The Hebrews of Traverse City will observe with great ceremony the Jewish new year which occurs Sept. 28 and 29. Traverse City has the only Hebrew synagogue and congregation in Northern Michigan, as also the only Jewish cemetery, and here is located the only rabbi in this part of the state. As many of our readers know, the Hebrews eat meats only of their own killing and preparation, and this can be done only by those authorized to do this work. The Hebrews all through this part of the state send to Traverse City for their meats, and this business is constantly increasing in magnitude.

The latest game to swindle the farmers is said to be played by a man who goes around the country claiming to represent a large provision house in Chicago or in some other place, such firm being anxious to learn of the farmers their opinion of the crops. This takes with the honest tiller of the soil, and he proceeds to answer the questions propounded. The sharper notes down the answer carefully, and when he is through politely asks the farmer to sign his name to the report to give more weight and appearance of correctness. This accomplished, the man leaves, and later a note turns up in the hands of an innocent purchaser. Sign no paper whatever for strangers, should be the motto of all farmers.

BLAINE, OF MAINE

THE LEADER OF THE REPUBLICANS.

The Reception Room of Blue and Gold—An Important Point in His Sebago Lake Speech for the Labor Organizations to Consider.

HOME AT BAR HARBOR.

To neither rivals like to admit it or not, as long as he lives, James G. Blaine will be the head of the Republican party. He is like Gladstone with the liberal party of England in that respect. Since the election of '84 he has been silent, finishing his book, resting and breathing in new nervous energy with the pine air of Maine.

But at the first gun which sounds the note of the fall political campaign in Maine the leader must emerge from his splendid and open the ball. He has always taken part in the state campaign of Maine, and he knew of no reason why he should not do so now. He said:

"I know no reason why I should sit silent now. I am a citizen of the United States, without office or responsibilities. There is nothing to fetter me in any way."

His simple, carefully prepared speech at Sebago lake, has beyond doubt found more readers than any other within a year. Mr. Blaine is always alive, very much alive. Prohibition he considers an issue to be settled by each state for itself.

One passage in the address commends itself to the judgment of all races and all parties. It is the part calling the attention of the various labor organizations to the colored artisans of the south. He says:

"They (the labor organizations) seem to have taken little or no heed of the existence of more than 1,500,000 able bodied laborers in the south with dark skins, but with expanding intellect, increasing intelligence and growing ambition. While those men were slaves, working in the corn and cotton fields, in the rich swamps and on the sugar plantations of the south, the skilled labor of the northern states felt no competition from them. But since they became freedmen there has been a great change in the variety and skill of the labor performed by colored men in the south. The great mass are, of course, still engaged in agricultural work, but thousands and tens of thousands, and in fact hundreds of thousands, have entered and are entering the mechanical and semi-mechanical field. They are making pig and bar iron in Tennessee and Alabama. In fact, they are generally entering all the avenues and channels of skilled labor.

BLAINE SPEAKING.

Of course they are underpaid. They receive far less than has been paid in years past to northern mechanics for similar work. They are able to take no part in making laws for their own protection, and they are consequently and inevitably unable to maintain a fair standard of wages, or to receive a fair proportion of their proper earnings. I do not dwell on this subject at length, though it could easily be presented in aggravating detail. I mention it only to place it before the labor organizations of the north, with this question addressed to them: Do you suppose that you can permanently maintain in the northern states one scale of prices, when just beyond an imaginary line on the south of us a far different scale of prices is paid for labor?

Mr. Blaine has two houses, both in Maine. His winter dwelling place is in Augusta, Me., his summer mansion, and his favorite one, is that in the picture, at Bar Harbor. Mr. Blaine is well off, and his houses are what might be expected of a rich man inclined to generous hospitality. The house is a very large one, but it is called a cottage in seashore fashion. It is on the crest of one of the highest points overlooking Frenchman's bay. It is a handsome seashore house which could be built for $30,000. It is perched upon a rock. The road to the cottage winds around the back of a hill from Bar Harbor village up through a stretch of pine scrubs over a new made gravel road to the very crest.

From this striking and artistic nook the visitor enters a large square room with furnishings rich and dark. The woodwork is of oak. A very large oval window looks out upon the water. A newspaper correspondent says of the view and of the life at the cottage:

ON THE VERANDA.

"Through this window the beauties of Frenchman's bay present a constantly shifting scene of color and light. The blue waters of the bay contrast sharply with the soft grassy lime tint of the distant shores. In the foreground is the abrupt, rocky, pine-covered Bar Island. A wide, covered veranda runs around the entire side of the house upon the side toward the bay. Here during the morning or afternoon will always be found a group of visitors. Cottage people drop in informally, and nearly every one of any prominence who comes to Mt. Desert makes a pilgrimage to the Blaine house. The life at the cottage partakes of the easy informality of the general life at Bar Harbor. The visitor who stays the full length is quite as apt to be met at the door by some member of the family as by a servant. Mr. Blaine moves about the house, showing in each great pride to his visitors, chatting about the topics of the day, but rarely discussing politics. He is most some old political associate who comes to talk or consult."

Mr. Blaine looks remarkably well and in good spirits this summer. He has made a large sum of money with his books. "Then that lies pile, the Bible says," was a remark made by a certain squatter a long time ago.

A Remarkable Cure which is Awakening Great Interest in and about Jackson.

JACKSON, May 28, 1886.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—For ten years I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Neuralgia. About twelve years ago my kidneys and liver became diseased, my whole system deranged, my stomach became weak, and I was attacked with the worst form of Dyspepsia, which lasted until quite recently. About the same time Dyspepsia took so firm a hold on me Neuralgia set in, sometimes attacking me in the head about the temples, then in the back of my neck and shoulders, then in my stomach. The suffering and extreme pain, which I have endured the past twelve years is more than I can describe. I have taken nearly every medicine I could learn or hear of, have enjoyed the most skilled physicians. Dr. Simons, one of the best and ablest doctors of our city, office 119 Main street, doctored me for a long time, and can testify as to the severity of my disease. I never succeeded in getting any permanent relief until I had used Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. I have gained ten pounds of flesh in seven weeks. The sallowness which so disfigured my complexion and caused me years of sorrow has been entirely removed, and my general health is better than it has been in thirteen years. The severity of the Neuralgic pains and almost a contraction of the muscles, or nerves, on the right side of my face so as to an extent as to partially close my right eye, which your Syrup has entirely cured. My face and eye are restored to their natural state. I most cheerfully recommend it to any afflicted in like manner, or to general debility. Very respectfully,

MRS. A. D. NOBLE,
Corner Mechanic and Mason streets.

Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is put up in large bottles, and is sold by druggists generally. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00. If your druggist does not have it write us and we will send it to any address on receipt of price, freight prepaid. Send for our medical pamphlet.

A Wonderful Occurrence.

JACKSON, Mich., Oct., 1884.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gentlemen—In November, 1884, I was cut in the wrist by a broken bottle, from which I suffered extreme pain. I called upon a doctor who pronounced it Sciatic Rheumatism. He gave me a morphine injection in my right shoulder, which resulted in paralyzing my right side. I was kept under the influence of morphine until last March. My right leg and arm had become badly withered and my joints were so stiff that there was but little action in them. About that time I discontinued the use of morphine. Some six weeks ago I first heard of your Rheumatic Syrup and was advised to try it. And here let me impress this fact upon your mind: that my right arm and leg were shrunken, paralyzed and withered so much that I could hardly walk or swing along, and that but little, and attended with great effort and pain. Since I have been taking your Syrup I have left off the use of crutches entirely, and only use a cane, and for the past few days I often forget it and walk without any aid. To say that I am happy, and that it has greatly benefited me but poorly expresses my idea of your Rheumatic Syrup.

Yours truly,
C. D. DENIO, Dealer in General Groceries, cor. Trail and Mechanic Sts.

Mr. C. D. Denio is a man well known in this community, and was probably the worst wreck physically of any man this country ever saw. He was paralyzed from Rheumatic poison, and no one ever expected he would get well. He is well, though, and it is simply marvelous. The above statement made by him is true, and may be fully relied upon.

I am truly yours,
FRANK L. SMITH,
Ex-Member State Legislature, and proprietor Hird House, Jackson, Mich.
