They are reviving an old fight in Custer county. County division is to be voted upon again at the general election this fall. This time a scheme for county division has been devised which some think will carry. The county, it is proposed, shall be cut into three parts with Broken Bow the county seat of a long and irregular strip to be known as Custer county, extending along both sides of the Burlington main line from the southeast corner to the northwest corner of the county. A county made up of the triangle in the northeast corner of the present Custer would be known as Aba county, and Arbor county would be the triangular fraction of the southwest. Callaway and Sargent would be the two county seats. In this division each county gets a railroad and a railroad town for a county seat.
