GENERAL NOTICES.

Prevention of Cholera.—We, the undersigned, having visited every locality thus far reported, where Cholera prevailed in its most epidemic form, and having, among other sanitary measures suggested by the Sanitary Committee and Medical Council, directed that Grant's Disinfectant be used in these localities, which has been done with the most satisfactory results, the Citizens disappearing in such places where the same was distributed—we would, therefore, suggest to the citizens of New-York the propriety of using this valuable compound in and about their premises, in conjunction with the sanitary measures of the City authorities.

SETH GEER, Resident Physician.
A. W. WHITE, City Inspector.

New-York, June 27, 1849.

We are impelled to call emphatic attention to the above direction of our City's Medical Authorities, whose public duties constrain them to an intimate and constant familiarity with the ravages of the prevailing disease. We understand that Mr. Grant's laboratory is at No. 356 Broadway, (front basement of Gothic Hall,) where orders for the Disinfectant will be promptly filled at very moderate rates. 1je29 1w*] [Ed. ANTHONY J. BLEECKER, Auctioneer.

COUNTRY SEAT ON STATEN ISLAND.—ANTHONY J. BLEECKER will sell at auction on TUESDAY, July 10, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, a beautiful country seat. The house comparatively recently built on the premises, it is believed unite the conditions of a healthy residence, with the more ordinary degree, having numerous airy and agreeable bedrooms, suit of drawing rooms, parlor, back parlor, basements, kitchen, wash-house, cellar, pantries, &c. all well finished and most of the modern improvements, such as grates, bells, marble mantels, &c. The dimensions of the building are 42 feet from by 34 feet deep; 30 feet in height to the eaves, more or less. The grounds are in fact, stocked with the most varieties of fruit and ornamental trees, vines, climbers, running and standard roses, chiefly in full bearing and blossom; large and beautiful evergreens are carefully planted through the premises. There is a full complacement of outbuildings, cistern, well and pump. The situation, on the northern side of the island, and on the Clover road, about one mile from Port Richmond, and three-quarters of a mile from Factoryville. For authority and facility of access, it is pronounced, in fact, the whole having been completed for personal enjoyment alone, neither pains nor expense have been spared in contributing everything to render it agreeable as a Summer or Winter residence. For further particulars apply to ANTHONY J. BLEECKER, 7 Broad-st. A portion of the purchase money may remain on bond and mortgage. jy3 3, 5, 7, 9 & 10. [608]

"Without attempting a minute exposition of the work with European publications in the same subject, it may be said frankly that this is decidedly, and without qualification, equal to any of them. The plates in Author's work are from the pencil of Dr. Bostwick, a gentleman of professional and literary ability, and of a delicate and fastidious taste, and nothing can present this side work from being spread over the land, as the fact can neither be denied nor concealed, that he has produced a thorough, well-digested, systematic treatise, which far surpasses anything of the kind on this branch of practice heretofore attempted in this country."

PRESERVED MEATS FOR CALIFORNIA,

Put up by

THOMAS KENNETT & CO. OFFICE 29 OLD-SLIP.

THE PROPRIETORS of the establishment beg leave to caution the public against impositions, such as were practiced upon emigrants to California during the last season, by those who "painted" articles which would not stand. The superiority of the late emigration to California has been given abundant proof of the wholesale fraud practiced by (so called) provision dealers in this city, in the article of Preserved Meats; while, at the same time, the universal testimony of those who have used our articles, has firmly established our Provisions as the only ones that can invariably be relied on. jy3 3tis

CALIFORNIA.—The letters from California, published in our city papers of the 20th, state that the machines taken from the United States for washing gold proved entirely useless, and that the pan was the only thing that would answer. We believe and have advertised that the bowl or pan motion is an old and thoroughly proved plan, and cannot be improved. Our Washer is a number of bowls or pans (not the washing pans as arranged as to be moved backwards and forwards by a single wheel and pinion) and the advantages it has over the common hand pan is—in place of holding it in the hand and slapping the water over the person, a man may sit down and produce the same motion by turning a crank, and wash more in a day than twenty men can with a common hand-pan, and not even wet a hand; and the labor will not be one-fifth part so hard as shaking the hand-pan. They require less water than any other machine. A little water may be used over and over again, which will save the labor of carrying the earth a great distance to the water. These machines are so constructed that they may be taken apart and packed in a trunk with clothes or other goods, and pass as baggage. The weight of them is only 30 pounds. We invite all who are going to California to call at 122½ Fulton-st. and examine them.

FAIRBANKS'S SCALES

CAUTION—The well-earned reputation of these scales has induced the venders of imperfect and worthless balances to offer them as "Fairbanks's Scales;" and purchasers have thereby in many cases, been subjected to fraud and imposition. Parliament—The Affairs of Italy.

In the House of Commons on the 29, Mr. Roebuck put a question to the noble lord, the Foreign Secretary, the object of which was to ascertain whether any approbation had been expressed by her Majesty's Government of the proposed bombardment of Rome by the French.

The question was received with cheers.

Lord Palmerston, after alluding to the delicacy of his position, in being called upon to form a judgment upon the policy of a foreign Government with which he had nothing to do, said her Majesty's Government had witnessed with deep regret the circumstances to which the honorable and learned gentleman adverted; more than that he could not say. England had been not a party to the expedition to Rome; on the contrary, she had deprecated any armed interference in the affairs of the Roman States, and as he had not been a party to the negotiations, he was unable to state what were the reasons which had influenced the French Government in its proceedings.

The Budget.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer then proceeded to make his financial statement. After remarking upon the depression of the cotton trade, owing to the unsettled state of affairs on the continent, he reminded the House that early in the session of 1848 he was compelled to propose an increase of taxation to cover the expenditure, and he then stated his expectation that in three years the income of the country would equal its expenditure. He then estimated the income at £[illegible], and the actual proceeds had only been less by £62,000. The expenditure was £51,267,116, thus exceeding the estimate; but there was included in it the sums not anticipated for by Irish distress and the naval excess, amounting together to £1,711,000. The expenditure exceeded the estimate by about £200,779, but if the naval excess and other extraordinary items were deducted, the current income would have exceeded the current expenditure by £120,000. He estimated the total income of the country for the year 1849-50 at £52,292,000, which he anticipated would be thus made up:—Customs, £20,450,000; excise, £18,710,000; stamps £6,740,000; taxes, £3,300,000; income tax, £5,275,000; Post Office, £900,000; crown lands, £160,000; miscellaneous, £222,000; total revenue, £55,657,000; surplus revenue, £2,000,000; a total receipt of £52,292,000. After which he estimated the expenditure as follows: Interest and management of funded and unfunded debts, £28,245,000; civil list, £2,161,000; grant for Irish distress, £500,000; navy, £721,724; army, £6,716,000; ordnance, £[illegible]; miscellaneous, £3,024,277; refunding property, £[illegible]; excess on the army estimates in 1848-9, £[illegible]; Kaffirs—making a total expenditure of £52,157,000. Deducting, therefore, the total expenditure of £52,157,000 from the receipts of £52,292,000, there would remain a surplus over expenditure of £134,3041; but, if the excesses for the army, navy and ordnance were taken away, the surplus income of the year would be £736,000. He congratulated the House upon the state of the affairs, and upon the expenditure of the country having been brought down within the limits which it had been originally anticipated. There had been a decided improvement in trade; the stock of bullion had increased, and he felt fully assured that, all things considered, his anticipations of income had not been over-sanguine. Referring to the reduction in the expenditure, he begged to remind the House that the navy had been reduced 5,000 men, the army 10,000, which he thought was as far as the Government was justified in going, considering the state of affairs in the world. The only increase which had been in the East was the artillery, and he thought that, considering recent experience in India, the House would not be inclined to object to it. The reduction in the estimates this year had been for the Navy £[illegible], miscellaneous £[illegible], &c, making a total of £[illegible]. This showed that the Government had not been immaterial to economy, and their desires would in the respect have been further carried out, but for the expenditure in the Army and Ordnance departments, which amounted to £[illegible]. It would be obvious to the House that with so small an amount of surplus this year he could not consent to meet the wishes of those gentlemen who proposed to decrease important duties. Among those he included the hop duties, and a revision of the stamp duties, which would income a loss of £[illegible]. He was not prepared to propose any change which could be made until such a surplus was obtained as would justify the proposition; and this was a subject he recommended to the attention of the House.
