The Kaffeekanne.

The difference between a 5 o'clock tea and a German Kaffeeklatsch is enormous. The tea is a pleasant go-as-you-please meeting, where we balance our teacups in hand perilously handicapped by our multitudinous possessions, augmented by the frail saucer on which a top heavy piece of cake finds an insecure resting place. We may enjoy a variety of creature comforts augmented by ices and cups on festive occasions.

Not so the German Kaffeeklatsch. That is a ponderous affair which you take sitting at tables. Coffee and savories mark the beginning of the meal followed by numberless cakes which the Germans know so well how to make. This is followed by some creamy preparation or a beautiful device made in ice. This again is succeeded by the choicest fruits.

The Kaffeekanne is meanwhile still busily plying its trade. There is a well known German song which ends with the refrain, freely translated: "Thank you, thank you, hostess mine. I never drink more cups than dine."—London Queen.

The Fairy Hounds.

In some years stoats appear to be more numerous than in others, and they are seen not in ones and twos, but in dozens, hunting together in small packs. The late E. T. Booth of Brighton, when shooting in East Lothian one autumn, met a pack of stoats which attacked a terrier he had with him and would not be driven off until he and the dog between them had killed more than a dozen. Stoats will hunt together from scent and in full cry like a pack of hounds, one always keeping the line and followed closely by the others. This sight has been recorded by different observers, who have also seen weasels hunting in the same way. There is a popular notion in the west of England that hares are hunted at night by packs of little fairy hounds, locally called "dandy dogs," and these are said to be weasels, which the west country folks call "fairies," pronouncing the word "vairy" and "vair." Some of them declare that they have seen and watched the chase with awe.—London Graphic

Poetic Justice.

A man whose soul had been tortured frequently by the remarks of his wife, who takes a fiendish delight in setting a price on the handsome clothes worn by other women, one day found sweet comfort in the incautious comment of a woman in a crowded car.

"Oh, yes," said that observing other woman, "the hat looks well enough, but it is cheap. It couldn't have cost a cent more than $6."

Thereupon said the man to his wife: "Why do you always pick out the most expensive clothes for especial notice? Why don't you look at something cheap once in awhile? There are cheap things worn. There is a hat in this very car that cost only $6. The woman just behind us pointed it out a minute ago."

"Well," said his wife, "you are the last person on earth who ought to feel proud of it. It was me she was talking about."—New York Times.

Old English Flint Glass.

Large quantities of lead and potash were introduced into the constituents of the glass which in 1673 is described as being clear, heavy and thick as crystal.

A great impetus was given to the manufacture when the edict of Nantes in 1685 drove the skilled artisans from France. Many of them came to England, and the fame of British glass grew until it was considered superior to that of Bohemia.

From 1736 to about 1761 we have but few particulars. Then Michael Edkins, formerly a potter, became prominent as a maker of the highest class of enameled glass, which has become very scarce. It has an opaque white body, beautifully painted in enamel colors with figures, flowers, etc. In fact, it much resembles a glassy porcelain. It is getting scarce, too, and fine pieces are increasing in value.—London Opinion.

Optimistic.

"My wife is a very optimistic woman."

"Indeed she is."

"Noticed it, have you?"

"Yes; when I was talking with her yesterday she said that if you ever died she would marry again because she felt sure that she could do better next time."—Houston Post.

Triumphs of Travel.

"Now he's bragging about how he did Venice."

"What do you mean?"

"Most tourists spend a week in Venice. He did it in a day."—Kansas City Journal.

No Excuse.

"Is that horse you bought a kicker?"

"A kicker?" answered Mr. Sirius Barker. "I am the fellow who paid twice his value and who is buying the feed. What has the horse got to kick about?"—Washington Star.

Precocity.

"Every time the baby looks into my face he smiles," said Mr. Meekton.

"Well," answered his wife, "it may not be exactly polite, but it shows he has a sense of humor."—Exchange.
