NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

California.

Extract of a Letter, dated SAN DIEGO, Jan. 20.

In the encounters at the different places in which our troops have met the Californians, the latter have always been attacked under the impression that they had no idea of fighting. In the case of Capt. Mervine, Commodore Stockton had such a contemptible opinion of them, that he had no field-pieces sent ashore; and there were our men on foot under the fire of three or four field-pieces of the enemy, giving them a very hard chase, although mounted on splendid horses. If the chase had continued but a very short time longer, they would undoubtedly have been obliged to give up one or more of their field-pieces; but they had killed so many of our men that it was deemed most prudent to return.

In the case of the Salinas Plains, our small party came upon them unawares and had they shown themselves men, they would have cut every one of our party to pieces, besides doing an irreparable (at the time) damage by taking away our horses. Many were the feats of bravery which our men displayed, and it was by acts of the most reckless and audacious boldness that the officers and men in that engagement were killed, and not from anything which reflects credit on the enemy. For, where simply four white men and two Indians can, by keeping protected by a small wood, and firing from behind the trees, keep away more than 80 of the enemy for upward of an hour, it certainly does not speak well of the bravery of the latter. These few men were an advanced guard, and as soon as the main body of about forty came up, the enemy immediately took to flight.

The Californians have, as one of their weapons, a very thin and beautifully made spear, kept as sharp as a razor, and attached to a long pole of about five feet. They have, latterly, done all their fighting with it. And it is by means of these weapons that they have had such successes. Our army not being able to obtain good horses, could not keep clear of them. They would make their Arab-like charges from behind; and before one of our riders was able to turn his horse to face his foe, he would find himself horribly cut, or transfixed with one of their spears; and the Californians, well knowing where their great advantage lay, never made an attack unless they came behind. Thus it was with General Kearney's dragoons, who were mounted on worn-out mules, which at the best is only a caricature of a Dragoon.—Beside, they had but a small body of men, it being the advance guard, opposed to about 600 well-mounted men, (they having for a long time reserved all their best horses and kept them in good order, for the purpose of having this great advantage over our Dragoons.) The Dragoons had a great many difficulties to contend with. Their swords would not cut through the enemies' clothes, for they had been cutting wood all the way across the Continent; their guns would not go off, from the wet. Beside, their jaded and worn-out bodies were in no plight for fighting; and it is no wonder that the advance was worsted until the main body came up. I trust the last battle will keep things quiet for the future in this part of the country. [Journal of Commerce.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—The dwelling-house of Mr. Hiram Sherman, in Fenner, was struck by lightning the 21st ult. The fluid struck the roof, and separating near the plate, a part of it entered the side of the house, directly over the head of Mr. Sherman, who was sitting bareheaded and leaning against the wall, striking him on the head or shoulders, and passing down his back until it encountered a nail driven in the wall and thence to the outside of the house, without farther damage. Mr. S. was struck senseless, his hair and clothing in a complete blaze, fell prostrate and apparently dead. Dr. Mead succeeded in restoring Mr. S. to consciousness. The severe injuries he received render his recovery doubtful. The wife of Mr. S., a hired man and several children were present, but escaped with a severe shock. [Cazenovia Whig.

A QUAKER TURNED ROMAN CATHOLIC.—On Thursday, the 4th of March, baptism, according to the Roman ritual, was conferred by Dr. Brown of Wales, and afterward confirmation, upon Mr. Jabez Marriage Gibson, till then a member of the Society of Friends.—Mr. Gibson has spent a considerable time in Eastern travel, and brought with him from the Jordan the water which was used in his baptism. Two years since he met at the house of a common friend, near Rome, the present Pope, then Cardinal Archbishop, Bishop of Imola, and discussed with him topics of religion. [N. Y. Obs.

ACCIDENT.—The Whitehall Telegraph says the stage from this city, broke through "Polly's Bridge," about six miles from that place. The passengers had taken the precaution to get out before crossing and were thus saved. Two of the horses were drowned, and the mails thoroughly soaked. The bags were all rescued, the packages dried and dispatched to their several places of destination. A gentleman with a little boy in his arms, who was walking by the side of the stage, was thrown some distance into the water, but by great efforts and swimming some fifty rods escaped and saved the child.

FIRE.—The barn and joiner's shop belonging to Mr. Moses Breck, near his dwelling-house, in Elm-st. in Northampton, Mass. was destroyed by fire on Wednesday. Loss about $1,300; insured for $500.

THANKSGIVING.—Some of our colored friends in this city are intending, on Tuesday next, to celebrate the passage of the late anti-slavery law in the State Legislature, by a public thanksgiving. [Phil. Freeman.

RETURNED.—The St. Louis, Capt. Fred. Wheeler, returned on Saturday from an unsuccessful effort to reach Chicago. The Captain reports the Straits full of ice for 20 miles. [Detroit Advertiser, 26.

☞ It is stated that an officer in the Army has executed a portrait of Gen. Taylor, which is to be engraved by Sartain and published in the July number of Graham's Magazine. This portrait is said to be the only accurate likeness of Taylor in the country, which goes, in part, to vindicate him from the charge of wearing such an eccentric visage as some newspaper cuts have gratuitously furnished him with.

☞ The followers of Joanna Southcote continue to parade about the streets of the Metropolis, uttering melancholy wails for the sin which brought down famine upon Ireland. Their long beards, tunics, and large leather girdles give them a grotesque appearance. Several times they have been taken before the magistrates and admonished, but they heed not the advice. [London Cor. Jour. Com.

☞ It is proposed to tunnel the St. Lawrence, opposite the island of Montreal, in order to connect the Railroad running to the Atlantic. The proposed tunnel under the St. Lawrence, at the narrowest part, near St. Helen's Island, will be about one-third of a mile from shore to shore.

BRANDYWINE CORN MEAL.

NOTICE TO SHIPPERS.—The subscribers, millers of Brandywine, in the State of Delaware, beg leave to notify the shippers of kiln-dried corn meal, that they are liable to be deceived by an imitation of the genuine Brandywine meal.

A miller at West Troy, and one at Waterford, in New-York, beside several in the State of Pennsylvania, having forged the marks of the subscribers, by placing Brandywine mills in conspicuous letters on their barrels.

Shippers will please take notice, that in addition to the word Brandywine, the names of the subscribers are also used on all their packages, and that their only agents in New-York are Messrs. John L. Buckley & Co, and Messrs. Allen & Paxson.

As experience of upward of 70 years by their progenitors and themselves, in the manufacture of kiln-dried meal, justifies them in saying, that they will furnish an article which will keep for any desirable length of time in all climates.—Brandywine Mills, 22d April, 1847.
