IT IS TO LAUGH.

Paragraphs to Be Read by Those Who Appreciate Humor.

Sarah—This hat makes me look like a fright.

Susan—Oh. I don't think it changes your looks any!

Bacon—Did the comedian's song bring down the house?

Egbert—Well, no, but it brought down a lot of other things.

Bacon—You say your son at college writes a bold hand?

Egbert—I should say so. He's just written for $150 more.

Bill—Do you know old Moneybags reminds me of that butt of a cigar?

Jill—Why so?

Bill—Because they're both puffed up.

Yeast—They say that fellow is as slow as molasses in winter time.

Crimsonbeak—Yes; as slow as molasses in winter time in Philadelphia.

Bacon—Was your wife out shopping today?

Egbert—Well, she was shopping, but she wasn't out. She didn't spend anything.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—John, I'd like to give you a ring on your birthday with an appropriate stone in.

Mr. Crimsonbeak—Well, they haven't any with a grindstone in, have they?

Sue Brette—Things in a theater are apt to go by contraries.

Foote Lights—Why?

"Didn't you ever see the drop curtain go up and the freight elevator go down?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Literary Log Rolling.

A writer in a New York paper suggests "as the next step in development of literary advertising the engaging of gentlemanly persons of social tastes to talk, for hire, about any given book among all the reading people he meets." This would not be a new departure, however, for it has long been the practice in England, where it is called "log rolling." A very small author can get a dinner occasionally out of the process and perhaps gravitate toward a second edition of a very poor book by having the town crier applaud it publicly. "Have you read my book?" asked an author of his friend, the Georgia colonel. "Yes," was the reply, "but I'm better now!" — Atlanta Constitution.

Softly Suggested.

"Don't you enjoy hearing the old songs?" asked the young man with a sentimental look in his eye.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "Do you know any?"

"Yes. What is your favorite?"

"Oh, it depends on the mood I chance to be in. You don't know 'Bid Me Goodby and Go,' do you?"—Washington Star.

Mamma's Memory.

Ma—No, Edith, I'm sure I didn't promise you a piece of cake.

Little Edith—Oh, ma, you did so!

Ma—Well, if I did it has slipped my memory.

Little Edith—Huh! I guess you haven't any memory; it's a reg'lar forgettery.—Philadelphia Press.

Strategy.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed little Arthur all out of breath, "I've just been playing with the Goodwin children, and they have the measles at their home! Now, can't I eat all the cake I want to? 'Cause, you know, I'm going to be sick, anyway."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Doing Nothing by Halves.

"Mary Ann, I told you if you cracked another china teapot you would have to pay for it."

"Yes, mum, but I didn't crack this un; I broke it."—Indianapolis Journal.

On a Technicality.

Meanwhile the crowd began
Impatiently to say,
"What is the bloomin reason why
The fight ain't under way?"

Then spoke the referee,
"Allow me, gents, to state
The fight's not under way because
One feller's overweight."
—Chicago Tribune.
