RAWLINGS, Esq. was called to the Chair, and JOHN MOFFAT appointed Secretary. The Chairman gave an interesting account of Building Associations in this country and in England.

Mr. Leslie explained the principles and objects of the Association, its advantages to the industrious man, by means of which he can build a house and pay for it in a few years by small installments, less in amount than he usually pays for rent.

Dr. Peck, in an excellent address, gave his personal experience relative to the quality of the land and pronounced it equal, when cultivated, to any in the vicinity of Brooklyn; the water as pure as he ever saw, and attested by statistical facts; the location to be one the most salubrious and healthy on Long Island.

Daniel P. Barnard, John Moffat and John W. Leslie, were appointed a Committee to prepare Articles of Association; and Wm. J. Spence, Dr. Palmer and Thomas Leslie, a Committee to nominate officers—after which the meeting adjourned to MONDAY EVENING, 24th inst., at 7½ o'clock, at the Meeting Room, corner of Tillary and Fulton-sts., Brooklyn, where those desirous of subscribing for shares can apply, and obtain further information.

MAHEW'S PRACTICAL BOOK-KEEPING: by Single and Double Entry. By Ira Mayhew, A. M., author of a Treatise on Popular Education. The title of this volume—PRACTICAL BOOK-KEEPING—is indicative of its leading characteristics. The specimens of accounts presented in it are in Script that closely resembles writing and they hence afford excellent models for imitation. The book contains four forms of accounts, immediately following each of which is a large number of examples for practice. In their solution the pupil has occasion, practically, to apply the knowledge he has already acquired of both Arithmetic and Penmanship, while at the same time he learns Book-keeping, as he will have occasion to practice it in after life. For his purpose a set of account books in which the examples for practice are to be written out by the learner, and a Key for teachers, containing their solution, accompany the book. The price of the Book-keeping will be 37½ cents, and that of the Account Books but 6 cents each. That this Treatise ought to be as extensively studied in all our Schools as Arithmetic, Grammar, and Geography now are, is a commonly received opinion among practical educators to whom it has become known. Just published by CADY & BURGESS, n22 2tD&3tW No. 60 John-st., New-York.
