A Fashionable Novel by Lady Bulwer.
THE SCHOOL FOR HUSBANDS.
By Lady Bulwer,
Author of "The Peer's Daughter," "Behind the Scenes," &c.
Price 50 cents.
This is by far the best novel ever written by Lady Bulwer. It is a true picture of the Fashionable World—its pleasures and its follies. The characters are all drawn from real life, as the following extract from the preface will show:
"With regard to this present book of mine, were I publishing it in France, or even in any other country, I should be quite sure that the fidelity and exactitude with which I have stuck to my text, and represented my dramatis personæ, in their own words and deeds, would be fully comprehended, and therefore appreciated, whatever other demerits or merits the work might be found to possess; but in consideration of the profound and extensive ignorance of a certain set of the so-disant critics of England, I beg leave to state that every incident in this book is an historical fact, and that its only creations are, the Hawthouse Family—Rupert Singleton—and the introduction of Tom Pepys."

PARKYNS'S ADVENTURES in ABYSSINIA.—D. APPLETON & Co. publish on Wednesday
LIFE IN ABYSSINIA.
Being the personal narrative of an Englishman long resident in that country. By Mansfield Parkyns, Esq. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 12mo. Price $2 50.
"When these handsome volumes shall have been as generally read as they deserve to be, the tide of enterprising travel set strongly in the direction of Abyssinia, persons starting for those parts will ask for Parkyns' Handbook, just as tenderfoot tourists who content themselves with an amble through Andalusia, inquire for Ford's." That many such starts will be made, we cannot doubt; after reading the book in which are so vividly described the charms of the pleasant land of Negus, the delight of the sojourner thither, and of the abode there. Never was anything so tempting. Of one thing we are convinced, and that is that few that take up Life in Abyssinia will lay it down without reading it through, and without exclaiming when they come to the end, 'what an amusing book this is, and what an agreeable savage is Mansfield Parkyns.'" [Blackwood's Magazine.
"Mr. Mansfield Parkyns is no tourist, but a genuine traveler, and combines in his own person something of each of its memorable men. In acquaintance with Eastern language and manners, he is a Burckhardt; his liking for natural history and sensibility as a collector, reminds us of Waterton; while in his passion for the chase, and occasional introduction of elephants, giraffes and lions, he bears an obvious liking to Campbell and Gordon Cumming. To all this we add, that in common with the other varieties of the species, he shows that physical attribute of their type, the intrepidity of Bruce."

SECOND SERIES OF FERN LEAVES.
Composed of entirely new matter.
One elegant 12mo. with 6 illustrations. Price $1 25.
Judge of the intrinsic merit of the letter by the past.
The sale in this country has been 80,000 copies of the FIRST SERIES FERN LEAVES and LITTLE FERNS, and in England 52,000 copies—showing the astonishing sale of 125,000 copies of these two works within six months average time of their first publication; and from the intrinsic superiority of the SECOND SERIES,
and the avidity of the public to possess it, we do not doubt that it will reach an equal, or even a more extended sale than the first.
Will be published on THURSDAY MORNING, 25th inst., by MILLER, ORTON & MULLIGAN, and for sale in New-York by J. C. DERBY, No. 8 Park-place.
The trade supplied at publisher's prices. Orders solicited.

BEHIND THE SCENES:
BY LADY BULWER LYTTON,
Author of "Cheveley," &c., &c.
"Mr. Disraeli is cleverly characterized under the name of Beaumont, by and other political characters whom it is easy to recognize. The work is very lively, very brilliant, and wonderful ability is displayed in almost every page."
Lady Bulwer has written another novel at her husband, called "Behind the Scenes," in which the men who owns her figures as a Mr. Ferars, and is described as a mild block of vice, garnished with villany, veneered with virtue and highly varnished with lyre-cy.
"It is a long time since we have had anything in the way of fiction and a desideratum so desirable at this enjoyable season, is supplied by Riker, Thorne & Co., who, having purchased the advance sheets of Lady Bulwer's last production, have brought it out in a truly readable style. And among the characters portrayed are Disraeli, Dickens, and, of course, the authors husband."

DELISSER'S INTEREST AND AVERAGE TABLES. A new method, combining Accuracy, Rapidity and Simplicity, by which Interest on any amount for any period from one day to one year, "can be found at a glance," and for Averaging Accounts in a shorter time and with fewer figures than by any other system.
To Accountants and Merchants, this work will be invaluable.
OPINIONS OF EMINENT MERCHANTS, &c.
NEW-YORK, Wednesday, March 7, 1854.
We, the undersigned, have examined the specimens of DELISSER'S INTEREST AND AVERAGE TABLES, and are of opinion that from the simplicity of their arrangement, showing at a glance the Interest and Average of an account, they FAR SURPASS ALL OTHER WORKS of the kind ever before offered to the public.
For the saving of a vast amount of labor, and from the SIMPLICITY, ACCURACY and RAPIDITY with which calculations may be worked out, it is most invaluable.
We therefore cordially recommend it to all Merchants and Accountants, as a work indispensable to the Counting Room:

LETTER FROM Geo. R. Perkins, LL.D., Late Principal and Professor of Mathematics in the N. Y. State Normal School, and Author of "Perkins's Mathematical Series":
R. L. DELISSER, Esq.—Dear Sir: I have attentively examined specimen pages of Delisser's Interest and Average Tables. The arrangement of the Tables is new, and for simplicity and neatness of execution deserves much credit upon their author.
What most highly recommends these Tables is their use in Averaging Accounts.
For all practical purposes an account may be averaged by these Tables in far less time than by any other method with which I am acquainted.
This will no doubt prove a popular work with accountants.

THE WHIMSICAL WOMAN. By Emilie F. Carlen. 1 vol. 12mo. 75c. and 50c.
"A story of Swedish domestic life, by one who has only become known to American readers to be loved and praised."
[N. Y. Courier and Enquirer.
"Mrs. Carlen is far superior to Miss Bremer."
[N. Y. Tribune.
"Her tales are refreshingly original—being free alike from hackneyed incident and style of narration." [Palladium.
"A beauty of style and richness of sentiment pervade all of Mrs. Carlen's writings."
"She excels in those home scenes, the pure happiness of which woman alone truly appreciates, and woman alone can truthfully paint." [Protestant Churchman.
"As a well-written work of a talented authoress and a pure-minded woman, this work deserves an extensive circulation."
[Palladium.
"The story of 'Whimsical Woman' will add to Mrs. Carlen's reputation." [Boston Transcript.
"She opens the door of a Swedish home and makes the reader familiar with the manners and customs of its inmates, and in all her descriptions there is a simplicity and naturalness which are quite captivating." [Boston Traveller.
