CONFECTIONERY for the HOLIDAYS.—To my Honored Patrons: I have the pleasure to inform you that I am now prepared with a full stock of goods suitable to the season. To accomplish this, I have surmounted insurmountable difficulties; jested with impossibilities; the elements of fire, of water, and of discord, have in vain assailed me. I am still ready to receive you. I have hitherto, under the protection of Divine Providence, found nothing impossible but to forget friends who have assisted me in the hour of need.
Twenty-two years ago at this season, the entire operative department of my establishment marched away in a body, and on one pair of legs—leaving me totally ignorant of my business, with a new and indestructible silk, to manufacture! Nothing daunted, I had been paying high wages for doing nothing, as a "retainer" as I have since frequently done with similar results. The "trade" laughed at me, and it gave me encouragement! I tried to make Candies, and burned myself woefully, but—I went ahead!
He, who in the joyous society of his friends quaffs the tempting cup presented by Bacchus must expect after the first exhilarating effect have subsided, to experience a reaction; marked by unstrung nerves and disordered digestion. But he who drinks of the cup presented by sorrow or misfortune, when the first bitterness has passed away, and he finds himself surrounded by zealous friends, then becomes aware of the tonic properties of the draught, by invigorated nerves and the genial warmth that glows within him.
My friends, honorable friends, "your name is legion," from W. J. Pinkney, the prompt, liberal, and considerate President of the Astor Insurance Company; J. C. Hoe, builder; Isaac Lewis, builder, who all assisted me in my recent difficulties, down through a long state of years to Allen & Foulon, my first-esteemed and honored patrons of "Auld lang syne."
T. G. HODGKINS,
Confectioner, No. 154 Green-st.
N. B.—I have this year republished the MOTTO VERSES, which on their first appearance, some years since, elicited universal satisfaction.
