supersede all necessity for human slavery and servitude—the most unbounded—even to supply wants of man, while the progress of mind already discloses the means by which ALL of the human race may be gradually formed into superior men and women, whose acquirements will fit them for, and entitle them to, an existence of a just equality through life according to age. AND IT IS ONLY UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF A RATIONAL AND JUST EQUALITY that the human race can live in peace, attain high excellence, enjoy permanent happiness, and that the earth can be well cultivated, beautified, and made healthy for the abode of man. Until this change shall be made, society will be incessantly excited, and be more or less violently agitated in one country or another; and the masses will be opposed to those authorities which shall the most obstinately and unwisely resist the change and not aid it.

Already the increase of science to aid in the annual creation of new wealth, is more than sufficient, wisely directed, to over-supply, under the direction of well-cultivated minds, with light manual labor, the entire population of the earth, when it shall be multiplied many times; but this scientific productive power is yet only in its infancy—it is continually increasing, with a continually increasing ratio, and to its future progress there is no assignable limits.

No portion of mankind need now be in poverty or fear of it, except through the misapplication of this new power. If it were now wisely directed, ALL might be speedily secured in a state of superior affluence, without in the least disturbing present private property or vested interests. And no portion of the human race need now to be left in ignorance, or be educated in error to become an injurious character, for the science being known by which, under duly prepared circumstances, to form the proper arrangements, any character, good, bad or mixed, may be given to all. With these newly-discovered powers for the abundant pleasant creation of wealth, and easy formation of a superior character for the human race, it will be most unwise in Governments and People, to longer persevere in maintaining a superstitious, cruel and savage system of society; a most injurious and criminal system, which reflects poverty and degradation on the mass, ignorance on the many, and a false and inferior character full of deception upon all.

No one is really benefited by the continuance of this most vicious state of society; a state based upon, and solely emanating from, the ignorant laws of men, while all of the human race would be most essentially a permanently benefited by its being superseded wisely, that is, gradually, peaceably and in a kindly spirit exhibited in word, manner and action, to all, by the only true system of society based on the eternal laws of God and Nature, and a CONSISTENT PRACTICE permitting solely from those laws. To effect this change in the shortest period, is to secure the interest of all, in every station, because it would essentially promote the happiness of the present generation, and secure the well-doing and joyous existence of all future generations.

ROBERT OWEN.
