NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

LIFE .... For The Tribune.

BY REV. J. G. FORMAN.

Life is like the gushing stream,
Flowing from the wooded mountains,
Sparkling in the noon-tide beams,
Bubbling up from crystal fountains.
Life is onward in its flow,
Like the calm, majestic river,
Gathering strength while here below,
From its motions ceasing never.
As the stream flows to the river,
As the river to the sea,
Life is flowing on forever,
Reaching to Eternity.
Life is full of care and trial,
While it dwells upon the earth,
And a holy self-denial
Fits it for a heavenly birth.
Heavenward tend its solemn marshes,
Rising ever, drawing nigh,
To the bright, o'erhanging arches,
Opening to the upper sky.

West Bridgewater, Mass.

Minnesota Territory.

Correspondence of the Missouri Republican.

This is a very desirable and healthy territory situated between the 43d degree north latitude, and the British possessions of the North, is settled by mostly Yankees of stirring industry. Everybody is hearty, hale and lively, no sickness—no disease—and no idlers—all seem busy and happy. They have everything good to eat and well cooked, and as far as the 46th degree north, I find every 20 miles a comfortable cabin, built within the last six months, tenanted with smiling countenances who seem contented. I find some old settlers who have intermarried with the Indians, and have families growing up around them, and know how to cook and dress like Americans. I ate of their cooking, and found it good and healthy. There are many Indians all along the streams, and we see them every day in crowds as we ride along—they are friendly and well disposed. There are some of the most beautiful lakes and rivers here I ever saw, with green bottoms, which afford some of the finest fish—trout in abundance.

There is a great demand for all kinds of mechanics, who obtain the highest wages. There is a great demand for good cows, cattle, horses and mules, which command a round price. No one can fail to do well here that has the energy of or energy of character in him, but you cannot drink liquor here; it do n't agree with the country or you—you do n't need or want it.

FORT SNELLING, (Minesota Ter.) May 22, 1849.

The steamboat Dr. Franklin arrived at this post last evening, bringing as passengers Major Walker and clerk, Paymaster U.S. Army; Capt. Pope, Top. Engineer; Drs. McLaren and Sykes and ladies, Mr. Silly and several others, who left St. Louis on the 15th inst. all in good health.

This is a beautiful and romantic place, situated upon a high elevation of ground, to the forks of the Mississippi and St. Peters rivers, both of which can be viewed for several miles, and their sweet green islands, with numerous horses, mules and spotted cattle grazing thereon; the neat little villa of St. Peters at the base; while on the opposite side several neat cottages rear their heads in view, and with numerous groups of children bounding and skipping about rejoicing in life. Here everybody is well—the balmy air and healthy location is proof against all sickness and disease.

The fort is garrisoned by companies C, E. and K, of the 6th Infantry, commanded by Maj. Wood, Capts. Monroe and Wetmore—all gentlemen of the first water, and welcome the stranger with a happy smile and hearty shake of the hand, and enliven the interim with concord of sweet sounds played by an excellent band.

Everything around and about this garrison is neat, clean and tasty. The soldiers under perfect discipline, look fine, dress and appearance is "a militaire." Take my word for it, this is one "grand magnifique" place, worthy of praise, notice and attention. EZEL.

THE ROMAN VILLA AT HARTLIP IN ENGLAND.—Further searches made by Mr. Bland have disclosed more apartments, together with some subterranean chambers, which, on one side, are reached by a flight of eight steps, each formed of three layers of flat tiles, and on the other by steps cut out of the natural chalk; these rooms have been stuccoed and colored red and white. Among the objects lately discovered during the excavations are a balance in brouze, neatly made, upon the principle of those now in use for weighing letters, with hinges to permit it being carried in a small and convenient compass; a glass vase ornamented with raised designs, representing chariot races and gladiatorial fights, over which appear the names of the chief charioteers and combatants; and a large bowl of red glazed ware, elaborately ornamented with rich foliage patterns, mythological subjects, and a figure of Victory with a wreath and palm branch, crowning a small figure in a costume resembling that of the Byzantine Imperial garb of the 6th and 7th centuries. The character of this dress is in many respects so marked that it would seem to decide that the villa was occupied even after the Romans had left Britain. Coins of Honorius are among those discovered, and there is a fibula in speculum metal of a decided Saxon character. The construction of the hypocausts, and of the general arrangement of the rooms, resembles those of the Roman villas discovered in London during the last 10 or 20 years, all of which, we believe, except that at the Coal-exchange, were destroyed as soon as found. Mr. Bland has most liberally preserved those found upon his estate, and rendered them available to science.

HYDROCHLORIC GAS.—For a considerable period, this noxious vapor was one of the greatest nuisances to the manufacturer and to the neighborhood, blighting vegetation for a great distance around the work.—Enormous sums were spent in erecting gigantic chimney stacks, such as those of the Messrs. Tennant, near Glasgow, where one of the largest rears its head fully one hundred feet higher than the top of St. Paul's Cathedral. Its occupation has gone, with the advance of chemical knowledge; and it now remains a huge monument to the ignorance of the past. In other cases, the muriatic acid was let off into the common sewer, and glad were the manufacturers to get rid of their acrid and troublesome product in this quiet way. But now that muriatic acid has entered into the proper chemical relation with the arts, it is as carefully preserved and retained as it was formerly dismissed.—Various plans exist by means of which it is collected and reduced from the gaseous to the liquid form. The most common of these is, to conduct the vapors which rise from the decomposing salt into flues, which terminate at the bottom of a tower or chimney, filled with flints or coke. A number of minute jets of water play on the coke at the top of the chimney, and the fluid gradually filters down, meeting in its course the ascending noxious vapors. These become immediately condensed, and the liquid percolating to the bottom, there enters a tunnel, and is conducted into a receptacle, now in the form of liquid hydrochloric or muriatic acid. CHESTER AND HOLYHEAD RAILWAY.—The arrangements for floating the stupendous tube bridges, at the Britannia Rock, over the Menai Straits, by which another hour will be saved in the transit of the mails and passengers between London and Dublin, are just completed under the superintendence of Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Edward Clarke, the engineers. The pontoons, with the excavations for their reception, are finished, and twelve captains of large dimensions are erected along the coast, on either side of the straits, for the safe conduct of the floating tubes, which will be moved along guide lines, strong hempen cables being substituted for chains, on account of the length of the lines. The weight of each tube is 1,800 tons, and the pontoons will have to bear a load of 200 tons.—The ponderous machinery for elevating the tubes to their resting places on the piers, upward of 30 feet high, is being fixed in the towers. The ends of the horizontal tubes, which are of wrought iron, will have to rest on the masonary piers, which are 400 feet apart. Rather more than 800 men are employed in these preparations, and the great operation of floating will take place in the course of next month. [London Globe.

SUDDEN DEATHS.—Two Irishmen, says the Boston Post, went in to bathe in the Canal above Charlestown, on Saturday, and while in the water they were both attacked with a faintish feeling. They came out of the water, when one of them died instantly on the brink. The other got upon a wagon and requested to be carried to his home, but before reaching it he died. One of them was named Patrick O'Donahoe; the name of the other we did not learn.... The Salem Gazette says that an Irish laborer named Collins died suddenly in that city on Friday last, from drinking freely of cold water while he was very much heated.... A foreigner named Lanning, as we learn from the Trenton State Gazette, was taken suddenly ill while at work on a farm in Lawrenceville, N. J. on Friday last and died in a few minutes. A German died the same day at Yardleyville, N. J. under similar circumstances.

ARTIFICIAL MAHOGANY.—The following method of giving any species of wood of a close grain, the appearance of mahogany in texture, density, and polish, is said to be practiced in France, with such success that the best judges are incapable of distinguishing between the imitation and mahogany. The surface is first planed smooth, and the wood is then rubbed with a solution of nitrous acid. One ounce of dragon's blood is dissolved in nearly a pint of spirits of wine; this and one-third of an ounce of carbonate of soda are then to be mixed together, and filtered, and the liquid in this thin state is to be laid on with a soft brush—This process is to be repeated, and in a short interval afterward the wood possesses the external appearance of mahogany. When the polish diminishes in brilliancy, it may be restored by the use of a little cold drawn linseed oil.

☞ The storm, which could be seen hovering around the north-western horizon on Saturday afternoon, was very violent at New Brunswick. The wind and rain were very heavy. At Princeton considerable rain fell, but not a drop fell here, nor was there wind enough to waft a zephyr. The lightning at the former place prostrated a number of telegraph poles. At the office here, the heat of the electricity was so intense as to weld together the armature and the poles of the receiving magnet. The helixes of the principal magnet were also much damaged. [Trenton State Gaz. 20th.

FROM VENEZUELA.—The Boston papers of Monday contain full details of the news from Venezuela, reported this morning by Telegraph. It was received per brig Euchal, the Captain of which reports that business at Porto Cabello was very dull when he left, on the 8th inst. Political affairs were as unsettled as heretofore. Monagas was still at the head of the Government. He was residing at Valencia, a small place about forty miles from Cabello. The feeling against Monagas was very strong among all classes of the community, and it was thought by many well informed persons that the Paez party would be in power in sixty days. Capt. H. states that he conversed freely with individuals of all classes, and thinks the feeling of opposition to Monagas very general, in consequence of the puny arbitrary and onerous measures of his administration. He also states that a feeling of approbation toward Gen. Paez, seems to be increasing among the middling and lower classes, as well as among the business portion of the community. All the obnoxious laws lately passed by Congress has gone into operation. Several newspapers, containing articles of a revolutionary nature, had made its appearance, but to what action the existing Government would take as to their contents was not known. Coffee and hides were scarce and high.

MINNESOTA.—A late St. Paul's Chronicle says Gov. Ramsey is doing everything in his power to facilitate the perfect organization of the Territory.

The Governor has proclamation divided the Territory into three Judicial Districts, the District Courts of which are to be held at Stillwater, the Falls of St. Anthony and at Mendota.

St. Paul is a thriving place of business, carrying on a trade equal to any town of its size and population in the Union. The merchants are laying in large stocks of goods, and the market is kept well supplied.

GREAT FRESHET.—A tremendous fall of rain took place in the northern townships of this county on Friday night last. For two hours it poured down in almost a solid mass, and without intermission. The damage caused by it is considerable. Walnut Creek was 14 inches higher than it has been known to be by the oldest inhabitant. Many bridges on that and other small streams were washed away, many fences destroyed, and the grain in the low grounds was much injured. Between Baltimore and Basil the canal bank was much injured, and we also learn that considerable damage was done to the mills at the former place—Our reports are altogether verbal and we cannot enter into particulars. The canal is since repaired.

[Lancaster (Ohio) Gazette, 22d.

STEAMBOAT CATASTROPHE.—Several Persons Drowned, &c.—We have just received a private Telegraphic Dispatch from Louisville, stating that the steamer Windfield Scott, from New-Orleans, reports having passed the Tallaypoosa at Eggs Point, crowded over and in a dangerous situation. The starboard guard was broken, precipitating 1,500 bales of Cotton, and 100 hids of Tobacco into the river. Several persons drowned.

[Cincinnati Com. 23d.

C. M. CLAY.—The Louisville Courier of Wednesday says: All accounts agree in exonerating Mr. Clay from any blamein the matter, and represent him as having been grossly insulted and imposed upon. He is very weak, we learn, in consequence of his exertions, but will probably recover from it in a few weeks. It is said that Mr. Turner averred, a short time before his death, that he did not stab Mr. Clay, and did not know who did.

FIRE.—We understand that the Watertown House, situated about half a mile beyond the Spring Hotel in Watertown, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning, together with the outbuildings, and a large dwelling-house, occupied by a physician whose name we could not learn. [Boston Atlas, 25th.

☞ During the thunder shower on Saturday morning last, the dwelling house of John Gardner, Esq. of Dedham, was struck by lightning. The electrid fluid entered through the roof and scattered the furniture in all directions. In one of its freaks, it took all the gilding off the frame of a splendid mirror, without breaking it. Singular as it may seem, although nine persons were in the house at the time, no one was injured. Nearly every room in the house was more or less shattered. [Boston Atlas.

☞ The Artesian Well at Charleston has reached the depth of 256 feet. A thermometer lowered to the bottom indicated the temperature at that point to be 84, while at the surface it was 74. A few days since, at the depth of 756 feet, the thermometer marked 82½.

☞ There is a rush of visitors to the White Mountains, occasioned by the Cholera and the intense heat. Last week there were 175 persons at Pabyah's.

It was agreed between him and the petitioner at the time of the separation, that she should have the youngest child, Arthur and he Richard. The Directors of the Northern Railroad Company from Ogdensburg to Rouse's Point, have issued a report. Since the publication of the last report sixty-two miles have been accomplished, from Ogdensburg to Malone. Also, on the easterly half of the road, from Malone to Rouse's Point, fifty-five miles. The tunnel at the Chateaugay crossing, constructed to receive and conduct the river under the embankment, there required, was completed in December last. In estimating for this work there was some uncertainty—and on the original estimate of $54,000, $6,000 was saved. 4,000 tons of rails have been delivered on the line. 1,000 more, part of a contract made with an English house, have arrived at New-York, and are in course of trans-shipment. About 600 tons of chairs have been delivered to the Company, and provision has been made for the remaining wants of the road for spikes, &c. The expenditures for lands amount to $48,058, and it is estimated that $5,000 more will be required. The report says that no other Company ever acquired real estate of such extent and value at so small a cost. The first complete estimate of the Road was rather under $3,000,000. The expenditures to date (June 4,) amounts to $1,325,977. The Directors look for the means necessary to a proper continuance of the work, to an issue of bonds not exceeding $1,000,000. The original capital subscribed, on which the first assessment has been paid, represented 40,000 shares or $2,000,000—4,024 shares have reverted to the Company, 2,166 proved bad subscriptions, amounting to 6,220 shares, which reduces the available capital to 33,780 shares or $1,689,000; on this there has been paid till but $420,409. Twelve miles of the road have been completed, from Champlain to Centreville; fifteen more will be ready for business by September—and the entire Road will probably be ready by next Summer, should no serious disaster happen.

The following table shows the number of Banks and amount of Bank capital in each of the several States, together with their present population, (according to the estimates contained in the Patent Office Report, 1848-9,) the estimated increase from 1840 to 1848, and the per centage of increase in each State:

These are no doubt sufficiently correct for general calculations, and furnish curious results. It will be seen that the old States of Massachusetts, Georgia, Maine and Rhode Island have increased in a somewhat larger ratio than those of Kentucky and Tennessee. The Banks of Illinois, Mississippi, Arkansas and Florida have, some years since gone into liquidation, and there is no provision at present for any similar institutions. No Bank can be established in Illinois without the assent of the people at large; the circulation of the State is mainly from the banks of Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio.

GENERAL NOTICES.

☞ A Card.—Private practitioners of medicine, Ward Physicians, and the friends of the sick, are especially requested to transfer those persons intended for the Hospitals, immediately, accompanied by a brief history of the case, with the treatment of the disease. Hitherto, most of the patients received have been professionally attended for hours at their homes, and have not been transferred to the public care, till the disease, in the opinion of unskilful persons, is clear, it must appear evident to every considerate member of the community, that far better be allowed to remain at their residences for a few hours longer, where, if there is the least chance for recovery, it would not be destroyed by the exposure and exhaustion attendant on useless removal.

☞ THE FACULTY are informed that the Lever Truss Company have completed their Truss, and are now ready to furnish parties requiring their assistance with their novel Truss, upon mutually advantageous terms.—This article has received the sanction of a Committee appointed by the highest medical tribunal of this city, and by the recommendation of a Board of Surgeons received the premium at the late Fair of the American Institute. Its peculiarities are its upward support and its stationary and lever principle; passing from the umbilicus down the anterior superior portion of the pelvic region over the pubis and perineum to the coccyx, and up the spine; with belts embracing the pelvic region, adapting itself to all kinds of reducible hernia, or relaxation of the viscera, giving permanent stationary support, with or without pressure, thus forming an instrument fulfilling all the surgical indications in the treatment of every form of malady, susceptible of mechanical aid.
