Dr. Sanborn's Medicated Lung Vapor is justly considered the first and only remedy ever discovered which possesses the power of dissolving Tubercles in the Lungs. This object is accomplished from being brought into contact with the air cells of the Lungs, by being inhaled or breathed. No medicine of any kind is required to be given into the stomach, for all drugs thus given are necessarily nauseating and disgusting, destroying the patient's appetite, weakening the vital powers, and tend to hasten the disease to a more rapid termination. The Lung Vapor effects a radical cure of incipient Consumption, by destroying the cause (tubercles) of the disease, and does not act as a simple palliative of symptoms, as all remedies must act given into the stomach. Dr Sanborn can be consulted daily, at New-York Lung Institute, No 6 Bond-st., where Diseases of the Lungs and Throat are detected with unerring certainty, and treated exclusively by Inhalation of Medicated Vapor.
For sale also at A. B. & D. Sands', A. V. Clickener & Co.'s, Chas. Rigg's, Thomas T. Green's, N. Y.; and Mrs. Hays', Brooklyn, also, at No. 114 Chambers-st., and No. 6 Bond-st. Price, $5 each package, with advice. Sent free by express, to any part of the U. S.

A POPULAR NEW STORY FOR SUMMER READING.
TICKNOR & FIELDS
have recently published
WENSLEY:
A STORY WITHOUT A MORAL.
In 1 vol. 16mo. Price 75 cents.
This admirable story has received the highest recommendation from the Press. A few extracts from the notices are given below:
From J. G. Whittier.
"Wensley," a story without a moral, is, we think, the most successful attempt which has yet been made to portray the peculiar traits of New England society of the past generation. The old-school Clergyman and his man Jasper are evidently pictures from life, and are drawn with skill, truthfulness and genial humor. It seems to us the most readable book of the kind which has appeared since Hawthorne's Blithedale Romance.
From the Mirror.
The readers of Putnam's Magazine will be glad to see what appeared in its first numbers with the above heading collected together and printed and bound in neat and beautiful style. It is a delightful book; the quaint humor and life-like character-drawing that pervade it being unequaled by anything that has been set in types in book form for many years.
From the Charleston News.
The readers of Putnam's Monthly cannot fail to recall with pleasure this piquant and delightful story, the happiest picture of New England life (with the exception of the inimitable tales of Hawthorne) that we have read. It appears in a neat and readable form, and will no doubt meet with excellent success.
From the New York Albion.
The readers of Putnam's Magazine, in which this charming story first appeared, will need no recommendation from us to renew their acquaintance with an old friend in a new form. To the rest of the world we can only say, buy a copy of "Wensley" at once. It is the pleasantest essay the best New England tale, and the most complete little book of its class, written in a long time.
From the Boston Atlas.
This story originally appeared in the numbers of Putnam's Monthly, and to those who read it there it is not necessary to say a word in its favor. But there are many others who were not so fortunate, and to all such we would commend it heartily, as one of the freshest and most original productions of the day. There is a directness, a simplicity, or utter absence of anything like pretense about the style, coupled with a quiet humor, which makes it as refreshing as it is rare.—The characters are admirably drawn.
From the Transcript.
This is decidedly one of the clever-est books of its class published for many a day. It may be styled a novelette in the form of an autobiography. It is entertaining, piquant and spicy, written in an off-hand style. The character of Mr. Bulkley and his man Jasper are drawn with the skill of an artist, while the serious portion of the work is narrated in a highly graphic manner. Altogether, it is a most agreeable book of fiction. The publishers are entitled to much credit in presenting it to the public in this permanent and attractive form. Thousands will now read it who would never have done so, scattered as it was through a whole volume of Putnam's Magazine.

"This work will have a great sale and be extensively useful. It should and will be read by working men, men who, while they must labor with their hands, still have good minds and love books and knowledge; and it will do not a little, to encourage such persons and open to them the way and motives to self-education. Let all such look at Hugh Miller, so recently unknown, but now a great and honored name, as he appears in the frontispiece to this volume, in his working garb, and with the implements of toil in his hands."

"The most Charming Novel of the Year."
PUBLISHED THIS MORNING,
AGATHA BEAUFORT: Or,
FAMILY PRIDE.
By the author of "Pique," &c., &c.
Forming the Seventh Volume of the Library of Standard Novels. Elegantly illustrated, and beautifully bound in muslin, 75 cents; neatly bound in paper, 50 cents.
This powerful work is of a most extraordinary character. The story, strange as is the plot on which it is founded, is most impressive and replete with interest of the deepest kind. Its moral, the empty heartlessness of the world-be great, with their false pride, is worked out with a cynical power rarely surpassed. Its characters are all drawn with a master hand—original, yet true to nature, and artistically grouped. The style is graphic and spirited, the execution vigorous, and the sentiment replete with profound thought and wisdom. We can earnestly recommend it as an incomparable panorama of life in all its various phases, such as life seen by the true philosopher and philanthropist. The story is sustained with an absorbing interest from the first to the last page; it will be read with avidity by all classes, and must prove the most original and attractive novel of the year. This charming work has been received by the English and American journals with an enthusiasm rarely equaled. We append a few brief extracts:
"One of the purest and most elevated works of fiction that has been issued for years. By a carefully drawn and eminently natural series of portraitures, it presents the entire panorama of pride, from its inception to its consequences. It deals with its effects, and social evil, and deals fairly and soberly." [Buffalo Express.
"No volume of the series is more attractive than the one under notice. 'Agatha Beaufort' is remarkable for the intricacy of its plot, the variety of characters introduced, and the skill with which each is drawn. It is a book in which the more one reads the more he is interested." [Commercial Advertiser.
"Agatha Beaufort is acknowledged the most extraordinary work of the series, having received the highest commendations of the London press, as the most attractive and brilliant work of the season. It is a masterly work of fiction, pure and high toned." [Boston Evening Transcript.
"It is considered by critics one of the most attractive books of the season. Abounding with powerful delineations of character and admirable scenes, written in a style of much vigor, it is assigned a high place among modern works of fiction." [Richmond Daily Dispatch.
"A work of rare merit. Altogether, considering the powerful delineations of character, and the admirably grouped and often splendidly dramatic scenes with which it abounds, and its high artistic finish, this romance will take a distinguished place among the novels of the season." [The Athenæum.
The encomiums it has received from leading literary journals warrants us in saying that it is one of the best novels of the season. Its powerful delineation of family pride should insure it a wide circulation." [Philadelphia Evening Register.
"Free from all objection on moral accounts, and meritorious in a literary point of view." [The Evangelist.
"This charming work, which may proudly take its place among the highest-toned and purest fictions of our day, speaks to us in a voice which cannot easily pass away from our memories." [Literary Gazette.
"A very brilliant and attractive work. It is a picture, true to the life, of the one great weakness which marks leading families. Its characters are life-like, feeling genuine expression pervades, and the style elegant." [Oswego Times and Journal.
"One of the most attractive and brilliant works of the season, distinguished alike for its powerful delineations of character, its dramatic scenes and its high artistic finish." [Buffalo Republic.
"A well told tale of remarkable interest. The characters are powerfully delineated, and the dramatic arrangement is perfect. It is earnest, eloquent, charitable and kindly in its tone, vigorous and full of ripe thought and intellectual fire." [New-Bedford Eve. Standard.
"No one can read this book and not be charmed with its style, and instructed and refreshed by its lessons. The story is a capital one—full of interest and novelty, and the pride of family is nobly portrayed." [Phil. City Item.
"Agatha Beaufort is confessedly one of the most attractive and brilliant works of the season. It has elicited the warmest commendations of the London critics, and is in every respect a first-class work of fiction." [Richmond Evening Bulletin.
"The best written and most thrilling work of fiction that has recently appeared. A work of absorbing interest from the commencement to its close." [Trenton State Gazette.
"This powerful work has created a great sensation in England, and is pronounced superior to any other novel which has appeared since 'Jane Eyre.' A more vivid picture of various phases of society has not been painted since 'Vivian Grey' first dazzled and confounded the world." [Fredonia Advertiser.
"One of the most attractive works of the season, distinguished for its life-like portraits of character, with its genuine feeling, its perfect expression, and vigorous but elegant style, and its natural development of a powerfully conceived plot of high moral and dramatic interest." [Ontario Messenger.
"The work is an attractive one. The plot is a strange one, but is evolved skilfully and many passages indicate much dramatic power." [Bridgeport Weekly Standard.
"The work is attractive for its graceful but nervous style, life-like portraits of character, exhibitions of genuine feeling and natural development of a well conceived plot of high moral and dramatic interest." [Bangor Democrat.
"This is one of the most captivating works of the series, and as it justly is ranked by The London Literary Gazette, may proudly take its place among the highest toned and purest fictions of our day." [Norwalk Gazette.
"Very interesting, full of incidents, and of a high moral tone." [Poughkeepsie Eagle.
"This work has as a great run in England, and is confessedly one of the most attractive books of the season." [Dover Inquirer.
"It is one of the most attractive of the series, a delineation of the leading besetting sin of poor human nature." [Bangor Daily Mercury.
"A graphic and pleasant fiction. With much brilliancy of style, artistic skill in life-portraiture, and great creative powers in the development of plot." [The Phila. Sun.
"The whole work is executed with dramatic power and skill. Portions of it are rarely equalled in thrilling interest." [National Egis.
"A graphic and pleasant story, brilliant and artistic in its portraiture of life." [The People's Organ.
"It is one of the most attractive works that has been issued the present season. For beauty of style, life-like portraits of character, and high moral tone, the work has rarely an equal." [Western Vermont Journal.
