FANTASIES.

BY ELIZABETH J. EAMES.

"Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth
Unseen, both when we wake and when we sleep."
[Milton.

Oh, friend of mine! doth thy high heart e'er dream
In waking mood? Alas! such dreams are rare—
When we the Real leave for things that seem,
And Fancy comes—that Queen of Shadows fair;
Then gent-sceptred Thought for us creates
An Ideal realm of loveliness supreme;
And fairy-forms pass through the ivory gates
Of a most gloriously enchanted dream.

In palpable and peerless beauty glide
Those seraph-visions through the charmèd halls
In silvery radiance float they side by side,
And o'er their wings of violet softly falls
A silent splendor. Through the azure far
Waves of celestial music swell and die,
While golden harmonies from each pure star
To those strange harpings waft a sweet reply.

In the heart-chambers of wild imagery
Those shapes supernal weave their wondrous spells—
Their snow brows beaming transcendently
Are crowned with wreaths of fadeless asphodels
And fragrant clusters of the immortal rose—
While living blooms of every scent and hue
Spring up beneath them—and around them glows
A rainbow light, flooding the ether blue.

And through the haunted calm their lips divine
Breathe angel-whisperings of peace untold.
These are but Fantasies, dear friend of mine—
And to the Actual ne'er their wings unfold.
Not oft upon us shine such pitying eyes,
Full of eternal tenderness and love—
Only in dreams such blessèd visions rise,
The Ideal must be realized above!

CHRISTIAN CHARITY.—The world is full of men whose only claim to be called Christians is exhibited in a fierce and unlovely war upon transgressors more unfortunate though often less wicked than themselves.—These are they

"Who compound for sins they are inclined to
By demning those they have no mind to,"

and who would fain conceal even from themselves the iniquity that festers in their hearts by a hideous din and clatter about the sins of others. This class of persons is well hit off in the following passage from 'The Home Journal' of the present week. The Editor is replying to one who found fault with him for speaking a word in kindness of one who, after many years of suffering from the effects of violating the laws of Social life, had given evidence of sincere sorrow and penitence and done all that she could do to retrieve her error.

The truth is, that what little time we have found for hating, in a world that keeps us so busy with loving, has been given to ready condemners—the hypocrites who cut off the return to virtue, that they may look moral while closing the door. It is so easy to crush out hope and pity from the bitter bread of the overtempted—and it makes character, and it makes capital—especially for newspapers. It is strange, too, how universally "it answers." We suspect a man who is always bullying, of being a coward. We suspect the ostentatious of needing a cover for conscious meanness. We suspect severe critics to be disappointed authors. But we never suspect the motives of the horrified unforgiving. The unholy rehearsal of the judgment-day goes on—no offence allowed, nor palliation, for, on the throne, sits a sinless and omniscient Editor—and unconsciously the world takes it for what it pretends to be, and grows like it, unforgiving.

One word as to our course and its influence. We do not suppress our pity for an overpunished thief, for fear it will encourage gentlemen to steal. We have too much honor for woman, to think the virtue of wife or sister endangered by hearing that one of the fallen of her sex, after years of humiliation and torture, may, this side the footstool of Christ, find compassion. And we do not see why, as an unpaid "counsel for the defendant" in the Court of Public Opinion, we are barked at, as we always have been, for our humble search after palliating circumstances.
