Summer Retreats.

ALPINE HOUSE, WHITE MOUNTAINS, GORHAM, N. H.—The shortest, cheapest and pleasantest route to the White Mountains is by way of Portland, Maine, and from thence by the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railroad to Gorham, N. H.
The ALPINE HOUSE, on the line of the Railroad, known also as The White Mountain Station House, is now OPEN for the RECEPTION of COMPANY, and the present proprietor, who has been connected with the House from the first, will spare no pains to sustain the reputation it has acquired.
A new Bridle Path has been made the present season to the summit of Mount Washington, and travelers can now make the ascent of the Mountain from the House with more convenience than from any other point. Goodnesses and experienced guides will be reported. A good bridle path leads from this House to the top of Mount Moriah, the view from which is pronounced by many travelers superior to that from Mount Washington itself.
Cars leave Montreal every morning for this House, arriving at Gorham in the afternoon of the same day.
Persons can now pass the night on the summit of Mount Washington and find good accommodations. S. R. HITCHCOCK.
