TO THE ENTERPRISING.—Remington's Patent Bridge Bed Slats.—These slats are the invention of Mr. J. R. Remington, of the celebrated bridge memory, and are as simple as they are wonderful, and are truly a subject of admiration to the scientific as well as the curious. In fact, they are the ne plus ultra of all inventions in the way of a bed-spring, and are applicable to sofas, car seats, steamboat berths, &c. They were introduced in England three years ago, by the celebrated inventor, and from their general use have already become a staple article. Capitalists and speculators will do well to look at the subject, as they will undoubtedly supercede every article of the kind. Call at 2 John-st, Patent Agency Office, where a specimen will be exhibited a few days. [a22 1t*] A. LYON.

TO LUMBER DEALERS.
LUMBER—LUMBER—LUMBER.
WE HAVE ON HAND at our steam sawmill in Rochester, about eleven hundred thousand feet of the choicest kind of white pine boards and planks, a large proportion of it clear stuff, 1, 1¼, 1½ and 2 inches thick, sawed full, expressly for the New-York market, and nearly as smooth as if it had passed through a planing machine. It lies on the bank of the canal, where it can be shipped on boats without teaming.
This lumber we wish to sell here and to that end invite the attention of New-York and Eastern lumber merchants to it. We will give a good bargain to any one who may wish to purchase. The quality averages so high that money can be made on it.
We can furnish whitewood, oak, ash, hickory or any kind of timber, any quantity of feather-edged and straight clapboards and sawed shingles. Also, spars for ships, and plank or timber of any required thickness, &c. any length up to 42 feet. Reference to Campbell & Moody, 608 Washington-st, New-York, and R. K. Brastow, Harlem.
J. P. MILLENER & CO.
Rochester, March 17, 1856.

PATENTS IN EUROPE.—The unusual activity which prevails in the machine shops and factories of England, and in some of the Continental States, offers great inducement to inventors to secure Patents at the place abroad. A number of American inventions have lately been sold at handsome prices. Parties can obtain every information on application, by letter or otherwise, at the office of [a22 3t] J. P. PIERSON, 5 Wall-st.
