THE NEW BUICK SIX—$ 55

The Buick is now in its design, but old in the experiences of its makers. Throughout it is founded upon the principles of sound construction that for years has passed unalterable in worth. It combines the valuable qualities of other cars of this type—while affording in its valve-in-the-head motor, a feature that distinguishes it from other Sixes whatsoever. This motor gives a compactness of design, a surplus of power and an economy of operation. Ideal garage.

A SAFE CHOICE

When in doubt a box of candy is always a safe choice, especially here where nothing but the best and purest in bon bons and chocolates can be found. We will have many special candies in bulk for the holidays. Perhaps you will want some pure leg cream too. C. L. Hudson.

In Days of Old

People use to make pork sausage at home. Everything they put into the mixture was wholesome and pure, it was nicely seasoned and it had a rich nutty delicious taste. Well that is the kind of pork sausage we make today. You will like our kind. E. H. McCue, Main and Union Streets.

Magnetism of the Horse.

"There is a side to the value of the pony which I believe is not fully understood," writes George H. Dery in Suburban Life. "There is about the horse a magnetism, a strong physical presence, that is imparted to anything intimately in contact with him, as in riding. As is well known, the horse is immune to many diseases to which mankind is susceptible. I believe that the horse, being immune to such diseases as diphtheria, intestinal disorders such as typhoid, cholera and dysentery, as well as scarlet fever, smallpox and measles, and being full to the bubbling over point of vital force, animal spirit or magnetism, imparts more or less of this to his rider or companion and more particularly to little ones who are not in robust health. Repeatedly delicate children have been known to obtain rugged health and to develop rapidly when given a pony."

Chinese Inns Ideal in Theory.

At the better class Chinese inns the proprietor receives his guests at the outer gate, ushers them into the courtyard and shows them to their apartments. Then he retires and leaves them to their own devices. The traveler is attended by his own servants: his cook buys and prepares his food, of the same quality and cookery as he would enjoy at his own home table; the boy unpacks his master's bed, the iron frame, mattresses and all, even to the mosquito netting. The master's own linen is spread, having been washed by his own servants. Folding chairs, table—in fact, everything which one may wish—is arranged and all without a word. At a tenth the cost of European inns one lives like a lord and sleeps like a child and is a thousand miles from the tipping zone.—Boston Herald.

CALLED IT TOLEDO.

Story of How an Ohio City Came to Gets Its Name.

About 100 years ago a little settlement existed at the mouth of the Maumee river. Its name, Port Lawrence, was given in honor of the great naval commander. The little town was not prosperous, and five years later Major Stickney, an enthusiastic but eccentric man, founded another settlement right next to Port Lawrence and called his village Vistula. Both settlements were stimulated somewhat by the competition, but neither prospered sufficiently, and one year later it was proposed to unite the towns.

Everything was easily arranged except the name, and here trouble arose. Major Stickney insisted that the new community accept the name of his port, Vistula, but the citizens were not prepared to have a name thrust upon them by one whose peculiarities led him to name his two children "No. 1" and "No. 2." This fact in the major's family life was enough to cause any suggestion from him to be received skeptically.

The discussions were many and heated when Willard Daniels, a merchant of Vistula, suggested that they adopt the name of Toledo, the ancient capital of Spain. He explained that the word originally was "Toledoth," from the Hebrew, meaning "Mother of People," and Mr. Daniels said they ought to be able to come together under such a title of peace. Another reason was the remarkable nearness in latitudes of both places, in Spain and in Ohio, the actual difference being only a little more than one degree. Further arguments were that it was pleasant in sound, easy to pronounce and that no city on the western continent as yet bore the name.

This reasoning prevailed, and the united towns assumed the name Toledo. That they remained true to it is shown in the fact that their first permanent newspaper was called the Toledo Blade, in recognition of the fact that Toledo, Spain, was famed all over the world for the quality of the sword blades which it produced.—Ladies' Home Journal.

To Move Pictures.

People who strand their family portraits against the walls while packing and unpacking their household goods cause a great deal of broken glass, scratches and dents. The first thing to be done when moving into your new house should be to hang the pictures any place in order to get them out of the way without waiting to choose a scheme of arrangement. This will prevent a great deal of breakage and other demurge.—New York Telegram.

Checkers.

Checkers is said by some to be a very old game, while others declare it to be of comparatively modern origin. Whence it came is absolutely unknown. The game is also called draughts and there are many varieties of it—Chinese, English, Polish, Spanish, Italian and Turkish. It is also found among the native tribes of the interior of New Zealand.

Antarctic Firecracker.

Great activity should now develop for the most antarctic of all industries. A French law passed under Louis IX. allowed none but members of a single guild to set up glass blowing establishments or even to work therein. For many centuries this work by only a few blowers could venture to work in without any danger of being made. The art of glassmaking spread slowly through France, and it is still from those engaged in it several generations "gentlemen glass blowers."

Testing His Faith.

Uncle—Well, Bobby, what did you learn at school today? Bobby—I learned that the world is round and turns on hinges, like that globe in the library. Uncle—Well, what do you think of that? Bobby—I think, uncle, they are asking me to believe a good deal for a small boy.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

SHAW, THE ECCENTRIC.

His Personality Compels Him to Wear Cocoa Colored Clothes.

"I love order in all things," said George Bernard Shaw at a public meeting some time ago. "For this reason I am not content with ordering my life; I also order my personality. I have cocoa colored hair, so I wear cocoa colored clothes and drink cocoa." Shaw today has reached the position of becoming a public institution. For more than twenty years he has succeeded in fulfilling his boast that every day some leading paper would have something to say about him.

George Bernard Shaw is the jester at the court of King Demos. When years ago he was appointed dramatic critic to a well known journal he refused to obey the ironclad regulation that occupants of the stalls must wear evening dress. The first night he was stopped at the door of a theater by an attendant. "What do you object to?" inquited Shaw. "My cocoa colored jacket?" The attendant assented. "Very well then," said the critic, "I will remove it." And the next moment he was striding up the aisle in shirt sleeves.

"That won't do, sir!" shouted the attendant, running after him.

"Won't do?" exclaimed Shaw with a fine assumption of indignation. "Do you think I'm going to take off my more?" The nonplussed attendant handed him his jacket and Shaw took his seat in the stalls triumphantly.

During the first nine years this brilliant man was in London his earnings from literature brought him the princely sum of £6. Now he has an income of several thousands a year. Of that period which he spent in want he says with his characteristic candor: "My mother worked for my living instead of preaching that it was my duty to work for her; therefore, take off your hat to her and blush. I did not throw myself into the struggle for life; I threw my mother into it. I was not a staff to my father's old age; I hung on to his coat tails."—London Life.

Identifying Himself.

It is said that at certain seasons in Scotland when the fishing is not very brisk the fishermen act as ceddies and are easily recognized by their costume, a woollen jersey and trousers fastened up to the armpits. One of these was asked his name by the gentleman for whom he was carrying and the reply was: "Well, hereabouts they mainly ca' me 'Brecks,' but ma 'maiden' name is 'Brook.'"

An Apt Retort.

"Fools sometimes ask questions that wise men cannot answer," remarked the professor in the course of his lecture.

"Then that explains why so many of us get plucked in our examinations," said the flippant student.—Home Notes.

HOT BATHS TWO CENTS

We would recommend that you install a Pittsbury automatic gas water heater if you wish to start the new year happily. "Expensive!" I should say not. Only one hundred dollars. Why, an average day's supply of scalding hot water for the entire house costs less than ten cents in gas. Think of that! One-tenth of a cent per gallon; a hot bath for two cents. This is guaranteed. For Guess we can afford that. Yes? Especially when it improves our home comforts so greatly. Consult Bennington Gas Light Co.

MEMORY WILL LINGER

The best way to delight a friend is by giving them something useful, something that will stand up and be of practical service to them for years to come. For such articles you can visit no better place than Walbridge's furniture store. Think of the value of a nice piece of furniture, or perhaps a stove. The memory that will forever exist in the minds of the person to whom you give such a present will more than repay you for a little additional expense. Walbridge.

AN ENDLESS CHAIN

Electricity, after your whole house has been wired and you can go from one room to another by just pressing a button and finding the house a glow of light, is an endless and inexpensive chain of comfort and enjoyment for the whole family. In the house it turns darkness into perfect daylight and is one of the valuable assets a home can have. Better let us figure now on the cost of wiring your home. It will be small. Twin State Gas & Electric Co.

You can see Santa Claus and hundreds of practical gifts, so displayed as to make choosing easy, each article bearing its sale price. Ladies' hand bags, popular priced jewelry belts, manicure sets, toilet sets, ivory novelties, optons, handkerchiefs, fancy linens, towels and silk petticoats Toyland, china, cut glass and brass ware are on second floor in the biggest and best display in our history.
