AS USUAL.

He Had Forgotten All About What His Wife Wanted.

A few weeks ago a prominent Washington lawyer left home to go to his office. His wife asked him for the fourth consecutive day to do a certain errand for her at one of the down-town stores. Her husband said he would attend to the matter, provided he did not forget all about it before he got two squares from home.

"Let me fix it so you will not forget it, my dear," said his wife, as she resorted to the old scheme of tying a string around his finger.

About 2 o'clock in the afternoon the lawyer met a gentleman friend on the street, and in shaking hands the friend noticed a roll of dirty string on the lawyer's finger.

"What are you wearing that string for?" inquired the friend.

"By Georges!" exclaimed the lawyer, "that's to remind me to do an errand for my wife. I must go do it right away, too, and keep peace in the family," and he started off for one of the dry goods stores.

All the way to the store door the lawyer tried in vain to think what it was his wife had asked him to buy. He walked four blocks out of his way, thinking of every article he had ever known her to use; still he could not think what it was that she wanted on this particular occasion. Finally, thoroughly disgusted with himself, he returned to his office, called a messenger and wrote a note to his wife, asking her what she had put the string on his finger for. He waited nearly an hour for the return of the messenger, paid the boy sixty cents, and then had the extreme pleasure of reading this from his lovely little wife:

"Dearest: I did want you to get me some chloral, but I knew you would never think of it, so I sent Mary down this afternoon and she got it for me."

OUGHT TO BE IN HEAVEN.

A Millionaire Whose Ambition Is to Have a Nose-Such House.

Architects have some very trying experiences with wealthy patrons who want to own palaces that excel in beauty and costliness those of their Fifth avenue neighbors. A wealthy New Yorker had more than thirty elaborate plans drawn, at $300 a plan, and rejected all of them.

"Of course we can't complain," said an architect, "so long as we get his check. This man has about worried the life out of us trying to get up a plan of a mansion that would suit him. If he goes to the club he meets some one who gives him an idea of what his house should be. He gets ideas also when visiting the residences of his neighbors or from reading up descriptions of houses in different periodicals.

"Well, would you believe that man actually got me out of bed at 1 a. m. to tell me he had at last hit on a plan for a mansion that would be the finest in the world? It was to be an exact duplicate of the White house. Well, we prepared another set of plans for him, but a week later he changed his mind. The only thing that will ever suit that client of mine is a castle in paradise.

"Our wealthy New Yorkers are now building mansions that are as strong as forts. They are as well guarded by bolts and bars as any fortress of the days of old. In case of a social revolution and an attack by a mob on Fifth avenue mansions many of them would be found almost impregnable. Steel shutters that slide out of sight are now coming in vogue to protect the windows of mansions along the fashionable thoroughfares, and the thick oaken doors would withstand a great deal of battering before they would yield."

Bargain.

She had been a servant ere she became rich, and was able to assume a very high quality of hatenr. She bestowed a withering glance upon the artist. "Do I understand you to say you charge me $1,000 for painting the portrait of my grandfather?" she demanded incredulously. The painter bowed low. "You understand me aright," he replied simply. She sneered. "Very well——" She shrugged her shoulders coldly. "——then, but I shall insist——" Her lip curled. "——that you pay the model." Leaning gracefully over the escritoire she wrote a check.

Life Is Short.

While living in Boston, Edison bought Faraday's works on electricity, commenced to read them at 3 o'clock in the morning, and continued until his room-mate arose, when they started on their long walk to get breakfast. That end, however, was entirely subordinated in Edison's mind to Faraday, and he suddenly remarked to his friend: "Adams, I have got so much to do and my life is so short, that I have got to hustle;" and with that he started off on a dead run for breakfast.

Part of the Government.

As the train stopped at a small town in Virginia, the mail-bag was thrown to a negro boy of perhaps fifteen years, who started off at a brisk run to the postoffice. But a larger boy, turning a corner, suddenly ran into the mail-carrier and overturned him. As soon as he recovered himself, he turned upon the aggressor. "Look-a-heah!" he exclaimed; "you wants to be keerful of dis chile. When you knocks me down, you jars de whole gov'ment of de United States. I carries de mail!"

Education in the South.

There are 35,530 negro schools now in the South, where 2,250,000 negroes have learned to read and most of them to write. In the colored schools are 238,600 pupils and 20,000 negro teachers. There are 150 schools for advanced education and seven colleges administered by negro presidents and faculties.

GREEN GOODS.

The Deal Was Almost Made When Confederate Money Spoiled It.

"Well, jedge," said the man with the bristly moustache who was up for sentence, "it wuz dis here way. I played 'd jay fer a sucker an' I ketched him. See? I jist t'rowed him a few lines 'bout green goods an' he answered d' letter like it brung him news uv a forchun. I goddim t' cum here an' jollied him along an' we wuz 'bout t' do bizness. We went out t' d' meetin' place set fer us an' I showed how d' ol' t'ing worked. He wuz to gimme his dough an' I wuz t' ship him d' green stuff by express. See? I dashed d' roll on 'im an' it made his eyes stick out like dey was hen eggs. Den dey wuz more talk an' I tol' 'im I c'uld give 'im a thousan' uv d' green stuff fer two-fifty uv d' dough dat wuz straight goods, an' he bit. I counted out d' stuff, an' jist as I had d' deal all made fo me min' de jay sez t' me—"

Here the man with the bristly mustache began to laugh.

"Well," said the judge, "what did he say to you?"

"He sez t' me," continued the man with the bristly mustache, "'I w'd'—" but he began to laugh again.

"Stop that laughing and go on with your story," said the judge, sternly.

The man with the bristly mustache threw back his shoulders and took a long breath.

"He sez t' me," he began again, "'w'ud I take Coufed'rit money, an I soaked him."

NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

She Had Entirely Recovered From That Weakness.

"I used to be superstitious, but I have overcome the feeling entirely."

"Entirely?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," was her reply. "Beginning anything on Friday, or on the thirteenth of the month, going under ladders, refusing to turn back after I have started out, picking up black pins, meeting cross-eyed people on Monday, singing before breakfast—in fact, all those ridiculous ideas I have gotten bravely over."

"Good," I replied as I put on my bonnet—we were going out together—"I am glad to know that you are so sensible."

"Have you got a hatpin you can loan me, Polly, dear?" she asked.

An idea struck me.

I went to my jewel-case and took out a long scarfpin with an opal head, and handed it to her.

She took it, and then dropped it, as if it was hot!

"Mercy me!" she cried: "I wouldn't wear an opal for $100 a minute!"

"But I thought you weren't superstitious?"

"Oh, well; opals everybody knows about. That's a fact and not a superstition," was her unconvincing and ungrammatical reply.

So there you are.

HOW HE DID IT.

A Man Who Made $500 by Knowing How to Look Interested.

"I made $500 once," said the man in the mackintosh, "by merely keeping my mouth shut."

"Was it at an auction?" asked the man in the slouch hat.

"No."

"High-priced doctor asked you to show him your tongue, and you didn't do it?" ventured the man who had his feet on the table.

"No. It was—"

"Found it on the street and didn't say a word about it to anybody?" suggested the man behind green goggles.

"Do it on a bet?" inquired the man in the shaggy ulster.

"Burglar asked where your money was hid and you were struck speechless and couldn't tell him?" hazarded the man with a big spot of gray in his moustache.

"You think you're pretty smart," said the man in the mackintosh, speaking to the crowd generally, "but you're not. None of you would ever guess it. I made that $500 in the simplest way in the world. A rich old uncle who was visiting us told a long story we'd heard him tell a hundred times before. I was the only one in the family that didn't yawn, and he remembered me in his will."

An Imp.

If at present we were to call a boy an imp, he would possibly be offended. But in Spenser's time "imp" had still a very good sound, and he allows a noble lady a lady gent, as he calls her, to address Arthur as "Thou worthy imp." Nor is there any harm in the word, for "imp" meant originally graft, then offspring. To graft in German is impfen.

No College Complete Without It.

At a large reception given not long ago Mrs. Julia Ward Howe wore the badge of the Phi Kappa Beta society. "Mrs. Howe," whispered a young girl as she accepted that venerable lady's cordial hand-shake, "can you give the Phi Kappa Beta grip?" "No, my dear," replied the older woman, "but I could give the Phi Kappa Beta yell if I dared."

Has Many Pleasures in Reserve.

Timothy Dyer, of Vinalhaven, Maine, is now in his 91st year. He recently captured a 332 pound halibut. He says he never wore a shoe of any kind until he was 18 years old. He never has ridden on the cars, and but once on a steamboat. He has never visited a tavern, nor quarreled with any one, he says, and has never been shaved by a barber.

Quebec Protects the Boys.

The legislative assembly of Quebec has just adopted a piece of rather unusual legislation for the restriction of the use of tobacco among minors. The sale of tobacco is absolutely forbidden to persons under eighteen years of age, while boys under fifteen years found using it are to be punished by fine or imprisonment.

Birney's Catarrh Powder

REV. FATHER CLARKE, next to the Rt. Rev. Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, writes:

Gentlemen,—I cannot say enough for your Powder. It has cured me of an aggravated attack of catarrh after trying nine gold-bricks. Am delighted with it. All my friends are using it. I administered another for some asthmatic cases. It has done wonders. Many of them now of its the Hospital notes their cure. I will do anything to speak a good word for the remedy to help others who are suffering.

M. E. FITZPATRICK, Custodian U. S. Appraiser's Stores, Chicago, writes:

Gentlemen,—Being almost entirely deaf for a number of years (my ear getting so relief from every so-called cure which I tried, was induced by a friend to try Dr. Birney's Catarrhal Powder for my deafness. Have received my hearing entirely, so that I can now hear a watch for a distance. It being said it broke from my ear. I now speak it as a positive cure for deafness and have recommended the use to many of my friends and can say I have never heard of a case where it has failed to relieve.

*Boxes north of river.

Fire alarms are sounded upon the tower bell at department headquarters by striking the number of the signal station nearest the fire, in this manner: If for box 4, four distinct strokes and repeated; if for box 12, one stroke, a short pause, then three strokes, and repeated, thus, 1-111, 1-111, etc. This is sounded for all fires within the district bounded by Fifth, Ninth, Jackson and Quincy streets.

TEN STROKES, and repeated, followed by the number of the signal station nearest the fire, is the SECOND ALARM for a second fire.

THREE STROKES, followed by TWELVE, and repeated, is the GENERAL ALARM for a very dangerous fire, and calls out the entire department, with a call of police.

TWO STROKES, slowly, indicates FIRE IS OUT.

One long whistle from water works for fire south of river. Three whistles from same, for fires north of river.
