New Publications.

A STORY OF GREAT INTEREST—VIOLET, THE CHILD OF THE CITY.

"The most interesting volume that has ever been written on Life in New-York."

Read the following from The Philadelphia Saturday Courier:

"The writer of this work has taken up a subject that we have long wanted to see presented to the young who are yearning to forsake the quiet joys and pure air of the country, for the dust and toil and temptations of a city life. The author says his design has been to exhibit, in strong colors, the contrast between the life of town and country, and the harrowing cares and vicissitudes which so many daily exchange for the free air and healthy employment of the woods and fields. The variety of characters introduced, and the spirit with which they are handled, render this a work of no inconsiderable interest. Some of the scenes are worthy the very best productions of the day."

Also this from The Boston Bee:

"A very excellent story, this. A fine and genial tone pervades the whole work. Pictures both of city and country life are drawn in a graphic and most attractive manner. Violet, the heroine, is a charming creature, the semblance of which we sometimes find in real life, and always to bless and refine. The more we can have of such works the better. They aid morality, society, Christianity. The various characters are vigorously drawn and skillfully managed."

And this from The Philadelphia Daily News:

"A very readable book. It portrays city life in a sprightly, graphic and generally truthful manner, contrasting with considerable power the exciting and grotesque scenes of the great metropolis with the quiet stillness and comparative freedom from care peculiar to the country. We should not wonder if some of the characters in Violet proved real—particularly the "Benedike." However this may be, it contains types which will be readily recognized, and perhaps nearer home than the scene of the tale."

VIOLET is published complete in one 12mo. volume, containing 336 pages, beautifully bound in cloth gilt, price 75 cents; or in paper covers, price 50 cents. BUNCE & BROTHER, Publishers,

VARA; Or, THE CHILD OF ADOPTION. 12mo. Price $1.
"This is a beautiful volume. It commences by a sketch with a missionary family on one of the Pacific islands. Nature there had lavished her richest charms and the eye roamed, delighted with her scenes. But the abounding in all its forms and made that otherwise enchanting island repulsive to the Christian heart, and unsafe for training a young family of children in the ways of virtue and religion. Three devoted missionaries had three children; two of them died young, leaving but one survivor. The disconsolate father and mother loved this little daughter tenderly, and the more so, as she reported all of that little group which had existed, and was a source of so much joy in the distant lonely home. It cost them many a painful struggle to think of parting with little Vara, then ten years of age; but, after much reflection and prayer, they resolved to send her to America to be educated. A pious family on her arrival adopted her, and with them she lived and became a pious intelligent girl, full of charms, the delight of all who knew her. At length her father and mother visited America, and she married a pious, faithful missionary, and returned with them to their island home, and entered upon her toils with earnestness and usefulness. The whole sketch is full of interest, and teaches many impressive lessons from the nature and trials of missionary life. The book will be found profitable in every christian family."

I. HELD; Or, LIFE ON A FARM—(an illustrated edition of which has been published in England)—new and enlarged edition in press.
II. THE MASTER-BUILDER; Or, LIFE AND TRADE.
III. MERRIMAC; Or, LIFE AT THE LOOM.
NOTICES OF MERRIMAC.

"A new volume of the series of popular stories which have already raised a well deserved reputation for the author. * * In this volume the story alternates between the quaint old town of Salem—which Hawthorne has immortalized in one of his most powerful romances—and the bustling, busy, crowded, spinning and weaving City of Merrimac, the interior of which is portrayed with great freshness of coloring. As a picture of an important and unique phase of New-England life the work is very interesting, and can scarcely fail of popularity among the million. [Harper's Magazine.

"It professes to be a 'Tale,' but its details are as natural as real life. The work is extremely well written; * * interesting as a novel, while it is natural as every-day life." [Boston Traveller.

"Merrimack is a story which, by its simple pathos, and truthful sense to nature, will touch the heart of every reader. It is free from the heat tone of that odious stilted style of thought and diction characteristic of the majority of the novels with which the reading public are deluged." [N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"Its style is simple, lucid, manly and vigorous. Its contents are such as not only to please, but to make us greatly grateful of our Atlantic birth." [Philadelphia Bizarre.

"Without any meanwhile sentimentality, it describes the lights and shadows of factory life, betraying an intimate knowledge of the interior of a New-England factory village, and relating its daily routine with a spirit and naturalness that throw a charm around what would be deemed by many readers an unpromising subject." [N. Y. Tribune.

"Mr. Lee is engaged in presenting a cycle of scenes to illustrate life in the various lines in modern industry. Thus far he has been very successful. The present volume will be considered an improvement upon the others." [Rev. Thos. Starr King.

"It will be read with the keenest relish, and long remembered." [Philadelphia City Item.

"A sweet tale, full of feeling." [N. O. Daily Crescent.

"Another plain, straightforward, absorbing work, from a pen which before has added riches to our literature, and honor to him who wielded it." [Buffalo Express.

"His descriptions are often exceedingly beautiful, and he is successful in portraying character." [Hartford Times.

"It is written in a genial spirit, and abounds in humor." [N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.

"A good moral tone seems to pervade the work. It grows better as it advances, and the last few chapters are intensely interesting and deeply thrilling." [Puritan Recorder.

"Mr. Lee has employed his pen to the noble purpose of defending the cause of the poor and the friendless." [Christian Secretary.

"Merrimack is interesting and profitable. * * an admirable pure spirit, and commended by a pleasant style." [Christian Examiner.

"Mr. Lee's former Tales of Labor received the highest commendation from the religious press of all denominations, and they have been very popular with the reading community." [Chris. Freeman.

"The story is told in so attractive a manner, the influence of it in every respect is so good, that no one can read it without benefit." [Christian Register.

"It will find admiring readers in that class for whom it seems especially to have been written." [Christian Intelligencer.

"Probably no series of books, of the same class, ever issued in this country, is so strongly marked by a catholic spirit, tempered by all the graces of high-minded living, as the 'Tales of Labor.'" [Norfolk County (Mass.) Journal.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED VOLUME OF AMERICAN SCENERY.
THE VALLEY OF THE MISSISSIPPI.
Illustrated by a series of EIGHTY VIEWS taken on the spot, extending from the Gulf of Mexico to the Falls of St. Anthony, a distance of 2,200 miles. By H. Lewis, Landscape Painter, St. Louis, Mo.
The object of the present work is to give a condensed but complete history of the Valley of the Mississippi, its various towns and cities, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Falls of St. Anthony, a distance of 2,500 miles; the variety of scenery and products which latitude and climate produce; habits and customs of the aboriginal tribes, who still inhabit, and roam through the vast wilderness that skirts its appendages. The sketches have been taken on the spot by Mr. Lewis, who has resided more than twenty years in the Far West, at St. Louis, Mo., and is in all respects a most competent person to describe and illustrate a region so little known.
The publication of this work were executed at Dusseldorf in the finest style of tinted lithography, having all the appearance of highly finished water-color drawings.
The work will be published in twenty monthly numbers, each number containing four illustrations and from sixteen to twenty-four pages of letter-press, forming, when complete, a beautiful volume of eighty illustrations and 480 pages of reading matter.
