NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

From the People's Journal.

THE LABORER'S SONG.

Be cheerful, brethren! We'll toil together,
And as we labor on from day to day,
We will not murmur, though inclement weather
Should for awhile our onward progress stay.
We will not grieve each other with dismay,
Nor with rude gibings wake each other's ire;
But rather strive to smother life's rough way,
As on we wander, thirsting to aspire
Toward those lovely objects which awaken
The noblest energies of human souls!
Soon as our thoughts the proper path have taken,
Seeking that pleasurance which oft controls
Life's stern realities—Heaven will fire each mind [mankind!
With love for sacred Right—with Justice for
The least of us has an important part
To act upon the world's still changing stage:
We, in the tasks assigned us, must engage
With tireless energy—with honest heart!
We will not writhe too wildly beneath the smart
Which stern oppression sometimes makes us feel.
But work into each other's hands, to heal
Each other's sufferings, and cause depart
The ills which now perplex us. On before
There is a land of promise fair and bright:
The toils we've past can trouble us no more;
The present we must learn to use aright!
Onward! still onward, until we reach the goal
Where Truth, and Love, and Liberty, attract the thirsting soul!

For The Tribune.

Pathetism—La Roy Sunderland.

La Roy Sunderland, formerly known in this city as Dr. S., has been before the public for several days on the above subject, in his Lectures on the "Philosophy of the Human Soul." His huge posters, with startling and catching words, such as "Skeptics asleep," "Whig thunder," "Surgical operations," "Raising ghosts," &c. in the largest type, and on the yellowest kind of paper, cannot have failed to attract the eye, and puzzled the braid of many a passer by.

Dr. Sunderland disclaims all connection with, or belief in, Magnetism, Mesmerism, or Neurology, and gives out that to him alone belongs the credit of discovering and bringing to light this new theory, which he calls Pathetism.

He states in the course of his Lectures, that he possess the most extraordinary power over human actions and thoughts, and that this is brought into use simply by the eloquence of his lips—the glance of his eye—so great is this power, that the Dr. asserts that he has, in a large audience, nearly all strangers, put to sleep, beyond their power of resistance, half or two-thirds of the whole, and that they were as completely under his control in body and mind, as the puppet in the hand of a showman. Indeed, if the Dr. and his patients are to be relied on, the miracles of Holy Writ, such as "the five thousand fed," curing the blind, the halt and the lame, "casting out devils," are enacted in our day.

To see and judge of these marvels for himself induced the writer of this to attend the Lecture at the Lyceum on Friday night last, and again on a subsequent evening at the Colisseum. The subjects on whom the spell was cast had all, with one exception, been on the stage the night previous, and the exception was a girl from Troy, who, from the statements of her friends in attendance, was an old subject of the Doctor's.

The others were 'Frank' (who officiated in the triple capacity of cash-taker at the door, the mock preacher and comic singer on the stage, and the vender of the Dr's. book as the company went out,) and 'Libby, the little ghost-seer, and the 'Quaker Boy,' and two or three others who did not particularly distinguish themselves. These persons, apparently strangers to each other and the Dr. drawn by the 'charm' from different parts of the room, were seen by the writer, after the Lecture, as acquaintance, and several left the hall in company.

At the lecture last evening the Dr. had his rules printed and distributed among the company. They prohibited any conversation, laughing, or noise of any kind—also any questions except in writing or touching or interfering with persons affected in any way.

This was stated to be absolute and indispensable to the success of all experiments, and the only condition on which the lecturer would proceed. This would of course prevent the slightest investigation—leaving inquirers to take assertion and appearances as their only evidence.

The lecture lasted a full hour and was made up of new views on physiology, psychology, pathology and religion—and many of the lecturer's facts as having occurred within his knowledge—the results of his operations in the new science. He claim-d to have performed miracles; such as curing a raving maniac by a look, and throwing a skeptic into fits by touching the back of his head with his finger, out of which he could not be brought by human power—save by the lecturer's will.

It was observed that all the performers of the previous evening were present, and little 'Libby' was the first to start for the stage; she was followed by the Quaker boy and Dr. Burdell's patient who had the tooth drawn, a middle aged Irish woman, and two or three old performers, a tall man with a bald forehead, and lastly by the industrious and ever busy 'Frank.' The tall girl seemed much disposed to make a display, and could hardly be restrained by the operator. She turned her attention particularly to the Quaker boy and patted his cheek, smoothed his hair and chucked him under the chin, and finally tried to push him off the seat.

The usual phrenological experiments were tried, on all the patients, by placing the hand upon the organs to be affected, and with the usual success—'Libby' made quite a long prayer several kneeling and all joined in singing a hymn—Frank sung the 'Cork Leg' and delivered a political speech addressed to Whigs, Locos, Abolitionists, Natives, Hunkers and Barnburners—the bald headed man sung a love song—the time was attempted to be told by a watch and all guessed, wrong—the watch after missing twice, said 10 minutes to 12, which the Dr. said was right.

Some confusion ensuing, a gentleman, said to be Dr. Coville, rose and remarked, that he had seen nothing yet but what might be the result of deception or collusion, and nothing had been done by any of the subjects that could in any degree convince him that Dr. S. had any extraordinary power over them. It was not at all remarkable that they sung, laughed and prayed, for they could evidently do this at any time. Could he believe it was done solely by the operators' power, he should be astounded, but there was no satisfactory evidence that this was not done by the simple volition of the patient, and whether it was or not was a secret in their own bosoms, and it was extremely difficult to detect deception of this kind by simple physical tests on a trained subject. He said he was not prepared to test this now, or to subject himself to the laughter of the audience if he were outwitted by the performer. Mr. Gray here put the question to the lecturer: "If he was not well acquainted with every person on the stage? and whether he had not had private interviews with them all?" and it was admitted, with some hesitation, that such was the fact.

Dr. S. labored hard, and with apparent sincerity to convince the audience of the truth of his theory; but the impression seemed to be general that that his pretensions were monstrous and absurd, and that the whole operation on the stage was a shameless deception, and that the time expended in its investigation was lost to all but the lecturer, who has pocketed probably one or two hundred dollars a night since he has been here.

BOOK-KEEPING.—The undersigned respectfully informs the public that he is about opening a Class for Book-keeping, at his residence, which will embrace peculiar advantages to all classes; he would remark that his long experience as an accountant in several of the first and largest business houses in the country, will enable him to perfect any one in a correct system in Book-keeping, embracing all the complicated entries arising from a foreign business, and after completing a thorough course, a certificate will be issued by the undersigned to keep any set of books. They will not only understand the theory of Book-keeping but will at once enter upon the duties of the Counting House.

A great many individuals who learn Book-keeping at School are at a perfect loss when they enter the Counting House. The reason is obvious; they are learning a system from books and not from those who have had practical experience.

The undersigned will give his attention to all complicated accounts that may be submitted to him at a reasonable charge. As regards capability he can give references to merchants of the highest respectability. Application made to J. M. CARTER, 167 Duane-st. n17 1meod*

HERRING'S (Wilder's Patent) Fire and Damp Proof Salamander Safes.—The only objection ever made against Wilder's celebrated Patent Fire Proof Salamander Safes was that some of the first made (by Wilder) would mould and dampen books and papers.

The subscriber has invented a damp proof composition which he now applies to the Mahogany Book Case, or panels and distinct, without altering or changing the Fire Proof Filling (patented by Daniel Fitzgerald and by him transferred to Wilder at the Patent Office, Washington) which now renders these Safes the best article of the kind in use.

The exclusive right to make or sell the above Safes in this State is secured to the subscriber.

Jones's celebrated changeable Bank Lock will be furnished when ordered and for sale at manufacturer's prices. A general assortment of double and single Salamander Safes.

Insurance.

THE KNICKERBOCKER Fire Insurance Company (late the Mutual) of New-York—Capital $280,000. Office No. 64 Wall-st.—The Legislature of the State at its late session passed an act changing the corporate name of the old "Mutual Insurance Company of the City of New-York," to the Knickerbocker Fire Insurance Company of New-York. All future business of that Corporation will therefore be transacted under its new name.

It may be well to add, by way of explanation, that the old "Mutual," notwithstanding its title, was in fact a Stock Company, having capital all paid in and securely invested, and that the change of name was obtained to prevent misapprehension on that point.

This Company continues to insure against loss or damage by fire on as favorable terms as similar institutions in this city.
