Ebenezer Elliott.

From Burritt's Christian Citizen.

"The poet is born, not made," says Cicero. Ye critical offspring of Aristarchus! is the chief of Roman orators right or wrong when he makes this declaration? If he is right, why talk of "educating poets?" If he is wrong, how can there exist a poetic pantheon of "uneducated immortals?" The truth is, that he is both right and wrong. He is right when he says that the poet is born, because the poetic sympathy is innate—it cannot be imparted by an inferior power. The God of the beautiful and true alone can give it—the beautiful and true in Nature alone can awake its voice and develop its soul. God gives to the poet the sense of poetry—the soul of sympathy, and circumstances, strike its peculiar chords, and develop its peculiar bent. Burns sang of love and nature as he saw and felt them, all fresh and flowery; and of liberty and slavery, as Cincinnatus, if he had been a plowman through life, and a poet would have done. Burns the plowman saw "Cuffs," arrant, brainless, asinine aristocrats monopolize the earth, and he saw the laborer spurned by his lordly fellow-worm when he asked leave to toil, and he sung out his protests against oligarchical misrule strong as the hurricane that in November blows, but sweet as the song of the mavis in Spring.

Ebenezer Elliot, whom we believe to have scarcely found a competent critic in England, sings of nature too, but he does so with a passionate intenseness and half-pensive sadness that would make an English Prime Minister weep, if that were possible. He reminds you of an exile, ever and anon eagerly rushing to the scenes of his early love, and then singing of them, as only a true poet can, while an iron necessity drags his limbs and energies back to the grim immurement of his workshop. He launches the thunderbolts of his fiery indignation against the "Bread-taxery," as he terms the aristocracy; but it is not because they refuse to allow their brethren of the earth to toil, but because they rob the artisan of the fruits of his labor by that artificial system of canonized plunder, vulgarly styled "legislation." Both are eminently Poets of the People; but while Burns speaks like a noble rustic, Elliot is like a Cyclops. The one foams like the mountain torrent in denunciation; the other's voice rings like a crashing sledge-hammer on an anvil. "Let us labor," cries Burns to the fox-hunting land monopolists. "Do not rob me of my hard earned gains," cries Elliot, in a voice of thunder, to the same men. The peasant looks upon them as obstructionists, the artisan as "robbers," and he does not mince the word.

The poet is both born and made, then. Nature imbued Ebenezer Elliot with the "fire divine;" and the attrition of toil, poverty, suffering, and political injustice struck that fire from him in wild and searing sparks, which were at the same time pregnant with the glow of earnestness, and beautiful as the light of truth. Elliot can make the hearts of the intelligent British artisans swell and dance with turbid impulses, and he causes them to mutter and clench their hands. We will not deny this instinctive truth, and it is right that it should be known; but at the same time he can make the big tears start from their eyes. He knows, because he has felt their wrongs, and he has given them a tongue of burning eloquence and of melting sorrow. He is a great poet, and he is a great man; although he has been dubbed "Corn-Law Rhymer," and the "Poet of the Beggars," by sneering critics.

Ebenezer Elliot was born on the 17th of March, 1781, at Masborough, near Rotherham, where his father was commercial clerk in an Iron Work, having a salary of seventy pounds a year, and eight children to keep in food and raiment off the same. Ebenezer was remarkable for nothing in his youth, but a fondness for old wives' stories, a certain gentleness of disposition that rendered him a sort of favorite with feminine retailers of ghost literature, and more than ordinary intellectual dullness. He could not learn to cypher, and grammar fairly baffled him. The school to him was a prison; books torture. Yet this dull child, whom people scolded or pitied on account of his stupidity, and whom his father sent to the iron factory in order to learn, if possible, a handicraft, was sensitive as Chatterton, and had dreams, perhaps, as beautiful, at least with more of the true in them, than had that wayward boy.

Ebenezer had a brother who was quite his opposite in all that related to his intellectual acquirements—one who was praised, flattered, smiled upon, and made a clerk of; while he was begrimed with the smoke of the forge, and neglected. Ebenezer never envied this brother, but he would retire to some solitary place and weep over his own incapacity to produce one plaudit. He would fly his kite in his solitude, however; and as he watched it mounting up into the blue heavens, his eyes would look beyond it into the azure concave, and strange stirrings would take place in his soul. He would launch the little barks, too, which he used to scoop out with his clasp knife, and these he would watch with as much interest as if he had been a youthful Newton or Archimedes watching the development of some mighty idea; and, let critics write about educated or uneducated poets as they please, this unlettered boy was thus storing his mind with thoughts or associations with which to clothe his future thoughts, and so was unconsciously educating his poetic nature. Luckily, too, one of the poet's early companions was a youth of highly cultivated mind—James Ramsbotham, the son of a laborious teacher. This youth was being educated for the Church, and used to wander with Ebenezer, reciting to him the Iliad in the original. To Elliot there was sense in the very sound of the swelling Greek verse, and he even committed several lines of it to memory, so fond was he of it.

This young friend died, however, and young Elliot was early called to the battle of life. He married young, had a large family, and was constrained to toil with his hands for his bread, and the bread of those dependent upon him; while at the same time he knew that, by indirect taxation, two-thirds of his earnings at least were filched from him to pamper fox hunters, and keep their sons in scarlet uniforms and cigars and brandy. He lived with the people, and saw their sufferings; he examined the laws of the aristocracy, and beheld the misery and murder which they produced; and the electric vehemence of his nature burst from its hidden fonts, scorching alike the tyrant and the willing slave. If Mr. Elliot have never been familiar with misery, he never would have written poetry. In speaking of his writings to Lord Brougham, he beautifully and touchingly remarks, "My pencil is dipped in sadness and familiar with shadow."

Ebenezer Elliot came to Sheffield a very poor but a strong-armed and stout-hearted workman. He labored, he suffered, he reaped experience, he was purified; he saw, he felt, he sympathized, and he learned to know. The soul of all things is knowledge; and toilers of every land will only be free when they, like this man, realize the sublime aphorism, "knowledge is power." Ebenezer Elliot began business on his own account at last, and was in a prosperous way of life, when the "Corn Laws" drove his customers from him, and swept, by the superinducing of a commercial panic in 1837, about four thousand pounds from his treasury. The business in which Elliot made his money, (for he is now in easy circumstances, and living in retirement in a suburb of Sheffield,) was that of bar-iron merchant. The monopolists made him glad to get out of it, however, before he had lost his all; and he has certainly paid them in poetry for the evils which they brought upon the country in general, and himself in particular. His family were ten in number, and two of his sons carry on a home trade in steel and iron, in their father's late premises, in the little counting-house of which he wrote most of his poetry. He has two sons clergymen of the State Church of England, (rather queer,) and three in trade. The other children we suppose are daughters, and consequently have no peculiar positions in life which fall to be mentioned in biography.

Mr. Elliot is a thorough radical; he has a most sovereign contempt for mere king-made greatness, and he hates injustice. His poetry is like his countenance, bold, rugged, distinct in feature, earnest and intensely energetic. In conversation, Elliot's language is rapid, vivacious and epigrammatic, and his eyes scintillate while his words come flashing from his mouth like jagged lightning. He often allows the vehemence of his feelings to hurry him beyond the limits of Christian charity in his denunciations. We feel inclined to deplore this; but still, let no man dare to blame, who has not passed through an ordeal like Elliot's. We hear the words—we realize the thoughts; but do we know, fully know, their source? Ay, that's the question. Yet! yet! Ebenezer Elliot's poetry is full of religious solemnity and earnestness. He invokes God; but never lightly—never irreverently. He cries unto Him wildly, but never impiously. Have our American brethren studied this great poet of the British poor? If they have not, they should. J. B. S.

Galvanic Spectacles.—Mr. J. S. Paine, optician, of Worcester Mass. has invented something new in the way of spectacles. He has constructed that part of the bows holding the glasses, and the bridge of two metals, viz: silver and zinc—and he is confident of having thus achieved an important improvement by an uninterrupted flow of electricity, which he believes invigorates the eyes and actually relieves them from a world of small physical annoyances, independently of waning vision. By touching the tip of the tongue on the nose piece, an unmistakable sensation is produced, and a flash of light is instantly perceptible. Mr. Paine thinks that he feels a cool current constantly passing by the orbits while the glasses are worn. Like a genuine Yankee, he secures a patent, of course, and if the discovery equals his expectations, the millions of spectacle wearers of all countries will soon begin to pay tribute to New-England ingenuity. The subject is one that should command the attention of physicians, since a new province for exploration is exposed to view. [Medical and Surgical Journal.

Independence Square.—In the Square, during yesterday, all was animation. Workmen were busy in erecting three stands for the use of the officers of the great Whig Ratification Meeting, which will be held as soon after the nomination as possible, either on Friday or Saturday. The stands are unusually large, and are being constructed of the most substantial materials. One is placed at the southern entrance of the State House, and one at each of the southern gates. In addition to these, two of Owens' platforms have been put up, one at each of the side gates, making in all five rostrums. The square is to be brilliantly illuminated with Drummond lights, the platforms lighted with spirit gas, and one hundred globe lamps are to be suspended from the trees. Flags will be profusely interspersed throughout the yard, and several bands of music will add to the enlivening incidents. The meeting, it is expected, as may be judged by the extent and nature of the preparations, will be one of the largest that has ever been held in this city. [Philadelphia Ledger, 8th.

The Industrial Congress of the United States.—The Industrial Congress, composed of Delegates from various parts of the country, commenced its session on Wednesday in Philadelphia. David Bryant of Boston was elected President; S. L. Detwiler of Baltimore, and John Shedden of Philadelphia, Vice Presidents; G. H. Evans of N. Y., J. K. Ingalls of N. Y. and A. H. Rosenheim of Philadelphia, Secretaries. After the business of receiving the credentials of the members was gone through with, the remainder of the afternoon session was devoted to the consideration of the policy to be pursued by the Congress in relation to the coming elections of President and Vice-President of the United States. The meeting will convene daily at 8 A.M. Much interest seems to be manifested in the proceedings of the body.

The Grand River Route.—This line is now fully organized. It will bring Milwaukee at least one day and a half nearer Detroit, and we cannot doubt but that present travel will sustain it. There is also a very large travel growing up between Wisconsin and the Grand River country, which alone may sustain this enterprise. [Mil. Wisconsin.

Late from Santa Fe.

From the St. Louis Reveille.

Santa Fe, New-Mexico, April 16, 1848.

Capt. Sena, one of the officers who fled with Armijo at the approach of our troops last year, arrived here day before yesterday, and forthwith repaired to Col. Newby's quarters and presented himself as a prisoner of war. He stated that himself and forty other Mexican officers had been taken, after a "slight brush," at a rancho called Santa Cruz de Rosales, situated about sixty miles south of Chihuahua. Among the prisoners was the notorious Gov. Armijo, whose passport Capt. Sena delivered at the same time with his own. Armijo came up as far as Albuquerque, and will be up here in a few days.

[We omit an account of the battle at Rosales, the particulars not differing much from reports received.—Eds.]

On the first of next month Col. Newby and Maj. Reynolds will set out with a force of 250 men to give the Navajoes the thrashing they have long since so richly deserved. These Indians are committing their depredations daily, and have murdered Mexicans within eight or ten miles of Santa Fe itself. The troops here are, or have been, impotent being mostly infantry. But a portion of the Illinoians have been mounted, and with a portion of Maj. Reynolds's mounted forces will make up an expedition sufficiently large to successfully encounter any number of Indians that may be found. The strictest discipline and good order prevail throughout New-Mexico, and the commandant, Col. Newby, is highly popular with all classes.

Destruction of the "Clarksville."—The Memphis Eagle of the 30th ult. has the following further particulars in relation to the loss of the Clarksville:

"The fire by which this noble boat was destroyed was first discovered about a mile below Ozark Island, No. 73, five or six miles below Napoleon, at half past 5, Saturday evening, the 27th. The pilot remained at his post till she ran round the island and headed it. In a very few minutes after the discovery of the fire, the boat struck the ground, when any of the passengers might have got on the forecastle, and thence reached the Island. As soon as she struck, the flames, hitherto driven back by the current of air, burst through up into the cabin. All the passengers who had gone forward to the forecastle were saved by stepping on shore; those who had remained in the aft cabin, fearing an explosion, were compelled to jump overboard at the stern, which lay out to the current. All the cabin passengers, so far as could be ascertained, were saved. Of the deck passengers, two white ladies and an infant child were lost. Capt. Holmes and one white deck hand, Charles Quinn, were lost."

Destructive Fires in Iowa.—The large and valuable grist and saw mills about two miles above Iowa City, commonly known as the "Iowa City Manufacturing Company Mills," were destroyed by fire on the 23d ult. No insurance.... The extensive grist and saw mills of Dr. J. L. Warren on Skunk River, near the Holland Settlement, in this State, were burned down on the 25d ult. They had only been completed and in operation seven days. [Dubuque (Iowa) Tribune.

COMMERCIAL AND MONEY MATTERS

For Sales of Stocks, &c. see Fourth Page.

Thursday, June 8—P. M.

The market was rather quiet until the false announcement of the nomination of Gen. Taylor was made, when the fancies advanced ½ per cent. Treasury Notes sold at 3½ per cent. After the announcement was discovered to be incorrect, the prices fell back again.

In Sterling there is but little doing. The rates are 10½@11½, with fair supply.

There is a good deal of Freight offering, and engagements were made of 2,000 or 3,000 bbls Provisions at 2s 6d @ 25s, and a cargo of 16,000 bushels Corn at 6d, all for Liverpool.

At Buffalo the money market is a little easier. Best drafts on New-York can be negotiated, which was not the case some time ago. Inferior paper goes in the street at 2@3 per cent. per month.

The Tennessee Marine and Fire Insurance Company of Nashville, have declared a semi annual dividend of $3 per share.

At the late term of Court in Wayne Co. application was made for an injunction to restrain the officers of the Wooster Bank from selling or transferring the assets of the Bank for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the Bank. After argument, the writ of injunction was denied, and the matter dismissed.

The receipts of the Connecticut River Railroad for the month of May amount to $15,126 45, viz: For freight, $7,664 01; passengers, $7,199 36; from other sources, $263 08. The receipts of the corresponding month of last year, were $9,791 85. Increase 54 per ct.

The following statement exibits the principal articles of domestic stores shipped to Mexico by the Commissary Department, for the army, from July 1, 1847 to April 30, 1848, viz:

Oats, 455,542 bush.; Corn, 117,600 bush.; Hay, 6,105,677 lbs.; Coal, 149,220 bbls.; Horses, 3,731; Mules, 615; Lumber, assorted, 775,140 feet; Iron, assorted, 532,092 feet; Oils, assorted, 11,600 galls.; White and Black Lead, 29,025 lbs.; Nails, assorted, 102,971 lbs.; Rope, assorted, 116,716 lbs.; No. of Wagons, 475; No. of Mule Shoes, 33,000; No. of Horse Shoes, 21,000; Mississippi water, 98,470 galls.; Copper, 36,024 lbs.; Leather, 50,000 lbs.; Tar, 300 bbls.

In addition to the above, about 25,000 barrels of subsistence stores have been sent forward, and 200,000 packages of Quartermaster's stores, camp and garrison equipage, ordnance stores and clothing for the army, which it would be impossible to enumerate in this brief statement.

The amount of fuel and forage purchased in the City of New-Orleans during the period stated is as follows, viz: Coal, 290,000 bushels; Oats, 440,000 do; Corn, 100,000 do; Hay, 6,050,000 pounds. During the same period, some 15,000 troops and 3,000 teamsters, with their arms, ammunition, camp equipage, &c have been sent out from this point, beside the provisions for the army, ordnance, military stores, etc. etc.

The following is a statement of Domestic and Foreign Imports for the month of May, 1848, at Oswego, together with the exports of salt for the same period:

Lumber, 5,317,000 feet; Wheat, 532,316 bushels; Corn, 20,940 do; Barley, 14,053 do; Rye, 4,600 do; Oats, 14,100 do; Seed, 1,941 do; Potatoes, 1,200 do; Flour, 15,320 bbls; Pork, 17,227 do; Beef, 2,460 do; Lard, 6,780 do; Tallow, 137 do; Peas, 2,100 do; Beans, 1,780 do; Ashes, 1,381 casks; Cheese, 236 do; Whisky, 373 do; Shingles, 3,131,000 do; Staves, 636,000 no; Hoops, 1,751,000 do; Hides, 250 do; Cedar and Oak, 1,007 cds; Glass, 843 bxs; Dry Goods, 125 do; Scrap Iron, 27 do; Butter, 308 fks; Coal, 282 tons; Broom Corn, 150 bls; Hops, 356 do; Bacon, 850 pkgs; Hams and Shoulders, 3,371 do.

Although there is a falling off in the receipts of Flour and Grain, the aggregate imports for the month of May are larger than in the corresponding month of last year. The imports from the shore of Lake Ontario have increased considerably. The following comparison of a few leading articles of imports during the month of May, for two or three seasons, indicates the nature of change that has taken place:

☞ Constipation, (Costiveness,) however habitual or inveterate, permanently cured, without medicines, injections or baths, by a delicious vegetable food, the celebrated Ervalenta—a discovery originally made by Mr. James Perry of London, (now deceased,) and sold by him under the fictitious name of "Warton of Paris." The subscriber is the exclusive proprietor of the "New and Improved Warton's Ervalenta," prepared with great care and cost from the true and genuine receipe of Mr. Perry, otherwise called Warton of Paris, from materials always freshly imported and never musty, acid or injured. He guarantees that it is truly, visibly and vastly superior in appearance, flavor and efficacy, to any ever before manufactured or imported; that it has not been, and cannot be, imitated nor equaled by any like preparation in the United States, without the proprietor's secret, nor imported from abroad in a sound state and sold here, without the most pernicious adulterations, and that no Ervalenta is the genuine "New and Improved Warton's Ervalenta," sold or advertised by any one else, or will compare in any substantial respect with it. Packages of 1 lbs. $1 50; of 2 lbs. $1.

Sold, wholesale and retail, by the subscriber, sole agent for the United States, at the old stand of Dr. James H. Hart, (latterly Hammond & Co. and McCotter & Co.) drug and chemical store, 276 Broadway, corner of Chambers-st. three doors south of Stuart's marble building, where the depot has been established for the last year. F. H. McELROY & CO. 234 BROADWAY,

THREE DOORS ABOVE THE AMERICAN HOTEL and directly opposite the Park Fountain, are prepared to offer for the inspection of their numerous patrons and the public, as choice and varied an assortment of new goods for Spring and Summer wear as can be found in the city—consisting of cloths, cassimeres, vestings, cashmerettes, tweeds, merinos, drab d'ete, &c. which they are enabled to make up to order at a great reduction from former prices.

They would particularly call the attention of the travelling public and others wanting a first-rate article of ready-made garments, equal in every respect to those made to order, which they are selling cheaper than anything heretofore offered to the public.

An assortment of ready-made dress and frock coats, latest styles, zephyr cloth, cashmerette, tweed, drab d'ete and merino, polka and sack coats; also pantaloons, and a great variety of fancy silk and satin vests; also shirts, under-vests, and drawers; half-hose, scarfs, cravats, stiffeners, and superior article of kid gloves, constantly on hand.

They would call attention to their superior styles of vests and pantaloons, as furnished at 234 Broadway. [my19 1m Strangers and others would do well to call and examine their stock, and learn prices, before purchasing elsewhere.

NEW CLOTHING WAREHOUSE,

148 WILLIAM-ST. directly opposite the North Dutch Church, and two doors above Fulton-st.

HEWITT & COULSON,

desire to inform citizens, strangers, and all who purchase clothing, that they have taken the above-named store, and are now offering for sale a stock of ready-made clothing for Spring and Summer wear, all recently manufactured from new goods in the best and most fashionable manner; consisting of the various qualities, forms and styles, which the pocket, comfort or fancy of the wearers may dictate. Feeling confident that gentlemen in want of good articles need only examine their goods in order to become satisfied of their superiority, as well as cheapness, they would respectfully invite purchasers to call and buy good clothing at low prices. On hand an assortment of piece goods, from which those who wish garments made to order may select.

C. A. Merrick will be happy to see his friends as above, and clothe them in the most approved manner.

A NEW AND RARE EXHIBITION OF

INDIAN CURIOSITIES,

396 BROADWAY, next door to Stoppani's Baths.—A traveler recently from South America, having passed several years in scientific research among the aboriginal Indians in the region of Guiana, from the mouth of the Orinoco River to the Amazon, an immense extent of country hitherto almost unexplored, (it being forty years since any traveler except the renowned Humboldt visited that country,) at a vast expense, suffering and personal risk, (himself and wife having been poisoned twice,) he has succeeded in collecting all the objects of curiosity used by those savages. This collection will give a complete idea of their savage life better than any written work. Such productions of men naked in the forest will be viewed almost with incredulity. It will be seen by the various objects exhibited that without the aid of iron they finish their implements equal to our fine polished furniture, by means of fire and friction with stone, some as that in the collection. Such rarities (the description of which will be given at the door) cannot fail to give great satisfaction.

This exhibition will be open on Monday, June 12, from 10 A.M. to 10 P.M.

Price of admission 25 cents—children under 12 years of age half price. je9 8tis*

NOVELTY, AMUSEMENT AND HEALTHY EXERCISE.—Scripture's Mechanical Riding School at Vauxhall Garden now open for the season.—This is an entirely new invention of Mr. S.'s, designed to give the first lessons in horsemanship to young Masters and Misses, and at the same time giving the best and most pleasant kind of exercise. To invalids this kind of exercise will be found invaluable, as they can have got a pleasant ride on horseback without fear or risk. Children attending school would find great benefit as well as pleasure in taking a ride on those Galloping Horses, after being confined to the close air of their school-rooms. The public are respectfully invited to call and witness this new kind of recreative exercise. Season or monthly tickets may be had on accommodating terms. je8 1w*

SPLENDID BIRDSEYE VIEW OF THE EMPIRE CITY JUST COMPLETED.

PUBLISHED BY WILLIAMS & STEVENS, 353 Broadway.—The only accurate and comprehensive View of New-York City and Environs.—This view is taken from the east side, over Williamsburgh, and presents the entire length and breadth of the great City of New-York, as high up as Twentieth-st. on the east, and stretching across diagonally from the point of sight to about Fortieth-st. on the west. The outline of the Jersey shore is shown, discerning Jersey City and Hoboken; the North River, Governor's and Staten Islands, the extensive Bay, and the Narrows; on the left, a large portion of Brooklyn, the Navy Yard, and Williamsburgh in the foreground. Against New-York reposes the forest of shipping, its great commercial stamp; while the River is studded with steamers and sailing vessels. The whole drawn with the most careful regard to accuracy of position and perspective, in the relative location and height of every prominent object, and combining at once an admirable view and an interesting picture. To the mind of a stranger it at once conveys a perfect idea of the exact location of New-York with reference to surrounding parts, its magnitude, and admirable adaptation to every species of commercial communication; and this renders it a most desirable acquisition to the counting-house of the merchant, and a very satisfactory description to send to a friend abroad.
