MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Read How to Care for Their Health.

New Orleans, La.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough, for I know my daughter never would have been so well if she had not taken it. For more than a year she had suffered agonies from irregularity, backache, dizziness, and no appetite, but is now well. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters and you can publish this letter."—Mrs. A. ESTRADA, 129 N. Galvez Street, New Orleans, La.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"My daughter was feeling tired and all run down with no apparent cause. She had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before and knew its value so she again purchased it and she was able to keep to work, her eyes became bright and natural, and her system was built up completely. We generally keep the Vegetable Compound in the house for it is to be relied on."—Mrs. E. J. PURDY, 5131 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Scrap Book

Cause of the Assault.

"And how long were you in your last place?" asked Mrs. Crozley, as the most promising and at the same time the plainest of the applicants for the vacant situation appeared before her.

"Well, mum," replied the girl, "if I tell the truth I was no sooner in than I was out again."

LYING IN A HEAP.

"How extraordinary! Can you account for it?"

"No, mum, unless it is that I'm good looking—not that I says I am, but the lady says to me, 'Your master has a liking for pretty faces and is a good judge of beauty.'"

"I should not think that was the reason. Come now, tell me. Did nothing else transpire?"

"Not another thing. I just looked at her and said that from what I could see of things her husband had made at least one mistake. When I came to my senses I was lying in a heap at the foot of the steps."—Chicago News.

Thoughtless Words.

Just what is happening every day:
A gathering cloud on a sunny way,
All the fault of a careless word,
Lightly spoken and dumbly heard;
Feathered shaft with a fatal art,
Winging its path to a tender heart.

Little it matters which was wrong
If the discord drop in the tuneful song.
Little it matters which was right
If the shadow blot the household light.
When both are hasty, and each is proud,
Both are to blame for the passing cloud.

Then let it pass. 'Tis the wiser way
To kiss and be friends, nor mar the day
With the evil blight of a bootless strife,
To stain the spirit and dim the life.
Let the lips that breathed and the ears that heard
Take heed henceforth of the thoughtless word.

His Funniest Story.

Of all the funny stories I recall at the present moment I think I can work up the best laugh over the tale of the two Irishmen who were arguing about the relative merits of New York and Chicago. You know there is a type of person who when he knows nothing about a thing and finds you don't know, either, will start in and explain it to you. These two were both of that kind. Said one:

"Why, in New York we have grass growing right on the roof, just the same as down on the ground. You can have your front yard on top of your house."

"That's nothin'," declared the other. "In Chicago we play golf on the roofs."

"Golf? You mean that game where you knock a ball back and forth across a net?"

"Yes, that's it."

"You dommed idjut, that's not golf! You're talking about croquet."

"Well, I meant to say croquet."

"Yes," said the other one. "I knew you couldn't mean golf. How could they get the horses up on the roof for a golf game?"—Senator J. Ham Lewis in Everybody's Magazine.

Counter Case.

Upon being called in the police court, charged with an assault upon a clerk at a soda water fountain, the defendant arose and said, "Your honor, I am guilty, but I plead a counter case."

Whereupon the aforesaid clerk hastily arose and replied: "Your honor, the counter didn't have anything to do with it. I walked around the counter before I struck him."—Case and Comment.

Got Wrong Idea.

"Willie," called mother, "come here right away. How many times do you want me to call you?"

"Why, ma," returned Willie, "how did you get the idea that I wanted you to call me at all?"
