AMERICANS EATING LESS MEAT AND NUMBER OF ANIMALS DECLINES

Figures and charts on the meat industry of the United States showing that the consumption of meat is decreasing are given in an exhibit, entitled "Livestock Statistics," by the United States Department of Agriculture at the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago, Dec. 2 to 9.

These statistics show that the United States, while still among the principal meat-eating nations of the world, is undergoing a general decline both in per capita consumption of meat and in the number of food animals in proportion to the population. This situation is illustrated strikingly by a chart of the trend of human live-stock population in the United States from 1850 to 1922. Among live stock the number of swine is the most variable, and sheep show the greatest general decline. The relative positions of the curves in this chart at the present time indicate that the nation will probably experience increasing difficulty in supplying its ever-increasing population with sufficient meat products, and at the same time providing a surplus of these products for export.

The principal meat-eating nations of the world, in order of per capita consumption, are Argentina, Australia, and New Zealand, with the United States fourth.

AUTOMOBILE TOURS HELP THE FARMERS GET TO MORE FIELD MEETINGS

The automobile tour is the application of quick transportation to the field meeting idea, making it possible for farmers to attend what really amounts to 10 meetings in a single day. The usual automobile trip of this sort consists of 10 or 15 machines, carrying 40 or 50 interested observers, and stopping according to a previously arranged schedule at different farm demonstrations along the route, such as a particular kind of crop, the results of a certain fertilization or cultivation methods, or the effect of orchard management in accordance with extension teaching under the United States Department of Agriculture and the State agricultural college.

One Wisconsin trip recently carried the observing party to see 14 demonstrations in the county in a day. Several farmers had 10 acres of alfalfa and 15 acres of soy beans. A fruit tour in Michigan covered parts of three counties. A very fine New England trip was conducted by the Connecticut Poultry Association a fleet of fifty automobiles taking part in the tour. Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and Connecticut were visited to examine demonstrations in poultry farming. This tour was expertly handled by having the men in Number one car wear white caps, one of whom would wait at all forks to guide the other cars, and then take his place in the last car, which started out empty for this purpose. These men also constituted a crew for minor repairs on the road.

Farmers from 12 counties came by automobile to visit a demonstration in soil building in Anderson County, S. C. The reputation of this farm had been growing for over 10 years, and the tour was arranged to let others see what had been accomplished. In this case as in the others where the farmer told his own story the demonstration was very effective.
