The Hot Springs of Dakota.

These springs are rapidly becoming famous on account of the wonderful curative properties of the waters, and the many marvels cures which have been effected by the thermal baths.

The town and springs are delightfully situated in a picturesque valley in the Black Hills country, abounding in beautiful scenic effects, and at an altitude of 3,400 feet above the sea level; thus insuring a pure atmosphere and exhilarating climate, absolutely free from malaria.

Under the enterprising and progressive management of the Hot Springs company many desirable improvements have been made; among the number the erection of a commodious bath house fitted up with all modern conveniences for the comfort of guests. New hotels have been built and comfortably furnished throughout, conducted in first-class style and at reasonable rates.
Those who prefer stopping at a private house will find many desirable boarding places where good accommodations are furnished at moderate prices.

The superior daily service now afforded by the Burlington Route to Hot Springs, with through sleeping car accommodations from Omaha, Lincoln, Aurora and Grand Island, makes the trip an easy and enjoyable one; and for the benefit of all who desire to test the efficacy of the waters, round trip tickets at reduced rates, good for ninety days are now on sale at all offices of the Burlington Route.

For pamphlet, descriptive of the springs, and full information as to rates, time, etc., apply to any agent of the company, or to J. FRANCIS, Gen'l Pass'r & Tkt' Agt.,

Only Ten (10) Cents a Pack.

The celebrated "Burlington Route" apply cards are now sold at ten cents per pack, (50 cents is the usual price) for such cards.
Whist, high-five and euchre parties will soon quirements.

Which is the Better Dressed, She Who Dresses to Attract Attention or She Who is Content to be Inconspicuous if She is Only in the Fashion?

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Some women like a dress whose quiet and modest make and color will attract no attention and others again do not care to have a gown that does not show so marked a "style" that people will stop and turn to look after them in the street.

One woman is just as good as the other, only one loves to be remarkable among a throng and the other is content to know that her costume is all faultless but still not noticeable. It always has been a mooted question which of the two is the better dressed. I give an illustration here of one of the newest styles, and most stylish styles, as well as a more modest one, and the girl who wants to look her best can choose for herself and be sure she is right in either case.

The costume with the quaint military coat is of gray ladies' cloth, trimmed with green velvet and a very light gold embroidery. The shape of the coat is peculiar. It opens on the right side and has green velvet ribbon and emerald buttons. The basques are trimmed in the same way. The skirt opens on the left side over a panel of green velvet, but hangs straight on the right with almost straight folds, or, more properly speaking, folds neatly stitched. These folds extend to the back breadth on the right side. The cuffs, sleeve caps and collar are of the green velvet as well as the hat. The whole costume is stylish and striking, although in perfect taste.

STYLISH COSTUME.

A more modest though quite as handsome gown is represented in the picture below and is one easily accomplished by the home dressmaker. It is of grayish blue Bedford cord. The skirt is quite plain in front, and in the back the plaits are laid in deep box instead of the flat fan plaits of the most of the dresses of the season. The bottom of the front breadth is slit in seven places, the front ones being a trifle deeper than the others, and they are bound in seal brown plush. The basque is plain and has brooches of the plush reaching to the shoulders and then to a point in the back. The collar and front of the neck has a passementerie trimming of brown and gold.

The pretty hat is of the same materials, with a couple of short tufts of ostrich.
The sleeves are very pretty and novel.
To get the plain forearm and full top without seam requires that the upper portion should be cut larger and longer than the length of the arm, and where the gathers come the sleeve should be cut out about four inches wider on each side, and this platted in and the forearm sewn together. The effect is exceedingly dressy, and yet very easy to get.
The back of this basque is perfectly plain, and it is open up to the waist line.
The same style could be reproduced in any kind or color of seasonable goods, and Hercules braid could take the place of the plush, but in case the plush was used a plush jacket or cape would be very suitable to wear with this suit in very cold weather.

The bonnets and hats have become absolutely grotesque, that is, the most of them. There is a little flat something which serves as a foundation to build a surprising bunch of very stiff, upstanding bows and feathers curled closely and then turned under like a bishop's miter, or the front of a fern without grace or beauty, other than that of the coloring. This stands up in the back like a sitting hen's tail, and in front is another and smaller arrangement of about the same sort. Some look like ancient galleys, with their prows lifted and the after-deck covered with all the spoils of the Indies. In any case they are certainly becoming.

A pretty theater bonnet had a flat shape, on which there nestled dozens of jeweled bugs, the most of them green in color. Over this was loosely puffed black Brussels net and a bunch of it was gathered at the back into a standing bow, held by a few strands of very narrow orange ribbon and black velvet ribbon an inch wide which ended in strings.
The whole effect was beautiful.

Gloves are medium length for street wear, with four buttons, sometimes three, and in mode, gray or tan.
The tan shades are preferred. Castor gloves, with embroc' red gauntlets, are seen.
Sashes for evening dresses are made of Brussels net with balls of thistle-down sewn thickly across the ends in three rows, and they are very light and pretty.
Some evening dresses are sewn all over with wax pearl beads. They are beautiful, but crush very easily. Black pearl beads are as pretty as the white ones.

WALKING TOILET.

Mr. Rhoda Vassar (with poetic interrogation)—Will you ever be as now? As true? As constant?
Mr. J. Westchester Hunt (with melodramatic fervency)—So long as you sturdily stand withstands the wintry blasts, so long as the hills remain, so long and longer will I love and cherish—"Tiger" Murphy (compelled to listen to the above for upward of an hour)—If ye'll excuse me, miss, O'll walk the rest o' th' by home. O'm feelin' sick.—Smith & my's Monthly.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

It is a Foolish Man Who Tackles Ye Enterprising Editor.

WANTED.—The Kicker wants to engage a spirited and enterprising young man who is not afraid of work and is ambitious to build himself up to act as a collector.
We have about $500 standing out, and will furnish a mule and two revolvers as an outfit free of expense. The collector will be allowed to retain half of his collections.
We regard this as a splendid opening for some ambitious eastern man who wants to work up in journalism. He will no doubt be shot at fifty times for every hundred dollars he collects, but if he's got the right sort of sand he'll pull through and come out on top of the heap.

After we've given him a dozen lessons on getting the drop, and he's had a couple of days' acquaintance with our mule, we'll lock him to tackle any of our nonpaying subscribers outside of a rifle pit. In case of death we guarantee a fair to medium funeral. Apply at once.

AT IT AGAIN.—As is well known to the readers of The Kicker we have a private graveyard with ten graves in it. The ten graves represent ten different men who were mistaken in sizing us up for an editor without backbone. We did the fair thing in each and every case—sending for the stone that he has at last made us tired, and that any further fooling around on his part will leave his milk and water old sheet without a head.

We want to be neighborly as an editor, but we also want this old shouldered, bow legged hyena to thoroughly understand that he has at last made us tired, and that any further fooling around on his
without a head.

IT WAS A FAILURE.—We got a sly hint several days ago that the postmaster of this town, whom we have had to shoot in three different places within a year in order to expedite the mail service and prevent him from walking on us, had sent over to Tu-bac to get a man to do us up. The routine of getting out one of the biggest and brightest weekly papers in America (subscriptions payable in advance) went on just the same, however, and we didn't do any private and confidential worrying.

All the forenoon yesterday we heard some one hollering around the streets for gore, and upon inquiry learned that it was the man from Tubac. He was reported as being a real, old fashioned terror from Grizzly mountain, with his toe nails dyed red and his eyes shining like two camp fires, and that he was also looking for us.
We were never more calm or serene. We sent out to our grave digger to excavate another hole and wrote a note to Steve Williams, the undertaker, to varnish up a white wood 2 by 6 and get the trimmings on.
It was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon when we finished our editorial labors for that day and started out for a saunter.

Just as we turned into Sioux place the man from Tubac jumped out on us from a doorway and started in to secure our right ear as a relic. We sat up with him most of the night last night. One of the bullets had been extracted, but the other couldn't be reached with a three foot stick.
Unless inflammation sets in he will very likely pull through. If he does he assures us that he will be a changed man.

He wouldn't exactly say that the postmaster gave him fifty dollars to come over and humble our proud editorial spirit, but he said enough to satisfy us that we must run over tomorrow and have another pop at our man. He's getting too coltish again.—M. Quad in New York World.

He Didn't Lie.

Father—Look here, young man, give an account of yourself. What kept you out so late last night?

Son—I was attending a class in ethnology, and of course I didn't want to leave till the session was over.

Father—What do you want to lie for? I have positive knowledge that you were at the bicycle tournament. Good deal of ethnology about that, eh?

Son—Certainly. That comes under the head of "the races of man," don't it?— Boston Courier.

Charged in the Bill.

A suicide was perpetrated in a certain lodging house that shall be nameless. A few days after the landlady sent the family of the deceased a bill containing the following item:

"Fright caused to the waiter when he discovered the corpse, nineteen francs ninety-five centimes."—Petit Parisien.

Sure and Safe.

"If you want to destroy the odor of fresh paint in a room, put a handful of fresh hay in a pail and let it stay there over night."

"Oh, I've a simpler way than that. Boil a cauliflower over the gas."—Harper's Bazar.

Will Telegraph.

A telegram, something after the following form, may soon be sent from Chicago: J. H. So and So—Your son has just fallen from the top story of the Masonic temple. Will telegraph result as soon as he gets down.—Arkansas Traveler.
