IN THE REALM OF POETRY.

Easter Is to Be.

The earth awaits its Easter morn,
All barren and unblest;
The dead leaves of a dead year cling
In wearying unrest.

The winter storms, so pitiless,
Have swept o'er hill and dale,
Till Nature's face is desolate,
And scarred with frozen mail.

The wild streams burst their iron bands,
And clamor toward the sea,
Roots Mother Earth so patiently,
For Easter is to be.

The resurrection of all life,
That hidden is, or lost;
Great heart of God! to fear, to wait—
This is the Easter cost.

And human hearts must learn to feel
The coming Easter joy,
'Mid darkness and 'mid seeming death,
And all life's vast alloy.

Dear Mother Earth! thy children learn
Life's lessons at thy knee;
Patience—to bear all seeming wrong;
For Easter is to be.
—Emma Miner, in Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The Wind.

The wind is tapping at my window pane;
Oft he has come and he will come again,
Seeking to win an entrance, but in vain.
Poor lonely wind!

Naught but the frozen earth around he sees,
He shivers as he passes through the trees,
Not long ago he was a balmy breeze.
Poor changed wind!

If I were now to ope my window wide,
To let you in, what should I lose beside?
The very warmth for which you long have sighed,
Poor frozen wind!

So, if I seem your pleadings not to mind,
And on your sorrow turn a glance that's blind,
Remember, if I could, I would be kind,
And help, you piteous wind!
—Westminster Gazette.

Farewell to Dawn.

Dawn on the harbor, wan and very still,
A glimmering gray upon the quiet deep,
While the great bradlands seem to crouch, and creep
Closer beneath the shelter of the hill.

All the night long we sat and talked our fill
Of boyhood days, the faith we vowed to keep;
We thrust aside the wooing arms of sleep,
And vagrant memory wove our words at will.

One hand-clasp more, a step upon the quay,
And the light boat goes springing through the foam,
Leaping with joy to greet the freshening gale.

Then, as I turn to seek my lonely home,
Athwart the black ships fretted forestry
The sunlight flashes on your far-borne sail.
—Walter Thackwell, in Chambers' Journal.

The Race Against Time.

This is the trouble, this day, with the rhyme;
It's a race against Time!
We try for the summits that few of us climb;
It's a race against Time!

This is the trouble—the trouble sublime:
It's a race against Time!
And this one has innocence—that one has crime;
It's a race against Time!

But Time, that's a tyrant, will know that the gloom
Of the world's weary winters will drift into bloom,
And God, for the innocent, yet will make room
In the race against Time!
—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

The Lost Day.

Through all the lonely day I walked in dread,
The world had lost the charm it once possessed;
A thousand dangers seemed to loom ahead,
A thousand borrowed troubles filled my breast.

Upon the morrow, beautiful and bright,
The sun with newly added splendor rose;
My troubles had departed with the night,
And, free, I saw them all imagined woes.

I hailed the new, the splendid day, with glee;
But who may ever figure up the cost
Of that fear-haunted, gloomy day to me,
The day that might have gladdened—which I lost?
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

The Secret.

She tried to be happy by day and by night,
She bought everything that could give her delight;
She went to the places that people called "gay,"
Yet soon was so bored that she hurried away;
She struggled and strove, by land and by sea,
To make herself happy, yet never could be.

"Since I cannot be happy myself, I will try
To brighten some other as the moment's flit by,"
She cried in despair, and then with all speed,
Forgetting herself, she was happy indeed.
—Farm Journal.

The Man of One Idea.

"We sneer at folks with one idee,
But mebby, in the end
The chap with one idee may git
Where you and me ain't climb to yit,
Nor ever will, my friend.

"I knew a chap with one idee
A-rattlin' in his pate;
We laughed in them old days because
Of thinkin' what a fool he was,
But now, by gosh! he's great.

"It ain't so bad, jist one idee,
Provided that it's good
And stuck to right through thick and thin.
Just one idee made each man win
That at the top has stood."
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

His Little.

"I will not ask the world for much,"
A sage declared one day,
"For he whose wishes are immense
May never win, they say.

"I'll ask the world for little, then
It may be sooner had,
And while they sigh who ask for much
I'll have mine, and be glad."

He got his little, yet was not
More happy than before,
For always when he mite he got
He craved a little more.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Lorena.

When Lorena goes away,
Even if for one day only,
Long and dreary seems the day,
All the rooms are dull and lonely.

Then I seek her plants to dress,
But my touch is not Lorena's;
And I only make a mess
With her roses and verbenas.

But when she comes back at night,
How she'll make the dishes clatter,
Set the table, strike a light,
Charm me with her merry chatter.
—Eugene C. Dolson, in Good Housekeeping.

Ladies and Children Invited.

All ladies and children who cannot stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups, cathartics, etc., are invited to try the famous Little Early Risers. They are different from all other pills. They do not purge the system. Even a double dose will not gripe, weaken or sicken; many people call them the Easy Pill. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says nothing better can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc. Bob Moore, Lafayette, Ind., says all others gripe and sicken, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work well and easy. PROVES THE BIBLE TRUE.

Modern Science Now Confirms the Reliability of the Old Testament Record.

Perhaps the most remarkable event in the history of modern Christianity is the unexpected confirmation of Bible truths from the hands of what seemed to be its arch-enemy, Modern Science, says Woman's Home Companion.

The pick and spade of modern scientific investigations have come to the rescue. Parts of the old Biblical world have been opened up, and we now find ourselves face to face with the veritable contemporaries of Daniel, Moses, Joseph, Abraham.

Within the last two decades the excavator has been actively engaged uncovering a few cities in the land of Eden, the home of Abraham. The University of Pennsylvania is excavating Nippur, the Biblical name of which is Calneh (Genesis x, 10); the French are excavating Tello, a city which flourished before Abraham was born, and the Germans are at work upon the temple and the "Tower of Babel" in the city of Babylon.

The origin of those remarkable Babylonian legends which so closely resemble the Biblical accounts of the Creation, Eden, and the Deluge belongs to this country. The Deluge story, for instance, as recorded by the Babylonians is strikingly similar to the Old Testament even in minor details. Atrachasis, the Babylonian Noah, is commanded by the gods, after they had decreed a flood, to build a ship or ark; to pour pitch over the outside and the inside, and to take the seed of life of every kind into the ship. When it was ready, Atrachasis embarked with his family, servants, possessions, cattle and beasts of the field, and closed the door. The heavens rained destruction for six days and nights. The winds raged, the floods and storms devastated, until the whole of mankind was turned into clay. The ship grounded on a mountain of Nizir. After seven days a dove is sent forth; but it returned, as a resting place it did not find. He then sent forth a swallow, but it also returned. Lastly a raven is let go, which did not turn back. Everything is then sent forth to the four points of the compass. An altar is erected and sacrifices offered. The gods smelt the sweet savor, and gathered like flies about the sacrifices, after which it is decided that, instead of a deluge, wild beasts and famines shall diminish mankind because of its sins.

A number of the tablets containing these legends were written about the time of Abraham.

HAPPINESS.

Christian joy is an experience of great depth and solemnity. It never overlooks the sadness and sternness of life; it is never shallow or unreflecting; it is restrained, tender, sympathetic, confident. We know it when we see it in the face of any whom we love; it helps us.—R. J. Campbell.

It is astonishing how large a part of Christ's precepts is devoted solely to the inculcation of happiness. How much of His life, too, was spent simply in making people happy! There is no word more often on His lips than "blessed," and it is recognized by Him as a distinct end in life, the end for this life, to secure the happiness of others. —Henry Drummond.

It is not rare gifts that make men happy. It is the common and simple and universal gifts; it is health, and the glance of sunshine in the morning; it is fresh air; it is the friend, the lover; it is the kindliness that meets us on the journey; it may be only a word, a smile, a look . . . It is these and not any rarity of blessing that are God's gentle art of making happy.—G. H. Morrison.

The Incalculable Factor.

A notion that anyone can make a visible material success of his life and win fortune, fame or influence if he will only use the faculties of his nature, is the favorite aphorism of the fortunate, but, says the Boston Watchman, it utterly lacks correspondence with the facts of experience. Some of the ablest, most upright and most industrious men fail in their purposes, while men of far inferior mental and moral qualities advance to the front. There are just as good ministers and lawyers following their professions in small country places, and earning a bare livelihood, as there are in the cities. The world has never discovered them, and perhaps never will unless some happy occurrence should bring them to the front. The chapter of accidents occupies many pages in every biography, and the exploit that men plume themselves upon as evincing their peculiar insight or energy, more often than not was achieved by the aid of a combination of circumstances with which they had nothing whatever to do. A different combination would have upset all their calculations. The petition, "Give us this day our daily bread," is based on a deep insight into the facts of life. For if God does not bestow bread, no great investments, or shrewdness or energy will enable us to get it. The factors that are beyond our control that make for the success or failure of our efforts are so numerous and strong that not only the beggar who does not know where the next meal is coming from, but the millionaire, will find his highest wisdom in the reverent and humble utterance of that prayer. Swiftness of foot does not necessarily indicate the winning of the race, nor strength of arm a victory in the battle.

Worries of Life.

The only possible way to overcome the worries of life, the anxieties as to the future, is to learn to trust God. If God is our father and friend, the future can have no terrors.—Rev. Dr. Hall.

TWO CURES.

FLORENCE, S. C., Aug. 16, 1902.

Gentlemen:—I began to suffer from rheumatism about three years ago, and had it very bad in my limbs. At times I could hardly walk. Was treated by a physician without benefit. More than a year ago Mr. George Wilson, an engineer on the Coast Line, living in Florence, told me that "RHEUMACIDE" cured him. I got a bottle and it benefited me. I took five bottles and am now as well as I ever was in my life. I regard "RHEUMACIDE" as a great medicine. I know of others it has cured.

Truly,
S. T. BUNCH.

DARLINGTON, S. C., Aug. 19th, 1902.

Gentlemen:—About two years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered great pain and was confined to my bed for five weeks. During the time I was treated by two Physicians without permanent relief. Capt. Harker, a conductor on the Atlantic Coast Line heard of my condition and sent me two bottles of "RHEUMACIDE." I began to take it and in a week I got up and walked on crutches. After taking three bottles of the remedy I got entirely well and went back to my business.

I personally know of a number of other bad cases that were cured by the use of your medicine, in this town and vicinity. It is all that you claim for it.

Truly, J. L. SIMMON.
