DICKENS'S BLEAK HOUSE, Part VII.—HARPER & BROTHERS, Nos. 329 and 331 Pearl-st., Franklin-square, publish this day,

THE SCHOOL FOR FATHERS. An Old English Story. By T. Gwynne. 12mo., paper, 40 cents; muslin, 60 cents. A story of town and country life in England during the last century. The plot depends on the contrast between a dissipated man of fashion in London, and the blunt, jolly fox-hunter of the rural districts. It is quite out of the run of modern novels. The narrative is lively and flowing, with many scenes of mingled humor and pathos. Its style is beautiful, and often exquisite.

II.

ANNA HAMMER: A Tale of Contemporary German Life. Translated from the German of Temme, by Alfred H. Guernsey. 8vo., paper, 25 cents. A good specimen of the contemporary peculiar fiction of German literature. It gives a vivid picture of the interior of German life, and is filled with passages of exciting interest. The translation, by an accomplished scholar of this city, everywhere shows idiomatic ease and fidelity, and is in pure and idiomatic English.

III.

BLEAK HOUSE. By Charles Dickens. With Illustrations. Part VII. 12mo., paper 12½ cents.

It cannot fail to have lessened the number of readers.
(N. Y. Com. Adv.

One devours a number at a sitting, and, like Oliver, "asks for more."
(N. Y. Independent.

Bids fair to take precedence of any of its author's productions.
(Boston Times.

The characters are marked, such as Dickens only can portray, and can be owned with his best.
(Pathfinder.

Replete with evidences of original observation, of a fresh and vigorous spirit, and of a genial and refined by over-refinement or conventional habit.
(Boston Post.

Comes fully up to the mark, and abundant intuitions are given that the work is to be one of great and exciting interest.
(Roswell Courier.

NEW and VALUABLE BOOK for FAMILIES and SCHOOLS.—Dr. Brewer's GUIDE TO SCIENCE, or, The Scientific Knowledge of Things Familiar. 400 pages. Price 62½ cents.

The object of "Dr. Brewer's Guide to Science" is to explain scientifically and in the most concise and intelligible manner, about 2,000 questions of the common phenomena of life similar to those subjoined:

Why does lightning turn beer and milk sour?
Why do leaves turn brown in autumn?
Why is mucilage adhesive?
Why are coals black—snow white—leaves green—violets blue—and roses red?

It contains an amount of useful information never before collected in a shape so convenient for study, and so easy for reference. The questions are such as are familiar to every person, and should be understood by every child. Who has not been asked by a child some such questions as those which follow?

Why does a candle show light?
Why is ice cold and fire hot?
Why does water boil and freeze?
Why does the air dry dampness?

And how often is a child called "troublesome and foolish" for asking such silly questions?" The object of Dr. Brewer's Guide to Science is to supply answers to above 2,000 such questions, in language so simple that every child may understand it, yet not so childish as to offend the scientific.

In ordering the book be particular to give the correct title: "Brewer's Guide to Science," published by C. S. FRANCIS & CO., No. 252 Broadway, N.Y., and sold by all Booksellers.

CHARLES PARTRIDGE, No. 3 Courtlandt-st., New-York.

THE GUERILLA CHIEF; or, THE ROMANCE OF WAR
BY CAPTAIN GRANT.

This day published, illustrated.

This splendid work of fiction is calculated to obtain as wide a popularity in this country as it already has done in England. It is powerfully and truthfully written. Pictures of War, in all its phases, and has received the unqualified endorsement of the whole English Press, as a work brilliant in its composition and never excelled in the absorbing interest which it awakens in the mind of the reader. From among numerous notices we select the following:

"Altogether we pronounce the work one of the very best and most graphic pictures of the soldier's life, that has yet made its appearance. "Charles O'Malley" are equalled, and in a great many instances surpassed by the "Guerilla Chief, or the Romance of War." There is more of the "romance" of war, if we may so express it, in which the romantic daring, the fierce chivalry, and the reckless bravery of the middle ages, are mingled in a striking manner with the sterner merits of the contemporary and honorable soldier. It is the work of a thoroughly appreciative spaniel of war that we have ever read. (Critic.
