JAS. P. FAGAN, Superintendent.

The World's Fair.

THE DIRECTORS of the ASSOCIATION for the EXHIBITION of the INDUSTRY of ALL NATIONS give notice that the Exhibition is now open to the Public in all its branches.

Some changes and additions will hereafter, from time to time, be made, but in its great Departments of Raw Produce, Manufactured Articles, Machinery and Fine Arts, the Exhibition may now be pronounced complete.

The Directors, in making this announcement, take pleasure in saying that, in all its branches, it is by far the most comprehensive and attractive world's fair ever made in this country, and they believe it will compare favorably with any ever made.

The display of Foreign Art and the Products of the Skill of the Old World, is altogether superior to anything ever before collected in this country, while the inventive ingenuity, the mechanical skill, and the industrial energy, of our own people have never before been made so apparent.

The enterprise and the talent of over 5,000 exhibitors have produced this array of the most beautiful and useful products of human intelligence, and the Directors now earnestly invite their fellow-citizens to embrace the present opportunity to examine and to study a collection the like of which never has been, and, in all probability, will not in many years again be offered to their observation.

The Exhibition will close in the month of December next.

ANNIE GRAYSON; Or, LIFE IN WASHINGTON. By Mrs. N. P. Lasselle.

"The scenes portrayed are not fancy sketches, but a picture of Life in Washington, the truthfulness of which will be readily recognized by those familiar with the society of the national metropolis."

BUNCE & BROTHER, Publishers, N. Y.

EXTRACTS FROM EDITORIAL NOTICES.

From The Waverly Magazine.

"We had intended to call the reader's attention to the exquisitely drawn character of the gentle, lovely Ella Stanmore. Have you never met some vision of beauty, so lovely, and so slight, that it seemed too frail for earth? Have you never seen a sylph-like figure, so slight and airy that you almost feared to breathe lest she should be forever lost to you? One cannot read of sweet Ella's death without being moved; her character interests one so much. We repeat that we have seldom read a book so complete in its detail, so exalted in its moral, and so interesting as a whole."

From The Springfield Republican.

"We should judge it to be not only a good representation of the prominent phases of society in Washington, but well calculated to convey to the young heart the danger of giving itself up to a love of pleasure and display."

From The New-York Herald.

"This work, which is written by Mrs. Lasselle, gives a startling description of the vices practiced by the fashionable people of the capital. Several of the characters in this work are no doubt living embodiments of a great portion of a class known as the too, who reside in Washington during the winter months, and as soon as the summer arrives repair to the northern watering places, for pleasure and dissipation."

From The New-Bedford Mercury.

"Written to exemplify the legitimate influences upon the female character of a life given to the pursuit of pleasure; to rebuke the selfishness and vanity of the mere votaries of fashion and wealth, and also to show that in the most brilliant worldly position there is full room for the exercise of the womanly virtues of humility, sympathy and charity."

From The New-York Literary Gazette.

"It is designed to show off the peculiarities of fashionable society in that city, and at the same time to impress the value of a life of piety in contrast to a life of pleasure."

From The Boston Mail.

"'ANNIE GRAYSON.'—Such is the modest title of a new and deeply interesting American novel, by Mrs. N. P. Lasselle—a novel founded upon real incidents, most of which transpired amid the circles of the fashionable society of Washington City. We have seldom read a work with a better relish—the character being boldly and truthfully drawn—and knowing as we do the extreme vulnerability of fashionable life at the capital."

Complete in one 12mo. vol., 345 pp. Cloth 75 cents, paper 50 cents.

ELLEN DE VERE; Or, THE WAY OF THE WILL. Being the Sequel to and the Conclusion of "Harry Ashton; or, The Will and the Way." By J. F. Smith, author of "Amy Lawrence," "Minnie Grey," &c., &c.

This exciting work is now ready for delivery. It is, beyond all question, one of the finest romances that has appeared in twenty years. Complete, unmutilated and unabridged. Price only 25 cents. Beware of a spurious and mangled edition of this great work, which is about to be forced upon the public. The present work is the only one published according to the text of the author. For sale by all booksellers. Price 25 cents.

STRINGER & TOWNSEND, Publishers, No. 222 Broadway.

ELLEN DEVERE—THE GREAT BOOK COMPLETE.—Containing 44 pages more than is embraced in any rival edition. Price only 25 cents.

ELLEN DEVERE; Or, THE WAY OF THE WILL. By the author of "Amy Lawrence," "Stansfield Hall," "Gus Howard," "Minnie Gray," &c. Beautifully illustrated.

This is another new novel by the gifted author of "Gus Howard," and surpasses in point of ingenuity of plot and skillful combination any of this writer's former efforts. It has had immense success in London, where it has run through one of the weekly journals of that city, the circulation of which has been increased many thousands by its great popularity.

The present is the only complete and unmutilated edition of this great work, now before the public. Any one can satisfy himself of this fact, by examining the various editions in the market. The work now offered contains Fifteen Chapters more than are embraced in any rival edition.

Also, now ready this Morning:

Part 2 of ELLEN DE VERE. Price 12½ cents.

10,000 copies of No. 1 of this extraordinary work has already been sold, and the demand continues unabated.

THE "LADIES' PAPER."—New-York, Sept. 5, 1853. Editor Tribune. Dear Sir: Learning that some one has started the report (whether honorable or prejudicial, we will not say) that the "Ladies' Paper" will be under the control of the Editor of The Day Book—and not wishing to thrive on the merits of others or suffer for their sins—we beg leave, through the columns of your journal, to pledge our word and honor that Mr. Stinson has no more interest in or control over the forthcoming paper than has the Emperor of China, and that it has no connection with The Day Book whatever, save that some of the girls whom the proprietors of the "Ladies' Paper" will employ learned to set type in The Day Book office.

Yours, truly, T. D. CURTIS.
S. S. RICHARDS.
