EXTRACTS FROM CRITICAL NOTICES.
"Putnam's is essentially and entirely, an American magazine. Its contents are original, as respects intrinsic freshness, pervading tone, and intellectual vigor." [Boston Post.
"Truly a national magazine. Such a periodical has long been a necessity in our country." [Detroit Daily Tribune.
"It is able, sparkling, and thoroughly American." [Penn Yan Whig.
"We are proud of Putnam's Monthly as a national honor, in which not only the publishers and authors are entitled to credit, but an appreciating public." [Cambridge Chronicle.
"One hundred and twenty pages of instruction and amusement such as this Magazine comprises for twenty-five cents, is no unimportant feature of the age in which we live, and we are not surprised that its circulation has run up to 35,000 monthly." [Pittsburgh Dispatch.
"Putnam's Monthly is the youngest in years among our monthlies, but oldest in energy. Bold and manly in style—pungent in thought, exhibiting the very first talent of our country—novel and witty—a severe critic, and an able review." [Louisville Gazette.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY, No. 17 Spruce-st., N.Y.

THE ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE of ART, No. 8. The Eighth Number of this valuable Monthly is now ready. It is now unusually varied in its reading matter and illustrations. We call attention to the following subjects—Queen Elizabeth entering Kenilworth Castle; the Giant's Causeway, with seven spirited engravings; the Royal Shield in the Royal Armoury at Madrid, is a rare gem, and curious; Henry IVth parting with his Queen to join the wars calls up stirring incidents. The works of one of the great Masters—Jean Baptiste Greuze, seven illustrations, gives a charming view of domestic life. The Virgin and Child is a simple, but a grand conception of Raffaelle's drawn and engraved by Linton. There is a fine engraving of Washington Irving, and a pleasing notice of this classic American. These are some of the illustrations to which we call attention in this number, feeling that a work with such specimens of art must ever be acceptable to the people. We propose to make it increasingly so—a popular gallery of the fine arts.
