OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"LYON'S GIFT ENTERPRISE.—This new scheme of distributing valuable premiums bids fair to throw Perham's affair into the shade. The Engraving sold for the trivial sum of One Dollar was originally vended at ten times that price, being regarded with justice as a master-piece of modern art. To guard the public against any imposition, we have made particular inquiry with respect to the character and standing of Mr. Lyon, and we are happy to say that both appear unimpeachable by the best of city and mercantile references." [True American.

"That magnificent lithograph Engraving of Landseer's celebrated painting of the 'Stag at Bay,' which has been universally admired as an artistic design of surpassing genius, can be obtained for One Dollar. This Engraving makes a splendid parlor ornament. Each purchaser of an engraving is also presented with a share in Lyon's splendid Gifts, consisting of $40,000 worth, $50,000 worth of property of various kinds." [Connecticut Whig.

"PERHAM OUTDONE.—It will be noticed that another Gift Enterprise has been commenced by Mr. F. S. Lyon, who offers his splendid Engraving, 'The Stag at Bay,' from Landseer's celebrated painting (which sold for $2,000) for the small sum of One Dollar, and presents a long list of Gifts to the purchasers of the Engraving. We do not hesitate to say, after perusing the list of prizes, that they are not surpassed by any other which have been offered to the public." [Nation-l Democrat.

THE LAST CHANCE.—A very few of PERHAM'S GIFT TICKETS can be obtained by applying at my office.

Persons purchasing now will not be kept long in suspense, as the Committee have already lost for Washington.

A Book for all Seasons.

JANUARY AND JUNE; Or, OUTDOOR THINKINGS AND FIRESIDE MUSINGS. By Benjamin F. Taylor. One volume, large 12mo., illustrated. Price, in handsome cloth binding, $1.

The first edition of 2,500 copies of JANUARY AND JUNE were mostly taken by those who had already some acquaintance with the writings of Mr. Taylor. No book has appeared lately which has been received by the press of the country with such universal favor. In issuing the FOURTH THOUSAND the publisher begs leave to call the attention of the public to the following extracts from

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"It comprises a series of articles clothed in the most graceful and poetic imagery imaginable. Mr TAYLOR is one of the most glowing writers of the day. JANUARY AND JUNE ought to be on every bookstable in the country." [Utica Branch, Boston.

"What book is better fitted for the book-table than such a volume as this?—one that you take up in an idle moment, and reading half a dozen pages, you make the moment no more an idle one, but one in which you have learnt some new philosophy of life. Mr. Taylor's book is a prose poem of the purest style." [Palladium, Worcester, Mass.

"Mr. Taylor has a style peculiar to himself in drawing apt illustrations, and imagining things that seem to live and breathe." [Daily Times, Hartford, Conn.

"It is a series of sketches suggested by the different seasons of the year, pure in sentiment, and very gracefully written." [New-York Observer, N. Y.

"It unfolds the interior aspects of life, the deeper and more pathetic passages of human experience, in a view of pensive moralizing which is not without a beauty of its own, and which will touch the sympathies of many hearts." [Harper's Magazine.

"Some may object to the style as being too stilted, but we can assure them the book is not made up of sickly sentimentality, but is full of original and striking thoughts, beautifully elaborated and calculated to make all who read it better." [Home Journal, N. Y.

"We can truly say of Mr. Taylor that 'Nature and he took hands and pledged friendship long ago.' By virtue of this pledge she has admitted him into her very penetralia—drawn away the drapery that hides her secrets, and whispered in his ear things most beautiful in themselves and their suggestions. She has taught him how to construe her simple into proverbs, and to weave songs out of even her dried foliage, and well has the pupil answered her teachings." [Morning Express, Buffalo, N. Y.

JANUARY AND JUNE abounds with fine thoughts quaintly expressed, and though the writer occasionally verges on the transcendental, he evinces such a fond, contemplative spirit, and so much freshness and originality, that his occasional incursions into cloud-land may very readily be pardoned." [Archer's Home Gazette, Philadelphia Pa.

"The work is quaint, and curious full of thought and feeling with no redundancy of expression. It leaves the reader to fill up the sketchings with details of his own, and is a very right-inspiring." [Saturday Visitor, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"This book is worthy of being read any season of beautiful thoughts—suggestive for time and for eternity—for the contemplative and the merry, the young and the old." [Daily Despatch, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It is about thoughts, dressed in prose and embellished in poetry. There is a pleasant and attractive air running through it which will make the journey from JANUARY to JUNE one of delight." [Patriot, Baltimore, Pa.

"There is a freshness in its style, and a sound morality in its teachings which render it peculiarly appropriate for youth." [Daily Advertiser, Mobile, Alabama.

"We confess to have known little of Mr. Taylor prior to this time, having only read him now and then at random, but always with pleasure. His book tells us that he is a minute observer of Nature, a deep thinker, and much given to meditation—a cunning and delightful painter, 'adorning what he touches,' however common the subject; and lastly, that he is possessed of an excellent heart and unusual imaginative powers." [Commercial Register, Sandusky City, Ohio.

"His JANUARY AND JUNE is a perfect storehouse of ideas refreshingly new coined in the daintiest words which our language affords, and comprising a number of brief sketches, essays and poems, many of which are gems, sparkling, finished and beautiful. The author talks chiefly of Nature and her works, and his powers of observation seem almost to spring from a new sense, not common to man in general, as it were a second pair of eyes." [Republican, Savannah, Ga.

"One of the happiest books of the year is TAYLOR'S JANUARY AND JUNE, a volume of gathered beauties prose and verse, full of originality and exquisite pathos. IK MARVEL'S REVERIES were never more charmingly meted; and for a calm, thoughtful reading, this book is more than The Bachelor's counterpart." [Commercial Register, Sandusky City, Ohio.

"In this book the author has gathered his fugitive pieces, both prose and verse, the whole forming the most tempting cluster yielded by the literary vintage of the present season. Views of Life and Nature in their wonderful beauty, as well as in their commonest details and every-day experiences, are presented and illustrated by the author with a truthfulness, a quaintness and originality of style, refreshing as the sparkling Catawba." [Daily Commercial, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Such notices might be extended to columns.

The book is for sale by all the booksellers in the principal cities in the Union and by the publisher.

ENGLISH LAW and EQUITY REPORTS, published by LITTLE, BROWN & Co. Law and Foreign Booksellers, No. 112 Washington-st., Boston.

At the first announcement of these Reports, the publishers pledged themselves to furnish the profession with complete Reports of the cases in all the English Courts of the highest character in a superior style, greatly in advance of any other series, and at a much cheaper rate. The facts which they now present show that this pledge has been fully redeemed.

This series has been established three years, and now amounts to eighteen volumes. It contains two thousand six hundred and seventy cases. One thousand four hundred and twenty-seven of these are from the House of Lords, Privy Council, Court of Chancery, and the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts; and none of these cases have yet been published in any other series in this country.

Of the remaining one thousand, two hundred and forty-three cases in the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, and Court of Criminal Appeal, only five hundred and six have yet been published elsewhere in this country. More than four-fifths of the cases published in this series are yet inaccessible to the profession in any other publication.

The style in which these Reports will be best seen by a comparison with others. The Reports of the Courts last named, for the three years preceding the commencement of this series, amount to fifteen volumes of the Philadelphia reprints, and are sold for about thirty-seven dollars and a half. The eighteen volumes of the Law and Equity Reports, embracing the same length of time, are sold for thirty-six dollars and contain all the cases in the same Courts, but in all the English Courts. For the last ten years, the Philadelphia reprints have averaged nearly five volumes per annum, making the price about twelve dollars a year. For the same price, the Law and Equity Reports furnish more than double the number of cases; while for six dollars a year, the alternate law volumes can be purchased, containing, not only all the matter of the Philadelphia reprints, but all the cases reported from the House of Lords, Privy Council, Admiralty and Ecclesiastical Courts, together with many cases from the Common Law Courts not contained in the other reprints. For it should be remembered in this connection, that these publications do not contain all the cases even in the Courts which they profess to report, while this series is complete. For example, the first volume of Ellis & Blackburn's Queen's Bench Reports embraces the period from Nov. 2, 1852 to April 27, 1853, and contains only eighty-two cases decided within that time; while the Law and Equity Reports contain one hundred and eight cases from the same Court in the same period. Only three fourths of the cases contained in the latter are reported in the former. It thus appears that the Law and Equity Reports are furnished at less than half the price of any others.

As to the character of these Reports, the publishers invite the most critical comparison between the cases in this series which may be found in any other.

They also assure the profession, that the statement industriously circulated that these Reports will be soon discontinued is untrue. In the face of a most determined opposition, and against the most unscrupulous detraction and misrepresentation, they have gained a reputation which places the enterprise beyond the possibility of failure.

Vol. 19 nearly ready for delivery. Vol. 20 in press, containing cases in the Common Law Courts to Nov. 1853, including all the cases in 2 Ellis & Blackburn, Part 1, not heretofore published in the Law and Equity Reports.
