Learn to Swim.

The accidental drowning of five girls in the Hackensack river, New Jersey, a few days ago, when a gust of wind upset a rowboat, in which they were crossing, and the multitude of similar accidents every summer, call attention to the importance of learning to swim. Girls can swim as well as boys, and every girl ought to find opportunity to learn how. In the Hackensack river case the three men escaped because they could swim, but the young women all went to the bottom. To women who have not learned to swim the old injunction, "Don't go near the water," is wise and infallible. But some time or other every woman runs the risk of getting spilled in deep water, and for that mishap she needs a little knowledge and practice in swimming. A very little of this knowledge goes a long way. It prevents persons from getting terrorized and enables them to keep afloat or get to a boat, plank or oar. The best time to learn is when a child, and in the summer. Once learned, the art is never forgotten.—Baltimore Sun.
