FIFTH RHODE ISLAND INDUSTRIAL FAIR.—The Rhode Island Society for the encouragement of DOMESTIC INDUSTRY, hold their Annual Fair in Providence, in the spacious Railroad Hall, from the 12th to the 16th September next.
In addition to the usual display on such occasions, extra efforts have been made to bring together all the various styles of goods, each as it is ordinarily sent to market.
The manufacture is of nearly all the goods in the State and in vicinity, will then and there be assembled, or within call, affording an opportunity to purchasers, from abroad, to buy at reduced rates, as a long list of charges may be discounted in their favor.
Commission merchants can meet their correspondents, and new engagements might be formed with other parties.
STEPHEN H. SMITH, Secretary.

RHODE ISLAND INDUSTRIAL FAIR.—The Annual Rhode Island Industrial Fair, which opens on the 12th, will not close until the 30th inst., so far as respects the exhibition of Prints and Mill Manufacturers generally.
A competent merchant will attend to all entries, which are open to the public in that department by numbers only, and keep a corresponding private record of the names of contributors for reference. He will act for the whole time, under advice, as broker between owners, agents and purchasers.
The exhibition of Prints, Cotton and Woolen Goods is open to manufacturers out of the State. They are solicited to avail themselves of this occasion to display their fabrics.

THE ECLECTIC DISPENSATORY OF THE UNITED STATES.
BY JOHN KING, M. D., and ROBERT S. NEWTON, M. D.
Authorized by the Eclectic National Medical Convention, New Edition, Revised and Enlarged, forming a volume of 1,000 pages, at the extremely low price of $2 50.
"This work embracing the whole of the original publication, with the addition of a large number of new preparations, formulæ, &c., will be ready about the 1st of October. It will also contain the new concentrated preparations, with their full action upon the system and the diseases to which they are applicable, thus bringing the work down to the present time. One great object aimed at in this edition is to preserve the uniformity of the officinal preparations, which was the intention of the Convention which authorized and adopted the first edition. The appendixes and index will be copious and complete. No pains will be spared to render this edition entirely complete, and adapted to the wants of the profession; and its price has been placed at so low a rate as to place it within the reach of every practitioner and student of Eclecticism."
Recently Published.
THE ECLECTIC PRACTICE OF MEDICINE. By Wm. Byrd Powell, M. D. and R. S. NEWTON, M. D. One large 8vo. vol.; price, $4 50.
"Book First is occupied in briefly investigating the physiological and pathological relations of the cerebellum, and an exposé of the human temperaments; and as far as our own limited knowledge of these subjects extends, we think they have been handled in a masterly manner. This part of the work will be perused with much interest. * * The interest of Book First is by no means lost in Book Second, which presents to us 'physiological considerations in relation to parents and the treatment of children.' An investigation is entered into of the parental relations to children, embracing in its scope the important and unsettled points of 'marriage eligibility,' parental constitution,' 'improper marriages,' 'health of parents,' &c., together with the duties necessary to the child. * * The remainder of the work, consisting of Books Three and Four, is chiefly occupied with the natural history, pathology and treatment of disease. * * This work is a richly deserving one. * * We look upon it as one not to be passed by lightly, and which we trust will be found in the library of every medical man." *

LIVES OF THE CHIEF JUSTICES OF THE UNITED STATES. By G. Van Santvoord. 1 vol. 8vo., with a Portrait.
"The work is ably, faithfully, impartially and clearly written. It is a valuable acquisition to the library of any man, and deserves the patronage of the public." [Hartford Courant.
"Mr. Van S. has brought out in this volume some of the most important facts in the history of these illustrious jurists—his style is concise and vigorous * * * * The book should have a place in the library of every intelligent citizen." [Troy Times.
"These Biographies contain much that is new, valuable and interesting in regard to the private histories and public services of these worties, and which make this volume a most valuable contribution to our present stock of American biography. They are written in an impartial, candid spirit, free from political or other prejudices, and manifest alike a commendable industry in the collection of its materials, and a successful discrimination in their arrangement." [Boston Atlas.
"This volume deserves a place in the library of every American lover of general literature, as well as of every lawyer." [Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.
"This work is one that should be in every library, and read by everybody." [Rochester Advertiser.
